BELGIUM.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 12 | Lord Chancellor | Aug. 15, 1876 | Memorandum on Bourdiol's extradition. Surrender by England to Belgium, then by Belgium to France. Contrary to Extradition Act of 1870, but not contrary to terms of Treaty with Belgium | 8 |

BRAZIL.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 13 | Law Officers | Mar. 15, 1876 | Queen Insurance Company. Refusal of Brazil to compensate Messrs. Taylor and Lyde, the agents. No further steps should be taken | 9 |
| 14 | Law Officers | 18, | Case of the "Liguria." Brazilian law as to embargo on British vessels. "Liguria" not having been arrested, no further notice need be taken. (Opinion of Brazilian jurist.) | 10 |
| 15 | Law Officers | May 18, | Ceará Water Company. Approving proposed answer to. Municipal rules for insuring purity of water are not a breach of contract. Diplomatic action can only be had recourse to when local Tribunals have been appealed to in vain(Draft of proposed answer annexed.) | 10 |
| 16 | Law Officers | June 16, | Exterior crimes against Brazil. In case of necessity, Her Majesty's Government will protect British subjects from the operation of the Brazilian law | 11 |
| 17 | Law Officers | 29, | Tax on British hospital at Pernambuco. Depends on Brazilian law. Should not be resisted, no further claim being made since Law of 1873. As to asking for remission as an act of grace | 12 |
| 18 | Law Officers | July 25, | Exterior crimes against Brazil. Reply to Brazilian argument. Treaties are only binding on contracting parties. French law is territorial. Municipal laws are no evidence of international law. Acts committed beyond the territory cannot endanger security of the State. Cannot admit the arguments of Brazilian Minister. Correspondence with France in 1851-52 on a similar matter should be referred to | 12 |

CENTRAL AMERICA.

| 19 | Law Officers | Mar. 16, 1876 | Bombardment of Omoa. Vice-Consul Debrot has not established his claim to British nationality | 14 |
| 20 | Law Officers | July 10, | Guatemalan Decree prohibiting contraband of war from entering ports of Salvador. Guatemala may seize contraband of war in transit to enemy's ports without establishing a blockade | 14 |

CHINA.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 21 | Law Officers | June 15, 1876 | Mr. Saur's claim. Alleged destruction of a banker's order for 5,000 taels, said to have been destroyed in the fire at Her Majesty's Consulate at Shanghae. He has not made out his case, and his claim to compensation cannot be maintained | 15 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 22 | Law Officers | July 7, 1876 | Approving draft Order in Council abolishing certain fees in China and Japan(For Order in Council, as issued, see Confidential Paper, No. 2912.) | 15 |
| 23 | Law Officers | 31, | Vessels of war purchased in England for Chinese Government. About to leave under Chinese flag. Discipline is not affected by ex-territorial Treaty or by any Act of Parliament. Persons on board are amenable to Chinese law | 16 |

DOMINICA.

| 24 | Law Officers | July 15, 1876 | Dominican law. Arms and munitions of war. Confiscation of vessels is contrary to International law, and should not be suffered by Her Majesty's Government in the case of British vessels | 16 |

EGYPT.

| 27 | Law Officers | Aug. 9, | New Court of Appeal. Daïra bonds. Judgment against Khedive. Opinion divided as to validity of Judgment as against Khedive's Decree. If Decree is an attack on rights acquired by foreigners, it is a breach of compact | 18 |
| 28 | Lord Chancellor | 15, | Conflict between Khedive and the new Tribunals (Daïra bonds). Khedive's Decree is an act of administration, and comes under judgment of the Court. Powers should unite in protest | 19 |
| 29 | Lord Chancellor | Oct. 9, | Suez Canal Company. Right of voting. Agrees with Law Officers, &c. Egyptian memorandum respecting Tribunals is irrelevant. Retains opinion already expressed | 19 |
| 30 | Attorney and Solicitor-General | Nov. 6, | Conflict between Khedive and the new Tribunals. The Khedive has not violated any international engagement. Tribunals have no power to decide limits of Khedive's sovereignty or to refuse to recognize validity of Decrees. Cannot agree with Dr. Deane | 20 |
| 31 | Dr. Deane | 6, | Conflict between Khedive and the new Tribunals. Dissent from Law Officers' opinion. The Tribunals are founded upon Treaties, and Khedive cannot modify their powers without consent of Contracting Parties. Suggests a compromise | 22 |

FRANCE.

| 32 | Law Officers | Mar. 14, 1876 | Joseph Gridley. Trial at Brest for piracy. Not entitled to compensation, but case may be brought before French Government | 24 |
| 33 | Law Officers | 16, | Liability of British subjects in France to military requisitions (as to supplying Returns of horses and mules in their possession). British subjects are not exempt from making such Returns | 24 |

| 34 | Law Officers | Mar. 18, 1876 | Privilege of mail-packets. Arrest of French steamer "Ville de Brest" when going to assistance of postal-steamer "Amérique." Contrary to stipulations of Postal Treaty. Money paid should be returned | 25 |
| 35 | Law Officers | May 16, | Privileges of mail-packets. Arrest of "Ville de Brest." French contract should be examined, to ascertain whether she comes within the meaning of Article V of Postal Convention | 26 |
| 36 | Law Officers | 18, | Channel Tunnel. Remarks on Protocol of meeting of Commission. Legislation necessary, and a Treaty with France. Proposed responsibility of Government. As to jurisdiction over offences previous to opening of the line(Preceded by draft to Law Officers.) | 27 |
| 37 | Law Officers | July 12, | Channel Tunnel. Jurisdiction over offences before opening of the line. Provision should be made for by England, not by contract between the two countries | 28 |
| 38 | Law Officers | 12, | Powers of Pro-Consuls appointed by Consuls. Distinction between Pro-Consul and Acting Consul. The former cannot administer oaths without authority of Secretary of State | 28 |
| 39 | Law Officers | Aug. | Privileges of mail-packets. "Ville de Brest" does not come within meaning of the Postal Convention, and cannot be relieved from the security given on her behalf | 29 |
| 40 | Law Officers | 5, | Powers of Pro-Consuls appointed by Consuls. Cannot perform notarial acts. He derives no authority from Consul's appointment(See also No. 71, "Miscellaneous.") | 30 |
| 41 | Law Officers | 10, | Newfoundland fisheries. Rights of fisherman. Draft of proposed Convention would only add to the confusion already existing. What are the rights of the British and of the French? Proposed amendments | 30 |
| 42 | Law Officers | 14, | Mr. Lottin, born in England of French parents. Requests a British passport from Her Majesty's Embassy, Paris. Double nationality. Cannot have passport unless by French law he has ceased to be a French citizen | 32 |
| 43 | Law Officers | Oct. 9, | Claim of Pericador Toncador, an Indian, against executors of Madame Larichaudy, at Réunion, for 1,500 fr. As advantage has been taken of his ignorance, Her Majesty's Government may support his claim officiously | 33 |
| 44 | Law Officers | 14, | Newfoundland fisheries. Amended Article of draft Convention. Language is still ambiguous. Cannot suggest improvemement, having no local knowledge | 33 |
| 45 | Law Officers | Dec. 11, | Extradition Act of 1870. Powers of Governors of British Colonies under. The Governor must perform those acts which in this country are performed by police magistrates, and cannot depute colonial magistrates to perform them for him(Preceded by draft to Law Officers.) | 34 |

GERMANY (PRUSSIA, &c.).

| 46 | Law Officers | Mar. 27, 1876 | Imprisonment of Mr. Robshaw at Hamburgh, on charge of fraud, and subsequent release. His treatment was in accordance with law of Hamburgh Tribunals. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere | 35 |
| 47 | Law Officers | May 22, | Case of Mr. Whinney. His proceedings against a debtor at Hamburgh, and his liability to return goods seized from same debtor in another country, &c. He is liable by Hamburgh law. No room for diplomatic action | 36 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 48 | Law Officers | June 2, 1876 | Claim of the heirs of C. Bleichen upon Her Majesty's Government for capture of his vessel in 1807. No legal claim. Might create a mischievous precedent, if entertained | 36 |
| 49 | Law Officers | Nov. 28, | Case of the "Milo." Collision. Caution of 5,000*l.* ordered to be deposited. Prussian Tribunals must determine question. Her Majesty's Government cannot ask compensation for Messrs. Wilson | 37 |

GREECE.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 50 | Law Officers | Mar. 24, 1876 | Ionian bondholders. Rate of payment. Greek Decree cannot supersede Treaty engagements. Payment should be made in accordance with rate of exchange. Rights of bondholders may be submitted to Treaty Powers, and notice given to stop proceedings in Greek Tribunals | 37 |
| 51 | Law Officers | Apr. 11, | "Hylton Castle" collision case. Greek Courts are competent to try the case against the British vessel | 38 |
| 52 | Law Officers | May 27, | Ionian bondholders. Adhere to former Report (No. 50). Claim for interest may be referred to Treaty Powers | 39 |
| 53 | Law Officers | June 19, | "Hylton Castle" and "Agrigento." Collision case. Criminal proceedings. As to right of British Consul to be present, in virtue of "most-favoured-nation" clause. Treaty privileges are limited, but British Consul should claim to be present independent of the Treaty. Delay further Report, pending decision in similar case of the "Franconia" | 39 |
| 54 | Law Officers | July 8, | "Hylton Castle" collision case. As in the case of the "Franconia," the master should have every means of defence afforded him | 40 |

HAYTI.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 55 | Law Officers | May 6, 1876 | Haitian insurrection. Blockade of Jacmel. Complaint of Atlas Steam-ship Company. Blockade legal, but creates state of war, giving neutral rights, in which British subjects will be protected by Her Majesty's Government | 41 |
| 56 | Law Officers | 16, | Claim of Mrs. Maunder on Hayti. Considers her nationality established. She is entitled to British protection | 42 |

ITALY.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 57 | Law Officers | Mar. 27, 1876 | Answers to questions put by Her Majesty's Consul at Florence:—1, births of illegitimate children not to be registered in British Consulate; 2, Consular registration affords no proof of nationality | 42 |
| 57* | Law Officers | Apr. 7, | Decree of Divorce Court in case of Custentini v. Custentini. Consul at Florence may be informed that the petitioner may marry again according to law of England | 43 |
| 58 | Attorney-General | 10, | Deserter from 71st Highlanders taking refuge on board American vessel at Palermo. Reclaimed by American Consul. Surrender cannot be resisted | 43 |
| 59 | Law Officers | 11, | Prince Bandini's nationality. He cannot claim privileges under his Naturalization Act, not having complied with conditions respecting residence within United Kingdom | 44 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 60 | Lord Chancellor . | Apr. 27, 1876 | Agrees with Law Officers that Consuls should not register births of illegitimate children, and that registration affords no proof of nationality .. .. .. .. | 45 |
| 61 | Law Officers .. | Sept. 12, | Arrests of British subjects in Italy: Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill, Rev. D. Kay, and Messrs. Allies. Answer to Italian argument. If British subjects can bring actions against Italian Government for redress, diplomatic action not necessary. Doctrine that Government is not liable to be sued for compensation for acts of its agents, is untenable. In absence of local remedy, diplomatic action necessary. Subject to above, Her Majesty's Government need press case no further, but must come to an understanding as to what evidence of identity is required to be produced by British subjects .. .. .. .. .. | 45 |

JAPAN.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 105 | Law Officers | Sept. 12, 1876 | Seizure of the "Octavia." Spanish proposal to deliver her to Her Majesty's Government in deposit, pending decision of Spanish Courts. Such a proposal involves admission of Spanish jurisdiction. The owner, Mr. Cordova, could not recover vessel from British custody, her detention being an act of State. His consent not to do so would prevent third parties acting under Bankruptcy Law of Jamaica, &c. | 73 |
| 106 | Law Officers | Oct. 2, | Gibraltar waters. Limits within which vessels wrongfully captured may be retaken, &c. Recaptures may be made in British waters and captors detained. British, but not foreign, vessels may be recaptured on high seas; but neither in foreign waters. Captors cannot be detained out of British waters | 75 |
| 107 | Law Officers | 10, | British vessel "Amazona" at the Bahamas, with guns for Cuban insurgents. Reference to case of the "Salvador." Case comes under Foreign Enlistment Act, though Cubans are not "belligerents." "Amazona" cannot be treated as a pirate | 75 |
| 108 | Law Officers | 18, | Spanish vessel "Virgen del Carmen" captured by Spanish guarda-costa in Gibraltar waters, and recaptured by British authorities. Guarda-costa men on board, acting under superior orders, are not amenable to punishment by local Tribunals | 76 |
| 109 | Law Officers | 25, | German vessel "Marie Louise," captured in Sulu waters by Spanish man-of-war. Detention of Mr. Hodgkins. Her Majesty's Government may support his claim to compensation | 77 |

Temple, May 16, 1876.

My Lord,

Dahomey outrage.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence in print, from which we should learn the circumstances under which Commodore Hewett, the officer in command of Her Majesty's naval forces on the West Coast of Africa, had imposed a fine of 500 puncheons of oil or its equivalent in sterling (about 6,000*l.*) on the King of Dahomey for an outrage committed by the Dahomian authorities at Whydah on a British subject named Turnbull, the agent of Messrs. F. and A. Swanzy, a British firm established at that place.

That we should perceive that the Commodore had published a Notification, which would be found at page 10 of the accompanying papers, to the effect that if the fine was not paid by the 1st June next he would institute a blockade of the whole of the Dahomian coast, and would enforce it until the fine was paid.

Proposed blockade of Whydah.

That Lord Tenterden was also to inclose a copy of a letter addressed to the Admiralty, authorizing Commodore Hewett to establish a blockade of the Dahomian coast from the 1st July next in the event of the fine imposed on the King of Dahomey not having been paid by that date, and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that case into our consideration, and furnish your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion whether any and what notification should be given with regard to the blockade.

That a Memorandum on blockades, drawn up in the Foreign Office, was also inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Notice should be published in "Gazette" and communicated to foreign Governments. Date of blockade postponed.

That, in the peculiar circumstances of this case, we are of opinion that notice should be published in the "Gazette" to the effect that Her Majesty's Government has received a communication from the Commodore on the station that the coasts of Whydah will be blockaded on the 1st June next; Her Majesty's Government have sent orders to the Commodore and officers on the station that no blockade of the coast of Whydah shall be established till the 1st July next.

Notice to the same purport should be communicated, in our opinion, to the Ministers of foreign Governments.

Notice.

IT is hereby notified that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty having received a despatch from Commodore Sir W. Hewett, the officer in command of Her Majesty's Naval Forces on the West Coast of Africa, containing a declaration that on and after the 1st June next that portion of the sea-coast of the Kingdom of Dahomey comprised between the longitude of 1° 32′ west, and the longitude of 2° 35′ east, including the ports of Porto Seguro, Little Popo, Aghwey, Great Popo, Whydah, Godomy or Jackin, and Custannee or Appi Vista, would be placed in a state of blockade, Her Majesty's Government have given orders to the said Sir W. Hewett and the officers under his command that no blockade of the said coasts, or of any part thereof, shall be established till after the 30th day of June next.

My Lord,

Dahomey blockade.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 25th May ultimo, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 19th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that the notice of blockade of the coast of Dahomey prepared by us had been inserted in the "London Gazette" of the 23rd May; that he was, however, to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion whether a further and positive notification of blockade, to take effect from the 1st July next, should not also appear in the "Gazette," or whether the further notification should be delayed until Her Majesty's Government had received information of the actual establishment of the blockade.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No further notice necessary till actual establishment of blockade.

That in our opinion a further and positive notification of blockade, to take effect from the 1st July next, should not appear in the "Gazette," and the further notification should be delayed until Her Majesty's Government has received information of the actual establishment of the blockade.

My Lord,

Dahomey blockade. Exemptions for French vessels.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 8th instant, stating that the French Ambassador called at the Foreign Office on the 24th April, and in the course of a conversation, which was recorded in the inclosed draft of a despatch to Mr. Adams, Her Majesty's Minister at Paris, stated that he was instructed to ask that consideration might be given to French shipping interests in respect of the proposed blockade of the coast of Dahomey.

That the views of the French Government on the matter were contained in the inclosed note, subsequently received from the Marquis d'Harcourt, and that he (Mr. Lister) was directed by your Lordship to request our opinion at our early convenience whether the inclosed draft of a reply which your Lordship proposed to his Excellency would be a right and proper answer to make to the request of the French Government.

That, for convenience of reference, Mr. Lister was further to inclose a Memorandum drawn in the Foreign Office respecting certain points alluded to in the note of the French Ambassador of the 27th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approving draft reply to French Ambassador, declining to grant.

That the reply which your Lordship proposes to address to the Marquis d'Harcourt is, in our opinion, a right and proper answer to make to the French Government.

We suggest, however, the addition, after the word "at," for the sake of clearness, of the words "Commodore Hewett" in page 2, line 5, of the draft, and the omission of the word "it," page 6, line 8, of the draft, and substitution for "it" of the words "such blockade."

Annex to No. 4.

The Earl of Derby to the Marquis d'Harcourt.

Foreign Office, June 16, 1876.

M. l'Ambassadeur,

I HAVE had the honour to receive your Excellency's communication of the 27th ultimo, relative to the blockade which Her Majesty's Government propose to establish on the coast of Dahomey, and from the provisions of which your Excellency requests that, if possible, favourable exception may be made in behalf of the French commercial marine, whose interests are threatened by the proposed blockade.

I would beg leave, in the first place, to call your Excellency's attention to the circumstances under which the determination to establish the blockade was arrived at. Commodore Hewett, the Senior Naval Officer of Her Majesty's forces on the West Coast of Africa, finding that the King of Dahomey declined to pay a fine which had been imposed upon him for an outrage committed on a British subject, gave notice on the 4th March last of his intention to establish a blockade on the 1st instant. This notification allowed the King a period of nearly three months for the payment of the fine imposed upon him, and it also afforded a reasonable interval for the firms trading to that part of the coast to make suitable arrangements for the future.

But with the view to cause as little injury as possible to commercial interests, and to afford additional time to the King to pay the fine if he should be disposed to do so, Her Majesty's Government, on being informed of the decision thus arrived at by Commodore Hewett, lost no time in sending him instructions to delay the blockade until after the 30th instant, and I trust that your Excellency will recognize in this further delay in the enforcement of the blockade the earnest desire of Her Majesty's Government to mitigate, as far as lies in their power, the severity of the measures which, in the interests of British subjects, they have been compelled to take on this occasion.

A formal notification respecting the blockade has been inserted in the "Gazette" and communicated to the Representatives of foreign Powers in London, and it is probable that any alteration of these arrangements, in the sense of further deferring the enforcement of the blockade, would now be productive of as much inconvenience as the actual establishment of the blockade at the date notified, and Her Majesty's Government would not, therefore, feel themselves justified in making any further concession as to the date at which it is to be enforced.

Your Excellency will also perceive that it would be out of the power of Her Majesty's Government to grant any exceptional privileges in favour of French vessels in regard to this matter, since, the validity of the blockade depending on its strict and impartial enforcement, such blockade would be de facto vitiated by any permission to foreign vessels to escape from its operation.

I have, &c.

Dahomey blockade.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the proposed blockade of the coast of Dahomey, and more especially to our letter of the 19th May last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Admiralty respecting an error in the notification of the intended blockade, which was inserted in the "London Gazette" of the 23rd May last.

Error in notice, as to its extent.

That that notification described the line of coast to be blockaded as "that portion of the sea-coast of the King of Dahomey comprised between the longitude of 1° 32′ west, and the longitude of 2° 35′ east," whereas it would be seen that the blockade should be described as commencing at 1° 32′ east longitude, since it would otherwise extend along the British line of coast from Elmina and Cape Coast Castle eastward.

That the previous papers relating to the question were also inclosed, and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take that correspondence into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the propriety of issuing an amended notice upon the subject in the "London Gazette."

That Lord Tenterden was further to request that we would furnish the draft of such fresh notification in the event of our considering it advisable that one should be published.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the error of 1° 32′ west for 1° 32′ east occurred originally in the official notice signed by Commodore Hewett, upon which the notice for the "London Gazette" was drafted.

No fresh notice necessary.

Since the notice was confined to a delay of the blockade till the 30th June, we think it is unnecessary to issue an amended notice at the present time.

Dahomey blockade.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th of July instant, stating that with reference to the letter from the Foreign Office of the 3rd instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letters from the Colonial Office and from the Admiralty relative to the blockade of the coast of Dahomey.

That although the towns of Porto Seguro, Little Popo, and Aghwey, to which allusion was made with reference to the objections against the blockade, were doubtless independent of Dahomey, as pointed out by the French authorities, his Lordship was to state that it would be useless to blockade Dahomey if those places were exempted from blockade, and your Lordship proposed, therefore, to inform both the Colonial Office and the Admiralty that the blockade should be enforced from the eastern limits of the British protected territory on the Gold Coast at Adaffi to the western limits of the British possessions at Lagos, in the neighbourhood of Badagry, which would include the three towns in question.

That as regards Cotenoo his Lordship was to add that until the receipt of the Marquis d'Harcourt's communication of the 9th of June last Her Majesty's Government had no notice whatever of the pretensions of the French to have acquired possession of that place; on the contrary, so recently as the 26th of December, 1875, a distinct disclaimer was received from the French Government of any pretension to sovereignty or protectorate over Porto Novo, of which Cotenoo was the shipping station.

That under these circumstances your Lordship proposed to ignore the claim put forward on the part of the French until such time as your Lordship shall have received proofs of the bona fides of the transaction, and even then, as Her Majesty's Government had been kept in ignorance of the alleged acquisition of the place by the French, your Lordship would not propose to acknowledge the claim until after the difficulty with Dahomey had been settled.

Lord Tenterden was, therefore, pleased to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the propriety of the communication which it was proposed to make to the Colonial Office and to the Admiralty, to the effect that the blockade should be enforced from the eastern limits of the British possessions on the Gold Coast to the western limits of the Lagos Lagoon, and thus include Porto Novo and Cotenoo, as well as Porto Seguro, Little Popo, and Aghwey.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Illegal to blockade ports independent of Dahomey, as Porto Seguro, &c.

That a blockade of a line of coast which would include ports that are independent of the enemy would be illegal, and we are, therefore, of opinion that the blockade suggested from the eastern limits of the British-protected territory to western limits of British possessions, which would include the independent towns of Porto Seguro, Little Popo, and Aghwey, would be illegal and cannot properly be established.

French claim to Porto Novo and Cotenoo. If well founded, neutrals may disregard a blockade of those ports.

As regards Cotenoo and the French claim over Porto Novo, we suggest for your Lordship's consideration that the question is one of fact and not of courtesy or want of good faith on the part of the French Government. If, therefore, Porto Novo or Cotenoo be under the sovereignty or protectorate of France, any neutral Power, for instance, the United States, or Germany, or Russia, would be justified in disregarding the blockade which purported to interfere with their trade to those places. And we are unable to advise your Lordship that you can properly ignore the claim put forward on the part of the French.

Dahomey blockade.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 27th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 12th ultimo, in relation to the blockade of Dahomey, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the following question:

That the portion of the coast comprised in the blockade which had been established from the 1st July included certain places not forming part of the territory of the King of Dahomey, and under ordinary circumstances the blockade of a neutral coast would, as we had pointed out, be illegal; but looking to the fact that the places in question are not under the Government or Dominion of any civilized State, your Lordship desired to be informed whether, in our opinion, the establishment of that blockade would not be held to constitute such a state of hostility between Her Majesty and the Chiefs of those places as would justify the exercise of belligerent rights by Her Majesty's naval forces against neutral vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Neutrals may object to blockade of independent coasts without just cause against them.

That in our opinion neutral nations might with reason object to a blockade of parts of the coast occupied by independent tribes, such blockade having for its object the pressure thus brought to bear on the King of Dahomey. We are, therefore, unable to advise your Lordship that a blockade of parts of the coasts as suggested in the letter of Sir Julian Pauncefote could properly be established without any just cause for the exercise of hostile rights against the tribes occupying those parts of the coasts.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received September 12.)

Temple, September 12, 1876.

My Lord,

Dahomey blockade.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 21st August ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying Rules which have been laid down by Commodore Sir William Hewett for enforcing the blockade of the coast of Dahomey, and that he was to request that we would take them into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

Sir Julian Pauncefote also stated that at the same time he was to request that we would be good enough to report whether we consider that the amended notice of blockade issued by Commodore Hewett on the 3rd July, of which a printed copy accompanied his letter, should be inserted in the "London Gazette," and, if so, that we would furnish the Foreign Office Department with a form of notification duly prepared for that purpose.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No objection to Rules, if no neutral or independent territory is blockaded.

That the Rules laid down by Commodore Sir W. Hewett for enforcing the blockade of the coast of Dahomey are, in our opinion, open to no objection, provided no neutral territory or territories independent of the King of Dahomey is made subject to the blockade.

Fresh notice for "Gazette."

An amended notice of blockade should, we think, be inserted in the "London Gazette," provided the limits in Sir W. Hewett's notice do not include any independent or neutral territory.

The notice of blockade may be as follows:—

It is hereby notified that on the day of that portion of the sea-coast of the Kingdom of Dahomey comprised within the longitude 1° 32′ east and the longitude of 2° 35′ east, including the ports tributary or otherwise, &c., was placed in a state of blockade, and that such blockade is and will be maintained by a competent force of Her Britannic Majesty's ships.

All measures, therefore, which are authorized by the law of nations and the respective Treaties between Her Britannic Majesty and the different neutral Powers will be enforced on behalf of Her Britannic Majesty against all vessels which may attempt to violate the blockade.

My Lord,

Dahomey blockade.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 12th ultimo, respecting the form for insertion in the "Gazette" of a notification of the actual establishment of the blockade of the coast of Dahomey, he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that, in view of certain circumstances connected with the detention of the European prisoners by the King, your Lordship deemed it expedient to suspend the insertion of the notice in the "Gazette" until the course of action to be pursued in regard to the continuation of the blockade had been finally decided upon in consultation with the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

Fresh notice in "Gazette" not being necessary for naval purposes,

That, as we should perceive from the inclosed letter, their Lordships now stated that the insertion of such a notice of blockade in the "Gazette" was not necessary for naval purposes, and that Mr. Lister was to request our opinion whether, looking to the state of the case generally (which would be gathered from the inclosed volume of printed correspondence), and to the length of time which had now elapsed since the actual enforcement of the blockade in the beginning of July, the insertion of such a notice was requisite or desirable for international purposes.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—it is not requisite for international purposes.

That, in our opinion, the insertion of a notice of the blockade is at this moment neither requisite nor desirable for international purposes.

My Lord,

London and River Plate Bank. Outrage of Rosario authorities upon, for refusal to lend them money.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the proceedings of the authorities at Rosario, the capital of the province of Santa Fé, Argentine Confederation, towards the branch of the London and River Plate Bank established in that city; and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship, with as little delay as possible, with our opinion upon the case.

That a summary of the acts complained of by the bank would be found in the letter from Mr. Smithers, the Manager, dated the 6th July, of which a printed copy was inclosed.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased, on the 19th day of July last, to forward to us the accompanying despatch, from Her Majesty's Consul at Rosario, to be taken into consideration in conjunction with the papers inclosed in his letter of the 12th July ultimo.

We were also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 22nd July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further paper relating to the proceedings of the Government of Santa Fé towards the Rosario branch of the London and River Plate Bank, and to request us to take it into consideration with the papers forwarded to us on the 12th July last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, assuming the facts to be correctly stated in the papers transmitted to us, the conduct of the authorities at Rosario was, if not justifiable by any misconduct on the part of the London and River Plate Bank, an outrage upon the rights of the British partners in that Bank, unwarranted by the usage and practice of civilized Governments, having for its only motive a spirit of revenge for the refusal by the Bank to lend a large sum of money, and rival interests of an unsuccessful Bank, supported by the Government of Santa Fé.

May demand explanation and redress.

Your Lordship may therefore, in our opinion, properly demand from the Government of the Argentine Confederation a full explanation of the proceedings of the authorities at Rosario; with a strong intimation that, if that explanation be not satisfactory, and ample redress made for the injurious acts committed against British subjects and British interests, Her Majesty's Government will be compelled to resort to further measures.

Temple, August 16, 1876.

My Lord,

London and River Plate Bank.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th August instant, stating that with reference to Lord Tenterden's letters of the 12th, 19th, 22nd, and 29th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres relative to the case of the Rosario Branch of the London and River Plate Bank (Mr. F. St. John, Nos. 62 and 63 of June 30), and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, together with those already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That since our first Report was drawn, the further papers transmitted by Sir Julian Pauncefote have been considered by us.

Pending legal proceedings, diplomatic action may be delayed; but representation may be made.

The Bank having taken legal proceedings, we are of opinion that, for the present, direct diplomatic action should not be employed. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres may, however, properly be instructed to state to the Argentine Minister for Foreign Affairs, that Her Majesty's Government expects that ample satisfaction will be made by the Argentine Government for the outrage and injury inflicted upon British subjects and British interests by the acts of that Government, in relation to the Rosario branch of the London and River Plate Bank.

Case of Bourdiol's extradition.

SOME papers on this subject were sent to me a short time ago by the Home Office, but at that time I had not before me the Treaty with Belgium, and my attention was called to the case with reference solely to the Act of 1870.

Surrender by England to Belgium, then by Belgium to France.

If the case depended merely on the Act of 1870, I should have thought that a surrender of Bourdiol to France was contrary to the spirit and letter of Sub-Section 2 of Section 3 of the Act, because, undoubtedly, in such a case, Bourdiol would be "detained" by Belgium for an offence committed prior to his surrender other than the extradition crime. He would be thus detained in order to and until his extradition to France, and he would be detained for an offence committed prior to his surrender to Belgium other than the extradition crime on which this country surrendered him.

In other words, if Bourdiol could, before he was surrendered to Belgium, have shown on a return to a writ of habeas corpus that Belgium intended and claimed the right, after she had punished him for the extradition offence, to detain him further and hand him over to France, I think the Judge might, having regard to Section 3 of the Statute of 1870, have discharged Bourdiol.

Contrary to Act of 1870, but not contrary to terms of Treaty with Belgium.

But this is not now the question. Bourdiol has been surrendered to and is now under the control of Belgium, and we cannot exact from Belgium anything more than is stipulated by the Treaty of 1872. This Treaty may not in its wording come up, as it ought to have done, to the Act of 1870, but that is no affair of the Belgian Government. They are entitled to stand on the wording of the Treaty. Now, the VIth Article of the Treaty merely provides that Bourdiol shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to England, "be triable or tried for any offence committed in the other country," that is to say, in Belgium, prior to the surrender, other than the particular offence on account of which he was surrendered.

Under this Belgium may say to us: "We adhere to every word of our engagement; we are not going to try Bourdiol for any other offence committed in Belgium; in fact, we are not going to try him for any other offence whatever; but, being in Belgium, he has become subject to our international engagements with France, and under these he is a person that we are bound to surrender to France."

I think if the Belgians take this view we cannot object. The result is not very satisfactory, because undoubtedly the Treaty, by departing from the words of the Act of 1870, has left a loophole by which the obvious purpose of the Act of 1870 is frustrated.

It may deserve consideration whether something should be done to remedy this for the future; but on the present occasion I do not see that we can interfere.

(Signed) CAIRNS.

My Lord,

"Queen" Insurance Company. Refusal of Brazil to compensate Taylor and Lyde.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th January last, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 27th August last relative to the case of the "Queen" Insurance Company in Brazil, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, inclosing copy and translation of the answer to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs to his note of the 24th May, which answer we would see was unfavourable to the claims to compensation of Messrs. Taylor and Lyde, the Agents of the Company.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take Mr. Drummond's despatch into our consideration, together with the former papers, which were sent therewith, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether these claims should be pressed further, or whether, as suggested in the Law Officers' above-mentioned Report, instructions should now be sent to Mr. Drummond to take no further steps in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

No further steps should be taken.

That we are still of opinion no further steps should be taken in this matter.

Case of the "Liguria." Brazilian law as to embargo on British vessels. Brazilian Jurist's opinion.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th December last, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 5th August last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro (Mr. Drummond, No. 157), forwarding the opinion of the Brazilian Jurist whom he had consulted in regard to the Brazilian law as regards embargo being placed on British vessels in Brazilian ports; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations we might have to make thereupon. Lord Tenterden was also pleased to add that the previous papers, respecting the intention of the Brazilian Government to place an embargo on the British vessel "Liguria," were returned to us therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

"Liguria" not being arrested, no notice need be taken.

That we have no observation to make upon the opinion of the Brazilian Jurist. But we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that, as the arrest of the "Liguria" did not take place, Mr. Drummond might properly be instructed to take no further notice of the case, beyond keeping, for future use, if the necessity should arise, the opinion of the Brazilian Jurist.

Annex to No. 15.

Lord Tenterden to the Ceará Water Company.

Foreign Office, May 23, 1876.

Sir,

WITH reference to my letter of the 4th December last, I am directed by the Earl of Derby to state to you that his Lordship has received, through Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro, a Report from the British Vice-Consul at Ceará, relative to your complaint against certain rules affecting your interests which have been passed by the Municipality of that town.

Municipal rules for insuring purity of water are not a breach of their contract. Diplomatic action can only be undertaken where there is a failure of justice on part of local Tribunals.

Lord Derby has had this Report under his consideration, together with the former papers, and, after consulting the Law Officers of the Crown, his Lordship is unable to see that there is anything in the terms of your contract to preclude the Municipality of Ceará from passing the rules of which you complain, those rules being framed, as it appears to Lord Derby, solely with a view to insure the purity of the water supplied by your Company, an object which a Municipality is clearly justified in seeking to attain.

I am to add that, in a case of the alleged violation of a contract entered into by a British Company, or by British subjects, for an undertaking in a foreign country, redress must always, in the first instance, be sought from the legal Tribunals of the country in which the undertaking is intended to be carried out, and that Her Majesty's Government can only interfere diplomatically when there has been a manifest failure of justice.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TENTERDEN.

And that he, Mr. Lister, was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence which was also inclosed, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro should be instructed to return to the note of the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs of the 2nd February last, copy and translation of which were inclosed in Mr. Drummond's No. 26 of the 20th February last.

My Lord,

Tax on British hospital at Pernambuco.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 2nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, together with the previous papers specified in the inclosed list, relative to the provincial Brazilian authorities for arrears of taxes on the British hospital at Pernambuco.

That as it would be necessary to send instructions to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to regulate his conduct in that case, he (Mr. Lister) was to request us to take those papers into our consideration, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Depends on Brazilian law.

Payment should not be resisted.

That the question in this case depends entirely upon Brazilian law, Imperial or provincial, or both; and, as the Brazilian authorities are probably acting under legal advice, and are, notwithstanding the opinion of Señor Fonseca, possibly rightly advised, and not likely to give way, and no further claim for the tax since the law of 1873 will be made; Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro may, in our opinion, properly be instructed to no longer resist payment of the amount claimed. Your Lordship will best judge how far Her Majesty's Government should ask for a return of the sum paid, as an act of grace, as suggested in the Memorandum of Mr. Cowper.

No. 18.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 26.)

Temple, July 25, 1876.

My Lord,

Exterior crimes against Brazil.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 30th ultimo (Lord Tenterden to Dr. Deane, 30th June, 1876), stating that some difficulty was found in acting on our Report of the 16th ultimo, relative to the Brazilian law as to trying foreigners for crimes against Brazil or Brazilians committed out of Brazilian jurisdiction, and that, as the matter was one of considerable importance, your Lordship thought it best to ask us, before acting on that Report, to be kind enough to explain our meaning rather more fully.

That the object of the Brazilian law was to enable Brazilian Courts to try persons other than Brazilians for offences committed beyond Brazilian jurisdiction, and that, in the Law Officers' Report of the 4th November, 1875, it was distinctly laid down that Her Majesty's Government should not allow this as far as British subjects were concerned.

But that in our Report we adopted a different wording. We said that, "should the necessity unfortunately arise, Her Majesty's Government will protect British subjects from the operations of laws attempted to be exercised beyond Brazilian jurisdiction."

That now the exercise of laws "beyond Brazilian jurisdiction" did not seem to your Lordship to be quite the same thing as the exercise in Brazilian jurisdiction of laws applicable to offences committed beyond that jurisdiction, and that your Lordship would, therefore, be glad to know whether, by the present Report, we intend to signify our adherence to the opinion expressed in the Law Officers' Report of the 4th November, 1875.

That, if that was the case, your Lordship would further ask us to be good enough to add to our Report some suggestions as to the arguments which should be employed in answering the last Brazilian note upon the subject (inclosure in Mr. Drummond's No. 26 of the 20th March, 1876). That that note, which was well and temperately expressed, cited in support of the Brazilian law, the example of France and of many other European States, and that your Lordship would like to have materials for enforcing by argument our assertion that Great Britain would protect British subjects against the operation of the law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Reply to Brazilian argument.

That we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that the reply to the Brazilian note may be as follows:—

That the note assumes that the municipal law of a particular State, adopted by some other Governments and carried out by Treaties or Conventions between two or more States, is sufficient to introduce and sanction a principle which shall govern the relations of all other Governments to each other, and to each other's subjects.

Treaties only bind Contracting Parties.

This assumption is unfounded; Treaties can bind only the contracting parties; and the provisions in Treaties, where such provisions introduce new rules, are exceptions to, rather than evidence or confirmation of, a previous general law.

The municipal law of any particular State, ex vi termini, by the reason of the thing, and the universal usage and practice of nations, cannot effect a change in the duties and obligations of other States, and introduce a new principle of international law.

The municipal law of France, upon which the Brazilian note relies, dates from the Code de Brumaire, year iv, Articles 12 and 13; and see Code d'Instruction Criminelle, Articles 5 and 6.

French law is territorial.

But previous to the Code de Brumaire, year iv, crimes committed beyond French territory were not punishable in France. In accordance with the law in England and in the United States, and the general law of nations, it was held in France that the "loi pénale" was territorial, and could not, in France, be brought to bear upon acts committed beyond the limits of France.—"Ortolan," "Cléments de Droit Pénal," s. 910.

Even French subjects were apparently not amenable to French criminal law before the municipal law of Brumaire, year iv.

The Brazilian note states quite accurately that several continental nations have adopted the principle of French law, and have enacted that foreigners found within their territory may be punished for crimes committed beyond the territory; in other words, have adopted the principle of the Forum deprehensionis.

Municipal laws no evidence of international law.

These enactments, however, have been chiefly introduced since 1830; and it is remarkable, as a proof that municipal laws are no evidence of international law, that some of these Governments have tried to induce the French Government to adopt even a wider and more stringent jurisdiction than that in the Code Criminel, but without effect. In fact, different Governments have enacted different provisions on the subject and extent of jurisdiction over crimes committed outside their territories; and these varying acts of separate Governments, instead of proving the consent and agreement relied upon by the Brazilian note, show a divergence of opinion as well as a variance in practice, which is not to be deemed in any sense a foundation for a general rule of law binding on other nations.

The Brazilian note contends that what is called the sacred right of defence sanctions the positive law of a State to punish a foreigner for certain acts committed by him beyond the territory of such State.

This argument proves too much, for a number of different circumstances might be, as occasion happened, considered to afford a ground for the application of this sacred right of defence at one time, or in one country, against a man guilty of the greatest possible crime; at another time, or in another country, against a man whose offence has been most trivial.

Acts committed beyond the territory cannot endanger security of the State.

The act committed beyond the territory cannot properly be said to endanger the peace or security of the State into whose territory the supposed offender comes.

And the crime is an infraction of the laws of the country where the offence happens, not against the laws of the country into which the criminal may subsequently go.

Moreover, the argument drawn from the sacred right of defence is without application with respect to England, since protection or redress would here be afforded to the Government and the subjects of Brazil in the event of any crime being committed in this country against either.

Cannot admit Brazilian principles.

We think that Mr. Drummond may be instructed to reply to the Brazilian note that Her Majesty's Government cannot, for these reasons, admit the principles upon which the Baron de Cotegife argues that the new law of Brazil is consistent with international usage.

And Mr. Drummond should further be instructed to observe that the Brazilian law does not purport to sanction the exercise of Brazilian law over a British subject out of Brazil, but only when the British subject is found in Brazil.

Correspondence with France in 1851-52.

Before any instructions are sent to Mr. Drummond upon this subject, we would suggest that some inquiry be made in the Foreign Office whether a correspondence did not pass between the French and English Governments in 1851-52 in reference to a projêt de loi upon a similar matter voted by the Corps Législatif the 4th June, 1852, and withdrawn by the French Government before the decision of the Senate.

This correspondence, if in existence, might throw light upon the views of Her Majesty's Government at the time, and give the means of replying to the Baron de Cotegife's observations upon the alleged silence hitherto kept by England.

We regret that, in the Report of the 16th June, 1875, the words "over crimes against Brazil and Brazilians committed" were by inadvertence omitted.

We adhere to the opinion expressed in the Report of the 4th November, 1875.

We were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd day of June last, in which he stated that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Central America, inclosing copy and translation of a Decree issued by the Government of Guatemala, by which the introduction into, and traffic in, the ports of Salvador is prohibited of certain articles specified in the Decree as contraband of war, and by which it is further declared that such articles, in the event of their capture, will be considered lawful prize, and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the Guatemalan Government has a legal right to prohibit by Decree the import of contraband of war into the ports of a State with which Guatemala is at war, without establishing and maintaining a regular and efficient blockade.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Guatemala may seize contraband of war in transit to enemy's ports without establishing a blockade.

That, assuming the existence of a state of war in which Guatemala is a belligerent, the Government of Guatemala has the legal right to seize articles contraband of war in transit to the ports of the other belligerents, without establishing and maintaining a regular and efficient blockade.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us herewith correspondence in regard to a claim put forward by Mr. Julius Saur, to be compensated for the loss of a banker's order for 5,000 taels, alleged to have been destroyed in the fire at Her Majesty's Consulate at Shanghae, and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Julius Saur in the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Mr. Julius Saur may, in our opinion, properly be answered, that the evidence furnished by himself, and which is contradicted by the evidence obtained from Shanghae, fails to show that the banker's order for 5,000 taels was placed in Her Majesty's Consulate at Shanghae, and subsequently destroyed there.

D. Campbell (Mr. Campbell, 13th July, 1876), the Agent in this country for the purchase of certain vessels of war for the Chinese Government, which were about to be dispatched to their destination under the Chinese flag, asking, with reference to the maintenance of discipline on board those vessels, how it would be affected by the exterritorial clauses of the Treaties with China; and that he was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what answer should be returned to Mr. Campbell upon that point.

My Lord,

Dominican law. Arms and munitions of war.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from the British Vice-Consul at Santo Domingo, inclosing copy of a law issued on the 2nd ultimo by the Dominican Government, prohibiting the introduction into that Republic of arms and munitions of war, and ordering the confiscation of all vessels discharging such articles, or having such articles on board under the circumstances specified in the said law.

That, as the terms of that law appeared to your Lordship to be extremely stringent, Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship at our early convenience with our opinion as to the steps that Her Majesty's Government should take with regard thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the first Article of the law issued by the Dominican Government is, in our opinion, within the competence of that Government.

Confiscation of vessels is contrary to international law.

The remaining Articles ordering the confiscation of all vessels carrying the forbidden articles are contrary to the rules and practices of civilized nations. (See "Ortolan," "Règles Internationales et Diplomatiques de la Mer, l. iii, c. vi; Phillimore International Law, 2nd ed., vol. iii., ss. 275, 277.) The general rule (perhaps subject to the exceptions mentioned in Phil., U.S.) is, that the only penalty the carrier of contraband of war is subject to is the loss of freight and expenses, as well as the contraband articles.

We, therefore, suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that a notice of the prohibition, as in Article 1 of the Law, may properly be published in the "London Gazette."

Confiscation of British vessels should not be suffered.

And the Government of St. Domingo may properly be informed that the proposed confiscation of vessels in Article 2 so far as British ships are concerned will not be suffered by Her Majesty's Government.

We assume as the basis of our opinion that a state of war exists.

My Lord,

British claims against Egypt. Rules of Procedure.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th April last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 14th March, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt (General Stanton, No. 134, 10th April, 1876), inclosing copies in French and Italian of the Rules of Procedure which have been drawn up by the Commissioners nominated for the settlement of outstanding claims between British subjects and the Egyptian Government, and to request that we would take this despatch into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether these rules should receive the approval of Her Majesty's Government.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to inclose General Stanton's despatch (General Stanton, No. 40, 12th February, 1876), containing a copy of the Convention sanctioning the Commission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

May be sanctioned.

That in our opinion, the rules may properly receive the sanction of Her Majesty's Government.

Temple, August 9, 1876.

My Lord,

New Court of Appeal. Daira bonds. Judgment against Khedive.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th June last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, reporting that a question of the validity of the recent decrees for the unification of the Egyptian debt had been raised in the new Court of Appeal at Alexandria, in consequence of an action which had been brought against the Daira of the Khedive for the non-payment of a Daira bond due last April, and inclosing an abstract of the decision of the Court by which the Daira was called upon to pay the bond.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to General Stanton on this subject.

That two further despatches from General Stanton were therewith inclosed, which Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take into our consideration with that above referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Opinion divided as to validity of judgment as against Khedive's Decree.

That we unfortunately are not agreed upon the question whether the judgment of the new Tribunals was right or not, for while the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General are of opinion that the Decree of the Khedive took away the plaintiff's right of action, and therefore the judgment against the Khedive was wrong, Dr. Deane is of opinion that the Decree was inoperative, and could not affect the rights ceded to foreigners under the Treaty and the new Code.

If Decree is an attack on rights acquired by foreigners, it is a breach of compact.

But we all agree that if the Decree is "une atteinte portée à un droit acquis d'un étranger par un acte d'Administration," Her Majesty's Government may properly direct Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt to point out to the Khedive that the Decree is a breach of the compact made with the Powers who were consenting parties to the establishment of the new jurisdiction and Tribunals.

We have read the further papers sent in reference to this matter, but the above Report applies also to them.

We have, &c.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor as to Egyptian Courts.

Conflict between Khedive and the new Tribunals. (Daira bonds.)

THIS is evidently a very serious affair, and it appears to go to the root of the whole arrangement as to the unification of the Egyptian debt.

The two important Articles are the 10th and 11th, as to the competence of the Egyptian Courts (page 195 of F. O. Book, 2548).

The 10th Article makes the Government the "Administrations," and the dairas justiciable before the Court in suits with foreigners.

The Khedive, as I understand, contends that this means justiciable according to whatever may be the law of Egypt for the time being, but that he may change the law from time to time in any way he thinks fit.

Possibly this might be argued if the 10th Article stood alone.

But the 11th Article provides that the Court may pronounce judgment (taking as their standard the Code Civil) against attempts which prejudice a right acquired by a foreigner "by an act of Administration."

The words, "by an act of Administration," may be coupled either with the word "attempts," or with the word "acquired."

The Khedive's argument seems to couple the words with the word "attempts," and it alleges that in this case the attempts" are not "attempts by an act of Administration," but by an act of legislation.

Khedive's Decree is an act of Administration and comes under judgment of the Court.

I cannot agree with this. It is evident that Article 11 must have meant something more than Article 10. Article 10 made the "Administrations" justiciable, and Article 11, in protecting foreigners against the "act of Administration," must have meant something more than Article 10. In fact, in a country where the Sovereign is absolute, and has in himself absolute legislative power, a decree, or law, made in a matter of administration is itself an act of Administration, and the Decree of the Khedive for the suspension of payments and the unification of the debt is itself an act of financial administration, and as such may well come under the judgment of the Court by Article 11.

I think the German Memorandum is in substance right.

Powers should unite in protest.

I think, however, that it is most important that the Powers which joined in setting up the Court should unite in any protest that is made, or in any step that is taken, to get rid of the deadlock. It appears probable that, putting France aside, the other European Powers are disposed to support the authority of the Court. Whether France will do so may be doubtful, both because she has never looked favourably upon the Court, and also because she is probably interested in the arrangement for the unification of the debt.

Balmoral Castle, October 9, 1876.

Dear Lord Tenterden,

Suez Canal votes. Agree with Law Officers.

I ENTIRELY concur in the opinion of Mr. Reilly and the Law Officers as to the right of voting at meetings of the Suez Canal Company.

Tribunal question. Retains same opinion.

As to the Egyptian Tribunal question, I have read the Egyptian Memorandum. I suppose you will place it before the Law Officers. It seems to me to be a long argument, the greater part of which is irrelevant. It does not grapple with the question of the construction of the clauses in the constitution of the Tribunal, and on these I retain the opinion I have already expressed.

The Attorney- and Solicitor-General to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 6.)

My Lord, Temple, November 6, 1876.

Conflict between Khedive and new Tribunals.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th October ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of August last on the recent disputes between the Khedive and his new Law Courts, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence which had passed on this subject,* and to draw our attention to the Egyptian Memorandum of the case, which we would find at p. 24 of the print.

That in our Report, which we would find at p. 15, we stated that while the Attorney and Solicitor-General were of opinion that the judgment against the Khedive was wrong, Dr. Deane was of opinion that the Decree for the unification of the Egyptian debt was inoperative, and could not affect the rights of the foreign plaintiffs, but that we were all agreed that if the Decree was "une atteinte portée à un droit acquis d'un étranger par un acte d'Administration," it was a breach of the compact made with the Powers who were parties to the establishment of the new Tribunals.

That the following is a brief outline of the principal arguments which are urged in the Egyptian Memorandum in support of the contention that the Decree was not such an "acte d'Administration" within the true meaning of Article 11 of the "Règlement Judiciaire." A distinction is drawn between the expression "mesure administrative," used in the first part of the Article, and the expression "acte d'Administration," used in the last part.

That it was contended that the first part of the Article explained the second (p. 35).

That the expression "mesure administrative," in the first part of the Article, means "une mesure administrative d'ordre général, et obligatoire pour tous" (p. 25), whereas the expression "acte d'Administration" in the second part of the Article means "les actes administratifs spéciaux dirigés contre les droits acquis ou arbitraires et mal fondés" (p. 31).

That the new Tribunals were expressly debarred by the terms of Article 11 from interfering with a "mesure administrative," while they were empowered in certain cases to give redress against "un acte d'Administration."

That the character and quality of a "mesure administrative" cannot be affected by the circumstance that private rights might suffer from its application; that the injury which might be occasioned to private rights is the consequence and not the object of such a measure (p. 35).

That as Article 11 debarred the Court from the faculty of interfering with the operation of a "mesure administrative," it clearly recognized the possibility of "mesures administratives exécutoires même envers les étrangers" (p. 35).

That the capitulations anterior to the reforms "n'établissent aucune limitation au pouvoir législatif du Khédive quant à la matière dont il s'agit." (See pp. 27, 34, and 35.)

That in granting the reforms the Khedive never intended to renounce this legislative power, and that "cette renonciation, qui serait d'une validité douteuse, même dans le cas où elle serait expressément stipulée, ne peut pas être présumée par l'interprétation trop subtile et forcée d'Articles de lois conçues dans un tout autre esprit" (p. 34).

That it could not be denied that the Decree for the unification of the Egyptian debt was a "mesure administrative" within the meaning of the first part of Article 11 (p. 25), and that the Court was wrong in holding that the application and enforcement of that Decree by the proper Department of State, in refusing to pay at maturity any one of the bonds or bills in question held by a foreigner was in each case a separate "acte d'Administration" affecting the private rights of foreigners within the meaning of Article 11.

That, in short, it was argued in the Memorandum that the Decrees of the 6th April and 7th May are "mesures administratives" of high State policy and of general application, which, though they might incidentally affect the rights of foreigners, it was clearly within the legislative power of the Khedive to enact whether under the régime of the capitulations or under the present system.

* Print, Nos. 1, 2, 6, pages 1 to 41; General Menabrea, September 25; to General Menabrea, October 3; to Lord Chancellor, October 5; Mr. Gould, No. 76, October 2; Sir J. Harris, No. 110, October 5; Mr. Wyndham, No. 249, October 6.

That the Decrees being valid legislative measures, binding on foreigners as well as natives, no administrative act founded on those Decrees, and necessary to carry them into execution, could be held to be illegal, and that the Court, by delivering judgments for the payment of the Daïra bonds at maturity in the face of those Decrees, attempted to arrest the execution of a "mesure administrative," in violation of the prohibition contained in the first part of Article 11.

That the whole of the arguments are concisely resumed in pages 33 and 36.

That with reference to Article 34 of the "Règlement Judiciaire," we would observe that the Judgment of the Court, in the case of Caprera v. the Daïra (p. 6) asserts that under the Capitulations no Decree of the Egyptian Government was binding on foreigners without the assent of their respective Governments; and that at the time of the introduction of the judicial reforms it was expressly stipulated that the Capitulations should be maintained in their integrity. That the German Memorandum (p. 8) stated that the legislative power of the Egyptian Government has been essentially restricted by the agreements respecting the new organization of the Courts, and it was to be so restricted; and further, that the task of protecting foreigners in their rights, which under the Capitulations fell on the Powers, was by the introduction of the reforms transferred to the Mixed Courts. On the other hand, it was positively asserted in the Egyptian Memorandum that the Capitulations never restricted the legislative power of the Khedive over foreigners on the subject matter of the two Decrees (pp. 26, 27, and 34, and Declaration before Tribunal, p. 4), and it is stated by Chérif Pasha, in his letter to Major-General Stanton of the 23rd May, pp. 3, 4, that Article 11 gave rise to "des notes explicatives" between the Egyptian Government and some of the Powers interested, and it was expressly established that the new Tribunals should have no power "de prononcer sur les mesures d'ordre général et fiscal."

That we might, therefore, perhaps consider it necessary, in order to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, that this conflict of opinion in regard to the effect of the Capitulations on the legislative powers of the Khedive over foreigners should be disposed of by further inquiry.

That in the meanwhile Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the Egyptian Memorandum into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any remarks which the arguments contained therein may suggest to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are unable to agree in the conclusion arrived at in this matter by Dr. Deane.

There are, we think, two distinct questions at issue which ought to be kept separate, but which in the Egyptian Memorandum, as well as in other papers written upon the subject, have been mixed up together.

1. Has the Khedive, in promulgating the Decrees of the 6th April and 7th May, violated any international obligations?

2. Is it competent for the Reformed Tribunals to entertain and decide this question, and pronounce the Decrees of the 6th April and 7th May to be invalid?

Khedive has not violated international engagements.

1. A great part of the Egyptian Memorandum is taken up with arguments to show that the Khedive has violated no international obligation in promulgating the Decrees of the 6th April and 7th May, and we incline to the opinion that on the whole these arguments are well founded.

Tribunals have no power to decide limits of Khedive's sovereignty, or to refuse to recognize validity of Decrees.

2. Upon the second head we think the Egyptian Memorandum proves that in the Regulations for the Reformed Tribunals the Khedive did not intend to give, and did not in fact give, to those Tribunals the power to determine the limits of his own sovereignty. The language of the 11th Article cannot, in our opinion, be construed to confer so extraordinary a jurisdiction. Whatever power was confided to the Tribunals to decide that individual acts of the administration were illegal, there was no authority given, or intended to be given, to decide on the validity of a law, or to arrest a general administrative measure of such importance as the unification of the public debt.

We are therefore still of opinion that in refusing to recognize the validity of the Decrees of the 6th April and 7th May the Reformed Tribunals were arrogating to themselves a jurisdiction not conferred upon them by the Regulations.

Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 6.)

Temple, November 6, 1876.

My Lord,

Conflict between Khedive and the new Tribunals.

I WAS honoured with your Lordship's commands, in conjunction with the Attorney- and Solicitor-General, signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 8th August last on the recent dispute between the Khedive and his new Law Courts, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence which had passed on that subject, and to draw our attention to the Egyptian Memorandum of the case, which would be found at page 24 of the print.

That in the Law Officers' Report, which would be found at page 15, it was stated that while the Attorney- and Solicitor-General were of opinion that the judgment against the Khedive was wrong, Dr. Deane was of opinion that the Decree for the unification of the Egyptian debt was inoperative, and could not affect the rights of the foreign plaintiffs, but that we were all agreed that if the Decree was "une atteinte portée à un droit acquis d'un étranger par un acte d'administration," it was a breach of the compact made with the Powers who were parties to the establishment of the new Tribunals. That in granting the reforms the Khedive never intended to renounce this legislative power, and that "cette renonciation qui serait d'une validité douteuse même dans le cas où elle serait expressément stipulée ne peut pas être présumée par l'interprétation trop subtile et forcée d'Articles de lois conçues dans un tout autre esprit" (page 34). That we might therefore perhaps consider it necessary, in order to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, that that conflict of opinion in regard to the effect of the Capitulations on the legislative powers of the Khedive over foreigners should be disposed of by further inquiry.

In the meanwhile, Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the Egyptian Memorandum into consideration, and favour your Lordship with any remarks which the arguments contained therein might suggest to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

Dissent from Law Officers' opinion.

That I regret being unable to agree with the Attorney- and Solicitor-General.

I have carefully considered the long and able arguments contained in the Egyptian Memorandum, and also the similar heads of argument in the Swedish note.

I do not think it necessary to examine in detail the several points of that argument, because, as it seems to me, the case made in the Memorandum is based upon a fallacy, viz., that the Khedive is unfettered by convention with foreign Powers with reference to the Codes and Tribunals.

The Tribunals are founded upon Treaties.

The Tribunals exist and exercise a jurisdiction founded upon and conceded by Treaty. The concurrent will of the Contracting Powers is required to alter the provisions of the Regulations and Codes.

Had not the Decrees of April and May been issued, the Tribunals would, it is admitted, have had jurisdiction under Articles 10 and 11.

The avowed object, or, if not the object, the result of those Decrees, it is argued, takes away the competence of the Tribunals by an act of the Legislative Power.

Khedive cannot modify their powers without consent of Contracting Parties.

The Khedive could not, as it seems to me, without the consent of the Powers and by his own mere authority, evade and defeat the whole purport and object of Articles 10 and 11 of the "Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire."

If the argument of the Memorandum is well founded, the Khedive by a Decree emanating from himself might put a stop to every proceeding under the new judicial system.

This, I conceive, he could not do without breaking faith with the several Powers, who were parties to the institution of this new system.

The need of this joint action of those several Powers with the Khedive disposes of the analogy and reference in the Memorandum to the case of Turkey and other States, which have at different times arbitrarily and under the pressure of difficulties dealt with their creditors.

Those States were, in the matter, independent, bound by no Treaty or Convention with other Powers. The Khedive has accepted the Code, and the Tribunals which are to work the Code, and is not in a position to deny the jurisdiction of the latter, or repeal the provisions of the former.

The assumption in the Memorandum, that the legislative authority of the Khedive was still absolute, and that by adopting the Code he ceded no part of his authority, is, I think, untenable. And I am of opinion that the Tribunals were competent, notwithstanding the Decrees.

Practically, however, the question has, I presume, ceased, from the financial position of Egypt, to be one which, with a view to the good of the creditors or the solvency of the Government, can be dealt with or solved upon the true legal interpretation of the words used in Articles 10 and 11 already referred to, even if there were no difference of opinion on the meaning of those Articles.

A compromise advisable.

The independence of the Egyptian Government, the authority of the Tribunals for the past as well as for the future, and the interests of the creditors seem to require some compromise, and some further and more accurate definition of the Powers of the Government, the authority of the Tribunals and the rights of foreigners in litigation with the Daïra or the Government.

Your Lordship has before you the suggestion for such a compromise in Mr. Cookson's letter of the 3rd September (p. 23), and in that suggestion, modified to some extent as to the rights of creditors, who may not have obtained judgments, may be found the best and easiest way out of the present difficulties.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

Not entitled to compensation, but may bring case before French Government.

That, in our opinion, Joseph Gridley is not entitled to any compensation for the treatment which he has received at the hands of the French authorities; but we think Lord Lyons may properly be instructed to bring the matter officially before the French Government for their favourable consideration.

Liability of British subjects in France to military requisitions.

(Returns of horses and mules in their possession.)

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 4th February ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris (No. 32), forwarding a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux, together with a copy of a letter addressed to the British Vice-Consul at Bayonne by the Prefect of the Department of the Basses Pyrénées, requesting him to call on British subjects residing in his district to make a return of horses and mules in their possession, with a view to their requisition for military purposes in the event of the mobilization of the French army.

Mr. Lister was also directed to inclose a further despatch (No. 38), with its inclosure, from Lord Lyons on the same subject, together with a Memorandum which had been drawn up in the Foreign Office on the question of the liability of British subjects residing in France to military requisitions. In this Memorandum reference is made to a Report of the Law Officers made in 1870, 26th August; and he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration with reference to that Report, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on this question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received March 20.)

Temple, March 18, 1876.

My Lord,

Privileges of mail-packets. Arrest of "Ville de Brest" when going to assistance of the postal steamer "Amérique."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th January, 1876, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence respecting the arrest at Queenstown of the French vessel "Ville de Brest," which was one of the vessels belonging to the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, subsidized by the French Government for the conveyance of mails.

That it appeared that the French postal steamer "Amérique," belonging to the same Company, whilst on her voyage from New York to Europe, in charge of the mails, injured her machinery, and the "Ville de Brest" having been dispatched to her assistance by the French Company, and having put into Queenstown for coal, was there arrested at the suit of a Mr. W. H. Owen, of Liverpool, on account of a claim preferred against the said Company to the amount of 12,000*l*., for the loss of a vessel with which, it was stated, the "Ville de Brest" had some time previously been in collision, and that that amount having been paid under protest, the "Ville de Brest" was allowed to proceed to sea to the assistance of the "Amérique."

That the Marquis d'Harcourt, the French Ambassador at this Court, now claimed the restitution of the 12,000*l*. paid under protest, on the ground that the "Ville de Brest" was entitled to the privileges of a Government mail-packet, under the Postal Convention of the 24th September, 1856, between this country and France (of which a copy was inclosed), and that the arrest was, therefore, illegal.

That Article V of the Convention in question, which described the privileges of packets employed by, or subsidized by, the post-offices of each nation, and which provided for such immunity from arrest, concludes with the words, "they shall not on any account be diverted from their especial duty or be liable to seizure, detention, embargo, or 'arrêt de Prince.'"

That in case it should be urged by the parties who instituted the proceedings against the "Ville de Brest," that she was not carrying mails at the time of her arrest, and, therefore, not engaged on the "especial duty" above referred to, it may be observed that the Xth Article of the same Convention states:—

"In cases of accident or damage sustained in the course of their navigation, by the packets respectively employed by the two Offices in the conveyance of the mails, the Contracting Parties engage to afford mutually to those vessels all the aid and assistance which their situation may require, &c., and it might, therefore, be a question whether the arrest of a vessel, sent out in aid of a postal vessel, in the act of carrying mails, would not of itself constitute an infraction of the above Article, irrespective of the privileges which the vessel arrested might claim as being subsidized as a mail vessel by the French Government.

That Lord Tenterden was therefore to request that we would take that case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, and as to the course which Her Majesty's Government in regard to the French Ambassador's application.*

That he, Lord Tenterden, was to inclose, for our information, although the case was not quite an analogous one, a correspondence which took place in the course of the year 1875, in regard to the arrest at Dover, and subsequent release, of the Belgian postal steamer "Prince Bedouin," together with a Memorandum referring to another case of similar detention which occurred in the year 1871, and which formed the subject of a reference to the Law Officers, in both of which the prompt release of the vessels was ordered.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Contrary to stipulations of Postal Treaty.

That, in our opinion, the seizure of the "Ville de Brest," and the subsequent demand of security for a deposit of 12,000*l.* as the condition of her release, was contrary to Treaty obligations.

Money paid should be returned.

And the Court of Admiralty should, we think, be moved to order the return of the money deposited.

We give this opinion, assuming that the "Ville de Brest" was a subsidized vessel within section 5 of the Postal Convention.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received May 16.)

My Lord,
Temple, May 16, 1876.

Privileges of mail-packets. Arrest of the "Ville de Brest.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that, on the receipt of our Report of the 18th March, respecting the French vessel "Ville de Brest," your Lordship caused a letter, which he was directed by your Lordship to inclose therewith, to be addressed to the Post Office, requesting that the necessary communication might be made to the Admiralty in accordance with our Report, if Her Majesty's Postmaster-General should see no reason to differ therefrom, calling on that Department to move the Court of Admiralty to return the sum of 12,000*l.* which was paid to release that vessel from arrest.

That Lord Tenterden was then to transmit to us the reply from the General Post Office, from which we should observe that Lord John Manners did not consider that the vessels in question did not* come within the terms of the Vth Article of the Postal Convention of the 24th September, 1856, as regards immunity from seizure.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the view taken by Her Majesty's Postmaster-General was correct, and, if so, what steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter. That the previous papers were sent therewith for reference if necessary.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if the "Ville de Brest" was a vessel maintained, freighted, and subsidized by the French Government for the conveyance of correspondence, and did as a fact convey correspondence from France to England by the way of Havre and Plymouth, we should still be inclined to think that she came within Article V of the Convention, though, as Lord John Manners says, she does not carry any mails on behalf of the English Post Office.

French contract should be examined as to her being a packet within meaning of the Treaty.

The right to the privileges claimed by the French Ambassador can, as it seems to us, not be satisfactorily ascertained till—first, the contract for the conveyance of mails between the French Government and the Company to which the "Ville de Brest" belongs has been considered; and, secondly, the fact whether mails, in pursuance of such contract, if any, are conveyed by that Company's ships to Plymouth. We therefore submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that the French Ambassador may properly be informed of the doubts existing as to the "Ville de Brest's" right to the exemptions in the Convention, and be requested to allow an inspection of the contract between the French Government and the Company, and that Lord John Manners may be asked whether, as a fact, the vessels belonging to the French Company do bring mails from France to England.

* Sic in orig. Query "did come."

We gather from the Post Office letter that mails from England to France are not conveyed by this Company.

*Mr. Lister to the Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane.

Gentlemen,
Foreign Office, May 5, 1876.

Channel Tunnel. Protocol of Commission.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to state to you that his Lordship, after communication on the subject with the Treasury, is desirous of obtaining your opinion on a Protocol ad referendum adopted at a meeting of the Anglo-French Commission for the Channel Tunnel and Railway, held at Paris last February.

Copies of the minutes of that meeting, of printed correspondence on this subject, and a letter from the Board of Trade, are likewise inclosed, and I am, at the same time, to inform you that Lord Derby has settled with the Treasury that, before any final step is taken which would be binding upon the two Governments, the approval of Parliament to the course proposed to be pursued shall be obtained.

In the present stage of this matter, Lord Derby directs me to request that you will take this Protocol into consideration, and that you will favour his Lordship with any observations or suggestions which you may have to offer thereupon.

You will perceive that the next meeting of the Commission is appointed to be held in London on the 22nd instant, and I am, therefore, to request that you will be so good as to forward your Report before the 14th instant, in order that Lord Derby may be able to communicate it to the Treasury in time for the British Commissioners to receive their instructions before that meeting takes place.

I am, &c.
(Signed) T. V. LISTER.

Report from the Law Officers in reply to the foregoing Letter.

That we have carefully considered the papers transmitted to us.

Legislation necessary, and Treaty with France.

It seems to us that the matters referred to in the Protocol can be settled only by legislation, so far as this country is concerned, and by Treaty as between this country and France.

Proposed responsibility of Government.

We presume that the action of the British Government from time to time, and in several particulars, is necessary to the carrying out of the scheme; but we observe that the Protocol suggests that the Government should take upon itself considerable responsibilities, so far, in some eventuality, as the working and purchase of the railway and tunnel.

Jurisdiction over offences before opening of line.

No provision seems to be suggested for the jurisdiction over and punishment of offences before the time when the line is in working order. The attention of the Commission might, we think, be called with advantage to this omission.

We have no further observations to make on the Protocol.

* The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be discovered when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain from the Law Officers the original as drawn up by them. The Law Officers, however, do not appear to retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the substance of the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has therefore been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as without it the bare Report, without the preamble, might not be wholly intelligible.

My Lord,

Channel Tunnel.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd June, stating that with reference to that part of our Report of the 18th May in which we suggested that provision should be made for the jurisdiction over and punishment of offences which might occur before the time when the Channel Tunnel and Railway were in working order, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a Memorandum by Mr. Watson (25th May, 1876), in which he sets forth reasons against dealing with that matter in the manner suggested in our letter. That he, Mr. Lister, was to request that we would take the inclosed paper into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our former Report we kept before us the fact that your Lordship had desired that we should make such observations upon the Protocol sent to us as that document might suggest.

Jurisdiction over offences before opening of line.

Accordingly, we noticed the omission of any provision for jurisdiction during the time the tunnel was making, and recommended that this omission should be brought to the attention of the Commission.

Provision should be made for, but not by international contract.

We did not intend that this jurisdiction should be dealt with by international contract, nor, in fact, did we say so. But we were and still are of opinion that some provision should be made, if not by both England and France, certainly by England, for offences committed during the progress of the works. And we see that Mr. Watson agrees with this opinion, though he has mistaken our former Report in supposing that we meant this provision should be made by contract between the two countries.

Temple, July 12, 1876.

My Lord,

Powers of "Pro-Consuls" appointed by Consuls.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 27th June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence with Her Majesty's Consul at Bordeaux* as to the validity of the signature attached to legal certificates of a person asked by the Consul to sign for him while still present at his post.

That the Consul contended that, in view of the powers conferred on Acting Consuls and Pro-Consuls by the Act 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 42, the signature of such a person was valid.

That it had always been considered in the Foreign Office that an "Acting Consul" was a person who acted in the absence of a Consul from his post; and that the sanction of the Secretary of State to such a temporary transfer of duty was necessary in order to render the signature of the Acting Consul valid. That the term "Pro-Consul," though inserted in the Act of Parliament, was not one that was ever used in the Foreign Department, and your Lordship was unaware whether it could be considered that there was any material difference between an "Acting Consul" and a "Pro-Consul."

Mr. Lister was accordingly pleased to request that we would take this subject into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether a "Pro-Consul" differs in any way from an "Acting Consul," and if so, whether a "Pro-Consul" might be properly taken to mean a person deputed by the Consul to administer oaths and perform notarial acts without the sanction of the Secretary of State having been obtained, and while the Consul was at his post; and to state that the 20th section of the Consular Act, which bears on the subject, would be found at p. 57 of the accompanying volume (General Consular Instructions), and the Act 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 42, at p. 65.

* To Consul Hunt, No. 2, May 23; Consul Hunt, No. 16, June 6; to Consul Hunt, No. 3, June 16; Consul Hunt, No. 18, June 19.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, so far as we know, the term "Pro-Consul" is used only in the Sardinian Consular service. (Cussy, "Règlements Consulaires des Etats de l'Europe et de l'Amérique," p. 423.) He is an inferior, though distinct, Consular Officer, appointed by a superior Consular Officer, and without any right to promotion.

The word in 18 and 19 Vict., c. 42, was possibly inserted and allowed to remain in the Statute by inadvertence, or with the idea of including every kind of person discharging Consular duties.

Difference between Pro-Consul and Acting Consul.

Former cannot administer oaths without authority of Secretary of State.

The only distinction we would suggest between an "Acting Consul" and a "Pro-Consul" is, that the former may be the person acting during the temporary absence of the regular Consular Officer from his post. The "Pro-Consul" discharging certain duties thrown upon him by his principal, who, though present, cannot at the moment in person perform the required duty; but, whatever may be the meaning of the word "Pro-Consul," we are of opinion that a person deputed by the Consul without the authority of the Secretary of State cannot administer an oath under 18 and 19 Vict., c. 42.

My Lord,

Privileges of mail-packets.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th July ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that upon receipt of our Report of the 16th May last respecting the arrest at Queenstown in December last of the French vessel the "Ville de Brest," the French Ambassador at this Court was, as recommended by us, informed of the doubts existing as to the right of that vessel to the exemption from arrest claimed for her, and was requested to move the French Government to enable Her Majesty's Government to have access to the mail contract between that vessel* and the Company to which the "Ville de Brest" belongs; and, at the same time, Her Majesty's Postmaster-General was requested to state whether, as a fact, the vessels belonging to the French Company do bring mails from France to England.

Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to transmit to us a letter from the French Ambassador, inclosing a copy of the contract in question, and a letter from the General Post Office, containing a reply to the question suggested in our Report; and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should now be returned to the French Ambassador on the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the Articles of the Postal Convention between this country and France, and the Convention between the French Government and the Transatlantic Company, and the Post Office letter of the 29th May, 1876.

We consider that the privileges provided for under Article V of the Postal Convention are limited to vessels employed in conveying mails between France and England, and that the Company to which the "Ville de Brest" belonged and the service in which the vessels of that Company are employed have no relation to the conveyance of mails between France and England, and cannot consequently claim the privileges of the Postal Convention between the two countries.

"Ville de Brest" does not come within meaning of Postal Convention, and cannot be relieved from the security given on her behalf.

The Marquis d'Harcourt may therefore, in our opinion, properly be answered that Her Majesty's Government, considering that the "Ville de Brest" does not come within the provisions of the Convention for the communication by post between France and this country, cannot take any measures for relieving the Company to which Powers of a Pro-Consul.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 12th ultimo, respecting the validity of the signature attached to legal certificates of a person asked by the Consul to sign for him while still present at his post, he was directed by your Lordsnip to observe that the point as to whether a person so deputed could perform notarial acts without the sanction of the Secretary of State had not been noticed in our above-mentioned Report.

That your Lordship would be glad, therefore, if we would kindly take the point into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot perform notarial acts.

That, in our opinion, a person appointed Pro-Consul, or Deputy by the Consul, cannot, by virtue and on the strength of such appointment, perform notarial acts.

He derives no authority from Consul's appointment.

We regret that your Lordship has had the trouble of referring these papers back to us. Our former Report should have stated expressly our opinion that the "Pro-Consul" or Deputy derived no authority whatever from the Consul's appointment of him.

Newfoundland fisheries. Rights of French fishermen.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th ultimo, stating that the Law Officers of the Crown had from time to time had referred to them from the Foreign Office certain questions arising out of some long outstanding matters of dispute between this country and France in regard to French rights of fishing on certain given points of the coast of Newfoundland, by virtue of formal engagements entered into between the two countries; and, as we were no doubt aware, negotiations had from time to time been entered upon at Paris with a view to a settlement of these outstanding questions, but hitherto without any satisfactory result; and renewed negotiations of a more or less informal character, which were conducted at Paris during last year and the early part of the present year, between Captain Miller, as British Commissioner, and Captain de Boissoudy, as the Commissioner for France, were broken off in the month of March last, under the circumstances stated in the Colonial Office letter thereto annexed.

That that letter, as we should see, inclosed some draft Articles which Lord Carnarvon, in communication with Captain Miller, and with Mr. Carter, the Premier of Newfoundland, were desirous should be submitted to the French Commissioner, as containing the basis of the arrangements to which the Imperial Government and that of Newfoundland were ready to consent, with a view to a settlement of the matters in dispute, though, as we should see by the correspondence, they were not to be put forward as being textually agreed to.

That before, indeed, they could be so submitted formally to the French Commissioner, your Lordship was desirous of being favoured with any observations we might desire to offer in regard to any amendments in form, or any alterations which it might appear to us desirable to introduce into those Articles, without, however, affecting their substance; and since the principles involved in them had, as Lord Tenterden had said, been already agreed to by the Imperial and Colonial Governments (or rather by the Premier of Newfoundland on behalf of the latter), it was unnecessary that he (Lord Tenterden) should call our attention generally to those principles.

That there was one point, however, to which it might be desirable that he should advert, as it came prominently forward in Article I of the draft Articles, and involved, perhaps, the most serious point of contention between the fishermen of the two countries, namely, how far French fishermen can claim, at those points of the coast where they have fishery rights, exceptional privileges of fishing over British or Colonial fishermen.

That the point at issue arose out of the wording of the British Declaration signed at Versailles on the 3rd September, 1783, which stated that "to this end (viz., to prevent all 'foundation of dispute for the future'), and in order that the fishermen of the two nations may not give cause for daily quarrels, His Britannic Majesty will take the most positive measures for preventing his subjects from interrupting in any manner, by their competition, the fishery of the French, during the temporary exercise of it which is granted to them, upon the coast of the Island of Newfoundland; and he will for this purpose cause the fixed settlements which shall be found there to be removed."

That out of that declaration had arisen the claim of the French Government on behalf of their fishermen to the exclusive right of fishing on the parts of the coast in question during the fishing season, to the entire exclusion of British fishermen, a pretension which had never been admitted by this country, though it had formed the subject of much discussion, not only with the French Government, but amongst legal and other authorities in this country, who at various times had taken very opposite views of the exact privileges intended to be accorded to the French (or which could, in fairness, be claimed by them) under the declaration in question.

That, in Article I of the draft Articles then inclosed, it was proposed to insert the words, "that the French fishermen shall be deemed, so long as this Convention is in force, to have the first claim to any particular position on the water, but not so as to exclude the British from such rights of free concurrent fishing as they have hitherto enjoyed and are entitled to claim."

That Lord Tenterden had thought it right to enter into the above brief explanation in order to account for the more or less ambiguous terms which that Article contained, but which your Lordship understood were intended, whilst still maintaining the right of British fishermen to concurrent fishing, to yield the preference of station in point of fact to French fishermen, a concession which the Colonial Office are of opinion would be found acceptable with the French Commissioner, whilst the details of such an arrangement could be determined by the Joint Commission which it was proposed to appoint to regulate all such matters on the spot.

That, in drawing our attention to that particular Article, your Lordship, at the same time, directed Lord Tenterden to observe that, in your Lordship's opinion, it was most essential in any new negotiation to avoid the use of ambiguous, or vague, or contradictory expressions, such as might give rise to probable, or even possible embarrassment or dispute in the time to come; and that your Lordship would request that, in any amendments which we might think fit to suggest in the proposed Articles then submitted to us, we would keep that principle prominently in view.

That your Lordship did not desire to offer any further observation upon the draft Articles in their present stage, but that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our Report on that subject at our earliest possible convenience, as it was most important that every facility should be afforded for a speedy settlement of those outstanding questions, and the British Commissioner has already proceeded to Paris with a view to an immediate resumption of negotiations.

That the draft of the answer which your Lordship had caused to be returned to the Colonial Office was also annexed.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, bearing date the 28th ultimo, inclosing copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris relative to the above question, and to request that we would take that despatch into our consideration with reference to the papers then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Draft Convention will add to the confusion existing.

That the Article A of the proposed Convention is, in our opinion, so framed that, instead of lessening, it will add to the difficulties which have, down to the present time, beset the Newfoundland Fisheries question.

* See also No. 71. (Miscellaneous.)

That the expression "first claim to any particular position on the water" is vague and ambiguous in itself, and is not made more certain by the following words: "but not so as to exclude the British from such rights of free concurrent fishing as they have hitherto enjoyed and are entitled to claim."

What are the British rights?

The rights of the British are the very things in dispute, and on the first occasion, if the Convention be agreed to, will arise under it the question, what rights have the British hitherto enjoyed; what rights are they entitled to claim?

Again, what are the rights and what is the meaning of a "free concurrent fishery," which is "not to interrupt in any manner by competition" the French fishermen? (British Declaration, 3rd September, 1783).

Further, what is the meaning of "the first claim to any particular position on the water?"

Take the case of a British vessel taking up a position at a distance from and even out of sight of French vessels. Is the British ship to keep that place or give it up at the demand of the French vessel which may come up some time afterwards?

And the French?

To take another case. How far do the rights of the French extend from the particular position on the water originally taken up?

We could trouble your Lordship with other instances of complication, which, as it seems to us, would arise under Article A. But we merely suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, those matters which immediately occur as vague and ambiguous to the extent of making the important Article A utterly useless, if not mischievous.

We have not the local or practical knowledge which would enable us to say how this Article could be amended. And we are pressed by the observation of Mr. Carter, that if a distance were given within which no British vessel should fish the French might occupy the whole fishing-ground to the exclusion of the British.

We can, therefore, only submit to your Lordship the objections which occur to us, and the reasons for those objections.

Proposed amendments.

We think Article F should follow after Article D, and be placed before the present Article E.

And in Article G, instead of "belonging," the words "which belong" might be used as a more positive assertion of the fact.

We further suggest the omission of the words "by their competition" at the end of the first paragraph of Article G.

Claim of Pericador Toncador against executors of Mdme. Larichandy, at Réunion.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 23rd August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Réunion, stating the difficulties under which an Indian, named Pericador Toncador, was placed, in his attempts to recover a sum of 1,500 fr. claimed by him from the heirs and trustees of Mdme. Larichandy, and that he was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion, whether in this case your Lordship would be justified in making any representation to the French Government, with a view of invoking their interference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the circumstances of this case are not, in our opinion, sufficient to justify any official interference on your Lordship's part for the protection of the Indian, Pericador Toncador, since, if he had the means of placing his case before the Tribunals at Réunion, he might obtain justice, or at least a decision.

It is, however, clear, from the facts stated by Mr. Consul Perry, that advantage has been taken, first, of the ignorance of the Indian in obtaining his money; secondly, of his poverty, in the refusal to return the money without legal proceedings.

Her Majesty's Government may support officiously.

And your Lordship may, therefore, in our opinion, properly, but officiously, bring the case to the notice of the French Government.

Foreign Office, December 5, 1876.

Gentlemen,

Extradition Act, 1870. Powers of Governors of British Colonies.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you, for your consideration, the accompanying correspondence relating to the powers of Governors of British Colonies under the Extradition Act of 1870; and I am to request that you will favour his Lordship with your opinion whether the Governors of British Colonies are bound to discharge, with regard to extradition from the Colonies under that Act, all the duties discharged by a police magistrate in cases of extradition from the United Kingdom, or whether such Governors may, in accordance with the view expressed by the Home Office, depute colonial magistrates to discharge these duties.

The interpretation clause of the Act assigns to the expression "police magistrate" the special meaning therein mentioned, "unless the context otherwise requires," but having regard to the modifications introduced by section 17 for the purpose of applying the Act to Colonies, it may be questionable whether a departure from the special interpretation assigned is required within the intent and meaning of those words.

I am to observe, however, that if such departure be admissible in applying the Act to colonial extradition, no special deputation from the Governor to a police magistrate would appear necessary, as the latter could act under the order issued by the Governor in lieu of the Secretary of State, under sections 7 and 17 (2).

Another consequence would flow from this construction of the Act, that police magistrates and justices of the peace in Colonies might initiate extradition proceedings under section 8, as it is provided by section 17 that the Act for the purposes of colonial extradition shall be read as if the British possession were substituted for the United Kingdom or England.

If you should be of opinion that police magistrates in Colonies are competent under the Act to execute and perform the powers and duties in relation to extradition which are vested in police magistrates in England, Lord Derby would be glad to be informed whether you consider that in Colonies the expression "police magistrate" must be limited to "stipendiary magistrates," or may include unpaid justices of the peace who in some Colonies deal with police cases.

I am, &c.
(Signed) TENTERDEN.

Report from the Law Officers in reply to the foregoing Letter.

The terms "Secretary of State" and "police magistrate" are defined in section 26 of the "Extradition Act, 1870."

And the duties of the police magistrate are set out in the 8th and following sections of the Act.

Section 17 extends the Act as if "British possession" were substituted in the Act for the United Kingdom or England.

The Governor would not, apart from the Act, have the power of extradition. His powers, therefore, are limited by the words of the Act.

The Governor must perform the acts performed in England by a police magistrate.

Section 17, sub-section 2, provides that all powers vested in or acts authorized or required to be done by the police magistrate and the Secretary of State, or either of them, in relation to the surrender of a fugitive criminal, may be done by the Governor of the British possession alone.

I find in the Act no words which would authorize either the Secretary of State or the police magistrate to depute any persons to discharge their several duties in relation to the surrender of a fugitive criminal. The context does not seem to require any changes in the meaning of the words "police magistrate" given in the interpretation clause, for the Governor can do the acts which the Statute requires the police magistrate to do.

Cannot depute colonial magistrates to perform them for him.

We are therefore of opinion that the word "may" in section 17, sub-section 2, must be read as "shall," and that the Governor is bound to discharge, with regard to extradition under the Act, all the duties discharged by the police magistrate in cases of extradition from the United Kingdom, and that the Governors in British possessions cannot depute colonial magistrates to discharge those duties.

My Lord,

Imprisonment of Mr. Robshaw at Hamburg; charge of fraud.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin, together with two despatches and their inclosures from Her Majesty's Consul at Hamburg, and previous correspondence, as marked in the margin,[*] relative to the case of Mr. Robshaw, who had been recently imprisoned in Hamburg on a charge of fraud and collusion with a defaulter named Rogers, who had absconded with certain goods, and who after having been in prison for nearly five months was set at liberty on the 10th June last, the Hamburg Court of Inquiry having decreed that no prosecution should take place.

That we would perceive that Dr. Sieveking, an eminent lawyer at Hamburg, having been requested to make inquiries, with a view of ascertaining whether any claim could be instituted on account of the losses alleged to have been incurred by Mr. Robshaw in this matter, had reported to the effect that a claim of this nature could scarcely be sustained, but that, if so inclined, Mr. Robshaw could bring an action for damages before the Civil Court for withholding certain documents belonging to him, and which he considered to be of value.

Mr. Lister was pleased to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether any further steps could be taken by Her Majesty's Government in this matter, and, if so, what course it would be most expedient to adopt.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

Treated according to law of Hamburg. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere.

That in our opinion Her Majesty's Government cannot properly take any further steps to assist Mr. Robshaw, who seems to have been treated in accordance with the law and practice of the Tribunals of Hamburg in cases of a like kind.

[*] The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be discovered when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain from the Law Officers the original as drawn up by them. The Law Officers, however, do not appear to retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the substance of the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has therefore been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as without it the bare Report, without the preamble, might not be wholly intelligible.

My Lord,

Case of Mr. Whinney.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 15th January, 1875, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, with its inclosures, from Mr. Whinney, who was arrested at Hamburg, and ordered to deposit a sum of 5,000*l.* in a German Court.

That the previous papers with respect to that case were inclosed, from which we should perceive that, in answer to Mr. Whinney's first appeal for assistance, your Lordship was, by the advice of the Law Officers of the Crown (dated the 30th January, 1875), informed that his (Mr. Whinney's) remedy lay in an appeal to the Higher German Courts.

That that appeal having been made unsuccessfully, Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into careful consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the case was now such as to call for any diplomatic action on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in our opinion diplomatic interference would, in this case, be useless, since the German Government would obviously answer that they cannot control the decisions of German Courts, which are given in accordance with the law of the country.

His proceedings against a debtor at Hamburg, and his liability to return goods seized from same debtor in another country.

We have read with care the whole case submitted to and the opinion given on that case by Mr. Stephen. We agree with him in the remarks which he makes upon the ignorance of English procedure shown by the German Judges; but the only, or, at least, the material point for consideration is whether, by the law of Hamburg, a creditor, having instituted proceedings against a debtor, resident in Hamburg, before the Hamburg Tribunals, and then, pending the proceedings in Hamburg, sued and attached the goods of the same debtor for the same cause of action in another country, can be compelled to repay the debtor the moneys so attached, and give security as to other moneys, part of the same debt, but not yet recovered.

Liable by law of Hamburg.

Oppressive as such law may be, the Court of Appeal has ruled that such is the law. In our opinion, as already stated, there is no room for diplomatic action.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 13th May instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence noted in the margin* relative to a claim advanced by the heirs of C. Bleichen, a Danish subject, against Her Majesty's Government, on account of the capture of a ship belonging to him during the Anglo-Danish war of 1807 by a British frigate; and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the German Ambassador on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

No legal claim.

That, in our opinion, the heirs or representatives of C. Bleichen have no legal claim for compensation upon Her Majesty's Government.

Mischievous precedent if entertained.

My Lord,

Case of the "Milo" collision.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 10th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us correspondence relative to the circumstances under which the British vessel "Milo" had been detained by the German authorities at Stettin on account of the expenses entailed on the Navigation Commission for cleaning the channel of the Lurne which had been obstructed by the wreck of the "Catharine," sunk in collision with the "Milo."

That that vessel had now, after the detention of upwards of a year, been released on the deposit of a caution of 5,000*l.*, and that your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether, in our opinion, it would be proper for Her Majesty's Government to make any representations to the German Government with a view to obtaining some compensation to the owners on account of the losses which they had sustained in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the liability of the "Milo," her arrest, the nature and amount of the security required to release her from arrest, were questions properly to be determined by the Prussian Tribunals.

Her Majesty's Government cannot ask compensation for Messrs. Wilson.

We are therefore of opinion that it would not be proper for Her Majesty's Government to make any representations to the German Government with a view to obtaining any compensation to the Messrs. Wilson on account of the losses which they may have sustained in the matter.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that instructions, in the sense of the Report of the Law Officers of the 4th August last, were transmitted to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Athens for communication to the Ionian bondholders, and for his guidance in his further communications with the Greek Government.*

That Lord Tenterden was pleased to transmit to us further despatches from

* Mr. Stuart, No. 183, November 6, 1875; No. 18, February 2, 1876.

Mr. Stuart, in which he states that the Greek Government refused to accept the view of the question arrived at by Her Majesty's Government, and assert that they are at liberty to pay off the bondholders at the same rate as they would have been paid had the original Ionian laws still been in force.

That to arrive at a conclusion respecting this point, it would be observed that Mr. Stuart remarks that it might be necessary that the Currency Laws of the Ionian Parliament should be carefully examined—that he was therefore to request that we would have the goodness to take this matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to the proper course to be pursued by Her Majesty's Government.

That he (Lord Tenterden) was also to inclose a despatch from Sir C. Sebright which had just been received, as well as a letter from Mr. Taylor, one of the bondholders, and to state that the laws of the 25th January and the 10th May, 1865, could not be procured in this country, and copies had accordingly been requested by telegraph from Corfu.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, referring to Sir C. Sebright's letter to Mr. Stuart of the 20th February, 1875, the printed bonds are stated to be payable in pounds sterling in legal Ionian currency, and some which are written or promissory notes merely say pounds sterling.

In the Treaty between Great Britain, France, Russia, and Greece of the 29th March, 1864, and the Convention between Great Britain and Greece, same date, the only denomination of money is pounds sterling.

And the 27th and 28th Vict., cap. 40, authorizing the relinquishment in favour of the King of the Hellenes of certain money payable in respect of the Greek Loan, and confirming the Treaty of March, 1864, pounds sterling are alone named.

By Article VII of the Treaty of March, 1864, the King of the Hellenes takes upon himself, amongst other things, certain engagements and contracts which we presume would include the Ionian bonds.

By Article VIII he promises to take upon himself the payment of pensions scheduled in the Convention of the same date.

The Decree of the Greek Government fixing the value of 1*l.* sterling at 27 dr. 70 l. bears date the 25th January, 1865.

Greek Decree cannot override Treaty.

In the Law Officers' Report of the 11th May, 1875, it was stated to your Lordship that in their opinion the Hellenic Government could not by such an ex post facto Decree alter the relations existing and confirmed by Treaty between the Government and its creditors.

Payment should be made according to rate of exchange.

To that opinion, having read the despatch and two inclosures (one from the Finance and the other from the Foreign Minister at Athens) of Mr. Stuart, we still adhere, and we are also of opinion, as given in the Law Officers' Report of the 4th August last, that the payment to the bondholders should be made according to the rate of exchange, and not according to the rate arbitrarily fixed by the Hellenic Government.

We do not at present see how the Currency Laws of the Ionian Islands can affect the question, but we have not had the opportunity of seeing those laws.

Question referred to Treaty Powers.

As the question may fairly be considered one of a Treaty obligation, we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that the rights of the bondholders may be referred to the Governments which were parties to the Treaty of 1864; and should your Lordship think fit to adopt that course, notice of your intention should be given at the earliest opportunity, in order to stop any proceedings before the Greek Tribunals.

"Hylton Castle" collision case.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a telegram from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, inquiring whether the Greek Courts were competent to try, as regards damages against the English steamer, a collision case between an Italian mail-steamer and the English merchant-steamer "Hylton Castle." That Articles VII and XI of the Treaty of the 4th October, 1837, between this country and Greece ("Hertslet's Treaties," vol. v, p. 288) might have a bearing on that case. It should also be stated that Greece had adopted the Regulations of the Merchant Shipping Act with regard to collisions at sea ("Digest of Statutes relating to Merchant Shipping, prepared by Board of Trade, 1875").

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take that matter into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Stuart on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Greek Courts competent to try case against the British vessel.

That the English steamer is at the Piræus, as appears from the telegram, and Mr. Stuart may, in our opinion, properly be answered that the Greek Courts are competent to try the case of collision against the English steamer.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens (No. 85, April 25), containing observations upon the question of referring the case of the Ionian bondholders for the opinion of the Governments who were parties to the Treaty of 1864, and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we saw any reason to alter our Report of the 24th March.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to inclose a volume containing the Currency Laws of the Ionian Laws of the Ionian Islands, which we had not previously had before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

"Hylton Castle" and "Agrigento" collision case.

Criminal proceedings.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 29th April last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 11th of that month, he was directed to transmit to us further papers relative to the collision between the British steamer "Hylton Castle" and the Italian steamer "Agrigento," in Greek waters, and that he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon, with special reference to the remarks contained in the letter from the Board of Trade of the 26th April, as to the competency of the Greek Courts to exercise jurisdiction in that case, in the event of criminal proceedings being instigated against the master of the "Hylton Castle."

1876

We are also honoured with a letter from Mr. Lister, dated the 4th May ultimo, inclosing for our consideration a further document in the case.

Presence of British Consul. "Most favoured nation."

We are also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Lister, bearing date the 30th ultimo, stating that, with reference to the letter of the 29th April, on the subject of the case of the "Hylton Castle," he was to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, containing a copy of the Treaty of Commerce between Spain and Greece, dated the 21st August last, and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, together with the Treaty of Commerce between this country and Greece of the 4th October, 1837, Article VIII of which Treaty secured most-favoured-nation treatment to British Consuls in Greece, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the question of the attendance of the English Consul at the examination of the captain of the "Hylton Castle" before the Greek Courts.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would return an answer on that point at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, British Consular officers in Greece are entitled to be placed upon the footing of the most favoured nation by Article VIII of the Treaty of the 4th October, 1837.

Whatever privileges, therefore, may be held by a Spanish Consular officer in Greece, under the Treaty forwarded by Mr. Stuart, may be claimed by a British Consular Agent.

Treaty privileges are limited.

We doubt, however, the extent of the privileges given under Articles XI and XII of this latter Treaty. For the provisions of Article XI might be satisfied by their application to civil and commercial matters only; and they are certainly limited by the words "en tant que cela est permis par la législation du pays."

And in Article XII the words "pour protéger les droits et les intérêts de leurs nationaux," may likewise be construed with reference only to civil rights and interests.

British Consul should be present, independent of Treaty.

The captain of the "Hylton Castle," as we understand the former papers, is to be tried for a crime, and not a civil matter. We do, however, advise that the English Consul should claim to be present at the examination of the captain of the "Hylton Castle." For, independent of Treaty, common justice, and the ordinary usage among civilized nations, require the presence of some protection for the accused, and the presence of the Consular officer, on the other hand, cannot lead to the defeat of justice.

Reference to case of the "Franconia."

In reference to the former papers transmitted to us, we delay reporting upon them till judgment has been given in the case of the master of the German ship "Franconia," a case exactly similar, save as to the place of collision and nationality of the ships, to that of the "Hylton Castle."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Port-au-Prince, relative to the measures adopted by the Haytian Government in consequence of the outbreak of an insurrection in that Republic; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Major Stuart upon the subject of the blockade of Jacmel.

Atlas Steamship Company.

We are also honoured with a letter from Mr. Lister, dated the 17th ultimo, stating that he transmitted to us, by direction of your Lordship, a letter from the Atlas Steamship Company, calling attention to the loss which would be caused to them by the action of the Haytian Government in blockading the port of Jacmel. That Mr. Lister was to request that the inclosed letter might be added to the papers upon the same subject sent to us for our consideration on the 12th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Blockade creates state of war, and gives neutral rights.

That the Haytian Government have the right to blockade the port of Jacmel, but by such blockade that Government creates a state of war, giving neutral as well as belligerent rights.

It appears from the letter of Messrs. Leech that the blockade was established and existed de facto.

So long, therefore, as the blockade is maintained, British subjects have no legal right to complain of, and no redress to claim for, any loss which they may suffer through the blockade.

Latter claimed for British subjects.

Major Stuart may therefore, in our opinion, properly be instructed to point out to the Haytian Government that Her Majesty's subjects are entitled to claim, and will be protected in, the exercise of their rights as neutrals.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 4th March last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 30th October last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further correspondence relative to the nationality of Mrs. Maunder, a lady who had a claim against the Haytian Government, and that he, Mr. Lister, was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether the inclosed papers contained sufficient information to enable us to decide whether or no Mrs. Maunder was entitled to British protection. That the previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her nationality established.

That the question of nationality depends on the legitimacy of Joseph Maunder, which, in its turn, depends on the question whether Frederick Maunder was married to Mdlle. Lebusse, and that, in our opinion, there is ample evidence to sustain the marriage.

The marriage must have taken place more than half a century ago. The parties appear to have described themselves as man and wife.

The letter by Mdme. Lebusse-Maunder and the certificate of the Judge seem to us primâ facie evidence of the marriage.

Of the evidence transmitted by Mr. Stuart, it may be said that the greater part of it is not evidence at all, and that what is evidence is so extremely weak that it does not, in our opinion, at all rebut the presumption arising from the facts set out.

Is entitled to British protection.

We therefore think Mrs. Maunder is entitled to British protection.

Consul's registration of births of illegitimate children, &c.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th day of February ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit a correspondence* in regard to a question raised by Her Majesty's Consul at Florence; first,

Whether British Consular Officers abroad should or should not enter in the registers of their Consulates the births of illegitimate children of British subjects, knowing them to be so; and, secondly, whether registration in a British Consulate is looked upon as affording proof of British nationality, or whether it is a mere formality.

That we would perceive that, on the first point, the Registrar-General had stated it to be his opinion that the births of illegitimate children of British subjects within the boundaries of the Consulate should be registered by the Consul, and in a letter from that officer, in answer to a reference from the Foreign Office, he stated his reason for arriving at that decision.

Lord Tenterden further stated that your Lordship was by no means satisfied with the correctness of the view taken by the Registrar-General of this question, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, as well as with any observations we might have to offer in regard to the value of registration in Consular registers as proof of nationality.

That a specimen of the Consular registers of births was inclosed, from which we would see that it is required that the maiden surname of the mother should be given, and, consequently, contemplates only the registration of the births of children born in wedlock.

Such births not to be registered.

Lord Tenterden also said that he was to add that any value that may be attached to the registration as a proof of nationality would be materially impaired if the registers were to include the births of those confessedly not British subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Registration no proof of nationality.

That in our opinion British Consular Officers abroad should not enter in the registers of their Consulates the births of the illegitimate children of British parents, and that registration in a British Consulate affords no proof of nationality.

Deserter from 71st Highlanders on board American vessel at Palermo.

I WAS honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th April instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to the Law Officers and Dr. Deane a telegram which had just been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Rome, reporting that upon the application of the Colonel of the 71st Highlanders, Her Majesty's Consul at Palermo had caused to be arrested a deserter from that regiment, who had taken refuge on board an American barque at Palermo; but, that although in the first instance that step had been taken with the consent of the American Consul at Malta, the American captain had reclaimed the prisoner, and the American Consul, under instructions from his Minister at Rome, had made a similar demand; and Reclaimed by American Consul.

That Sir A. Paget had accordingly telegraphed for instructions for the guidance of the British Consul on this case.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to observe that the only international agreement with Italy with regard to the surrender of deserters is that contained in the XIXth Article of the Treaty with that country of the 8th August, 1863, which declares that, "The Consuls, Vice-Consuls, and Consular Agents of each of the Contracting Parties residing in the dominions or possessions of the other shall receive from the local authorities such assistance as can by law be given to them for the recovery of deserters from the vessels of their respective countries;" but nothing is said in the Treaty about military deserters.

That under these circumstances, it appeared to your Lordship that the demand for the surrender of the prisoner cannot properly be resisted; but that you would be glad to be favoured with the opinion of the Law Officers and Dr. Deane upon the point at the earliest convenience, in order that the necessary instructions might be telegraphed to the Consul at Palermo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

Surrender cannot be resisted.

That the demand for the surrender of the prisoner cannot properly be resisted.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received April 12.)

Temple, April 11, 1876.

My Lord,

Nationality of Prince Bandini.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Rome relative to an application made to him by Prince Bandini Giustiniani to protect his interests as a British subject, together with a letter from the Home Office, to which Department the question was referred for opinion.

That Lord Tenterden was also to transmit to us a Memorandum by Mr. Hertslet, the Chief Librarian of the Foreign Office, in regard to the Treaties which were in force between this country and Sardinia and the Roman States, respectively, at the date of Prince Bandini's naturalization, together with a copy of the Act for naturalizing him and his mother, and copies of the Treaty of Commerce between Great Britain and Sardinia of the 27th February, 1851, and of the Declaration with the Roman States of the 17th November, 1853.

That Lord Tenterden was at the same time to observe that the use of the word "of" for "or" in the extract from the Act quoted by Sir Augustus Paget, which was clearly a clerical error, and the question raised by the Home Office whether the word "or" should not be read "and," did not, in your Lordship's opinion, bear upon the question at issue.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir Augustus Paget in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

He cannot claim privileges, not having resided in the United Kingdom.

That, in our opinion, none of the privileges, by way of immunity, of a natural-born British subject of the United Kingdom, whether immunities in the general sense, or immunities in relation to trade, can be enjoyed or claimed in any foreign country by Prince Bandini under his Naturalization Act, since he has not complied with the condition requiring him to have inhabited and resided within the United Kingdom.

And that Sir A. Paget may properly be instructed to that effect.

Registration no proof of nationality.

THE Lord Chancellor presents his compliments to Lord Tenterden, and with reference to the question referred to in his letter of the 24th instant, and the accompanying correspondence, begs to state, for Lord Derby's information, that he concurs in the opinion of the Law Officers upon the two points submitted to them, viz., that British Consular Officers abroad should not enter in the registers of their Consulates the births of the illegitimate children of British parents, and that registration in a British Consulate affords no proof of nationality.

No. 61.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received September 12.)

Temple, September 12, 1876.

My Lord,

Arrests of British subjects in Italy.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 16th June last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence, of which a list was therewith annexed, which had taken place between the Foreign Office and Her Majesty's Ambassador at Rome and various parties interested in the matter respecting the arrest by Italian Carabinieri, and the imprisonment of certain British subjects travelling in Italy, the particulars of these occurrences being fully stated in the correspondence.

That the cases in question are three:—

Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill.

1st. The arrest and imprisonment of Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill in the Province of Ravenna, on account of which, and of their alleged ill-treatment, they have demanded an indemnity from the Italian Government.

In this case it would appear that the Carabinieri implicated in these proceedings have been subjected to some disciplinary punishment, the nature of which has, however, not been clearly ascertained, whilst the Italian Government have expressed their regret at the occurrence.

Mr. Kay.

2ndly. The arrest of the Rev. D. Kay, which it is asserted by the Italian authorities was attributable to his having refused to give his name or any sufficient account of himself when first accosted by the Carabinieri; and it will be observed that, although Mr. Kay had the opportunity afforded him of furnishing an explanation on these points, he has not as yet done so in any way that can be considered satisfactory.

Messrs. Allies.

3rdly. The arrest of the Rev. Mr. Allies and his brother, Mr. E. H. Allies, which was accompanied by the infliction of a fine on the first-named gentleman.

That it would be seen, by your Lordship's despatch to Sir A. Paget No. 150 of the 22nd July last, that in the case of the Messrs. Allies Her Majesty's Government considered that the circumstances warranted their appealing to the Italian Government for a special pecuniary compensation and for the return of the fine imposed.

That the despatches to Sir A. Paget Nos. 95, 142, 150, 151, 152, and 222 of last year would put us in possession of the views of Her Majesty's Government in regard to those several cases, whilst they form the basis of Sir A. Paget's remonstrances to the Italian Government on behalf of the complainants.

Italian argument.

That the final appeal to that Government had, as we would see, been answered by the Memorandum communicated by General Menabrea, the Italian Ambassador at this Court, to your Lordship on the 24th ultimo, which sets forth the grounds upon which the Italian Government decline to grant any compensation in the cases referred to.

That Memorandum asserts the principle that the Administration are debarred by the nature of the Italian laws from granting any such compensation upon a diplomatic remonstrance, as in the present case, and that such compensation could only be awarded by a Decree of the Law Courts following upon proceedings taken therein by the complaining parties, to whom such Courts are always open, but which have not been instituted by any of the complainants in the cases under consideration; whilst it is at the same time represented that in default of such proceedings the occurrences complained of cannot properly form the subject of diplomatic representation.

That the Memorandum presented by General Menabrea states explicitly what is the bearing of Italian law upon the cases in question; what is the course which, according to the Italian view, the aggrieved parties should have taken to obtain redress; and maintains that the demand for compensation in such cases could not be admitted without an entire departure from those principles which the Italian Government affirm are equally applicable to Italian subjects and to foreigners.

That before accepting the answer of the Italian Government as final, and making any communications in accordance therewith to the several parties interested, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether the explanation thus given by the Italian Government affords valid ground for their refusal to entertain any claim for compensation, and whether, taken with the expression of regret by that Government for any undue severity which the complainants may have experienced, the cautionary Circular of the 11th July, issued to the Carabinieri, and referred to in the correspondence, and the punishment which Her Majesty's Government are assured was inflicted upon the Carabinieri in the case of Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill, Her Majesty's Government may rest satisfied that they cannot in justice require more from the Government of Italy.

That a secondary question, as we will perceive, arises out of this correspondence, namely, as to the precautionary measures to be adopted for the future to secure British subjects as far as possible from the repetition of such occurrences, and we would find the views of Her Majesty's Government on that subject sufficiently explained in your Lordship's despatches to Sir A. Paget Nos. 151 and 152 of the 22nd July last.

That your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether, in this particular, we concur in the principle therein set forth as to the necessity of coming to a clear understanding with the Italian Government as to the nature of the documentary evidence which British travellers are to be expected to produce to prove their identity if called upon to do so, and as to the mode by which it is proposed to make known whatever arrangement may be come to on this particular point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, if we rightly understand General Menabrea's Memorandum, he intends to assert that, according to the law of Italy, when a person has been injured by the action of an Agent of the Government, he may have recourse to the Tribunals of the country, and may obtain a Decree not merely against the individual inflicting the injury, but against the Government, and that in such case the Government will be at liberty, and, indeed, be bound to pay over the amount of compensation decreed.

If actions may be brought against Italian Government for redress, diplomatic action is not immediately called for.
Doctrine that Government is not liable to be sued for compensation for actions of its Agents, untenable.
In absence of local remedy, diplomatic intervention necessary.

If this be the true meaning of the Memorandum and a correct statement of the Italian law, then we agree that the British subjects who have made complaint of the treatment they have been subjected to cannot call upon the British Government to interfere on their behalf diplomatically, until, at all events, they have done all in their power to obtain redress from the Tribunals of Italy. If, however, General Menabrea merely intends to insist that in a case where a British subject has been injured by an Agent of the Government, such subject ought to sue the individual inflicting the wrong in the Italian Courts, and ought not to seek any compensation from the Government, we are quite unable to subscribe to such a doctrine. It appears to us that if a British subject, whilst he is in a foreign State, receives an injury from the Government of such State, or from an Agent for whose acts the Government is responsible (and it does not appear to be contended that the Italian Government is not responsible for the acts of the Carabinieri), and no adequate remedy is provided by the municipal law of such foreign State, it is not only the right, but it may be, according to circumstances, the duty of our Government to obtain, by diplomatic intervention, the payment of compensation to the British subject for the injury inflicted upon him.

Subject to the above observations upon the contentions put forward by General Menabrea, we are of opinion that, under all the circumstances of the particular cases submitted for our consideration, Her Majesty's Government may properly conclude that it is not necessary further to press any claim for compensation, but may rest satisfied with what has already been done by the Government of Italy.

As to evidence of identity required of British subjects.

As to the second question asked by your Lordship, we entirely concur in the views of your Lordship as to the necessity for coming to a clear understanding with the Italian Government as to the nature of the documentary evidence which British travellers are to be expected to produce to prove their identity; and we also think that a notification should be published in England and Italy, and at Her Majesty's Legations and Consulates, explaining the requirements of the Italian Government in this respect.

My Lord,

Messrs. Hooper's claim against Japan.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th March ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan (No. 9), together with its inclosures, relative to a claim made by Messrs. Hooper Brothers upon the Japanese Government, which Her Majesty's Minister at Yedo had declined to support, a decision against which Messrs. Hooper now appeal; and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon, especially as to whether Sir Harry Parkes' action in the matter ought not to be approved.*

Right of inland travelling and trading.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was further to transmit to us, for convenience of reference, a copy of the Treaty between England and Japan of the 26th August, 1858, and of the Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Publication of Japanese newspapers. Claim of Mr. Black.

My Lord, Temple, July 5, 1876.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 2nd May, on the subject of the claim of Mr. Black to be compensated by the Japanese Government for losses consequent on the suppression of a Japanese newspaper, published by him in Japan, he, Lord Tenterden, was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Sir H. Parkes on the subject.

As to words "lawful capacity" in Japanese Treaty.

That he was at the same time to call our attention to the VIIIth Article of the Treaty between Great Britain and Japan of the 26th August, 1858, which provides that the "Japanese Government will place no restriction whatever upon the employment by British subjects of Japanese in any lawful capacity," and that Lord Tenterden was to request us to report to your Lordship our opinion whether the words "lawful capacity" were to be understood as excepting such capacities as were unlawful under Japanese law, or only those that were unlawful according to English law.

That in the latter case there might be some ground for Mr. Black's claim for compensation for the interference of the Japanese Government with the workmen in his employ, and that your Lordship would be glad to have our opinion as to whether such a claim could properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If unlawful by Japanese law, Mr. Black's claim cannot be supported.

That, assuming the employment of the Japanese subjects by Mr. Black to have been, as stated by Sir H. Parkes, in a capacity unlawful by Japanese law, we are of opinion that the interference of the Japanese Government with the workmen employed by Mr. Black was not a breach of the VIIIth Article of the Treaty of 1858, and the claim of Mr. Black for compensation cannot properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

Proclamation forbidding import of arms and munitions of war into Maryland, Liberia.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 1st April instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Liberian Consul-General in London (29th March, 1876), forwarding a copy of a Proclamation by the President of Liberia with regard to the importation and sale of fire-arms and munitions of war in the County of Maryland; and that he, Mr. Lister, was at the same time to inform us that a portion of the territories on the West Coast of Africa claimed by Liberia was in insurrection, and had ejected the Liberian authorities; and, under those circumstances, he was to request that we would take the Proclamation into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any, and, if so, what, steps should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in consequence of it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the Proclamation into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

Madagascar.

No. 70.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 10.)

Temple, July 8, 1876.

My Lord,

Marriages in Madagascar according to rites of Church of England.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers in regard to a question of appointing a Vice-Consul at Tananario, in Madagascar, for the purpose of celebrating marriages under the Consular Marriage Act.

That we should observe that Her Majesty's Consul raised a question, in connection with the discussion which had taken place on the subject, as to what he should do if parties were married according to the rites of the Church of England previously to the civil ceremony taking place before him.

That, in most cases where that sort of question had been raised, it had been explained that the Consul had nothing to do with any religious ceremony which parties to a marriage might wish to go through either before or after the Consular ceremony, and that his duty was restricted to seeing that any marriage celebrated before him was solemnized in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Parliament.

Uncivilized countries.

That in the present case, however, it might possibly be contended that a marriage in an uncivilized country such as Madagascar was valid when only the rites of the Church of England were used, and that, therefore, the interference of a Consular authority was unnecessary; and on that point Mr. Lister was to refer us to the two Reports from the Law Officers, which would be found in the accompanying volumes.

That before, therefore, writing to Her Majesty's Consul in regard to that matter, he, Mr. Lister, was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was any doubt as to the validity in that country of marriages celebrated in Madagascar by a clergyman of the Church of England.

That when your Lordship should be acquainted with our opinion as to the strictly legal aspect of the case, your Lordship would consider whether, in view of the difficulty of registration connection with such marriage, it might not be, in any event, desirable to give greater facilities for the celebration of Consular marriages in Madagascar by the appointment of a British Vice-Consul at Tananario.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the "Consular Marriage Act," 12 and 13 Vict., c. 68, provides that nothing in that Act shall confirm, impair, or otherwise affect the validity of any marriage solemnized beyond seas otherwise than as therein provided.

No doubt they are valid.

We have no information as to the law of Madagascar, but we entertain no doubt that a marriage between British subjects celebrated in Madagascar by a clergyman of the Church of England is valid.

My Lord,

Powers of Pro-Consuls. (Circular.)

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 5th October instant, stating that, with reference to our letters of the 12th July and of the 5th August,* in which we reported, for the information of your Lordship, that, in our opinion, a person appointed Pro-Consul by a Consul without the authority of the Secretary of State cannot perform notarial acts under 18 and 19 Vict., c. 42, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying draft of a Circular despatch which had been prepared for the purpose of conferring on Her Majesty's Consuls and Vice-Consuls abroad the power of appointing, on behalf of the Secretary of State, Pro-Consuls for the purposes of the Act in cases where the necessity for such an appointment may arise.

Mr. Lister further stated that he was desired to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Pro-Consuls appointed under the authority conferred upon Consuls and Vice-Consuls by the proposed despatch would be competent to exercise the notarial powers conferred on Pro-Consuls by the Act.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If appointed by authority of Secretary of State, may perform acts under 18 & 19 Vict., cap. 42.

That, in our opinion, Pro-Consuls appointed under the authority conferred upon Consuls and Vice-Consuls by the proposed despatch will be competent to exercise the notarial powers conferred on Pro-Consuls under 18 and 19 Vict., c. 42.

My Lord,

Central Uruguay Railway Company. Threatened seizure, for conveying arms to revolutionists.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 21st December ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Buenos Ayres (Mr. West, No. 114), inclosing copies of correspondence with Major Munro in regard to an application he had received from the Chairman of the Central Uruguay Railway Company requesting his interference on behalf of that railway which the Monte Videan Government had threatened with seizure, on the ground that the Company had forwarded arms and ammunition to the revolutionists.

That he, Lord Tenterden, was also to inclose the correspondence* which had passed between the Foreign Office and the Directors of the Central Uruguay Railway Company in this country upon the same subject, and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion and with any observations we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, there are no reasons which would justify the interference of Her Majesty's Government in the case of the Uruguay Railway Company.

Cannot interfere on ground that British subjects are interested in a foreign railway.

The information expected by the "Elbe" in the course of this month may possibly induce us to modify this opinion, but the fact that some British subjects are interested more or less in a foreign railway affords, as a rule, no reason for the interference of Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord,

"Enmore" and "Belle Hooper" collision (British and American vessels) in Argentine waters. Arrest of "Enmore" by Monte Videan Tribunal.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 20th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Monte Video, relating to the case of the British steamer "Enmore."

That it would be seen that the "Enmore" ran down an American schooner, the "Belle Hooper," in Argentine waters, saved her crew, and towed her into the port of Monte Video; that the "Enmore" was there seized and forcibly detained by order of the Monte Videan Tribunal of Commerce, but was subsequently enabled to escape by the assistance of Commander Dunlop, of Her Majesty's ship "Beacon," acting at the request of Her Majesty's Consul.

That your Lordship was of opinion that the peculiar circumstances reported in the inclosed despatch go far to justify Major Munro in acting as he did; but that, before returning any answer to him, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the legal aspect of the case.

We are also honoured with further letters from Lord Tenterden, bearing date the 24th ultimo and 5th instant respectively, inclosing a further letter and despatch relating to the case of the "Enmore," and requesting that we would take the same into our consideration, together with the papers inclosed in Mr. Lister's letter of the 20th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Admiralty Tribunals competent to arrest the "Enmore."

That the Tribunals exercising Admiralty jurisdiction at Monte Video had, in our opinion, the right to arrest the British ship "Enmore" at the suit of the American ship "Belle Hooper," in a cause of collision, though occurring in Argentine waters.

British Consul should not have aided her escape.

Assuming that the "Enmore" was under arrest by legal process of a Court exercising such Admiralty jurisdiction, Her Majesty's Consul should not have interfered or assisted the "Enmore" in escaping.

Political state of Monte Video may relieve him from blame.

The papers do not show that the authority or proceedings of the Tribunals were stopped by the political state of things at Monte Video. Such an interference with the ordinary administration of justice may, if it existed, relieve the British Consul from blame.

But we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that any answer which may be returned to Her Majesty's Consul should be so worded that all difficulties with either a Monte Videan Government or the United States' Government arising out of the matter may be provided against.

Detention of British vessel "Airolo" by French authorities at Tahiti.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 16th December ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further letter from Messrs. de Wolf and Co. (13th December, 1875), stating that they consider themselves entitled to compensation on account of the seizure and detention of their vessel, the "Airolo," by the French authorities at Tahiti, and to request that we would take that paper into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence relating to the case, which was referred for our opinion on the 11th December instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

The master's conduct led to her detention. Messrs. de Wolf have no claim to compensation.

That, in our opinion, the conduct of the master having led to the legal detention of the "Airolo," Messrs. de Wolf and Co., the owners of that vessel, are not in a position to call upon Her Majesty's Government to obtain compensation for such detention from the French Government.

My Lord,

Reciprocity Treaty between United States and Sandwich Islands.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 20th December last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers noted in the accompanying List relative to a Treaty of Reciprocity which was concluded on the 30th January last between the United States of America and the King of the Sandwich Islands, and subsequently modified by a vote of the United States' Senate.

That a copy of the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation between Great Britain and the Sandwich Islands of the 10th July, 1851, was likewise inclosed; and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the clause in the Memorandum annexed to the United States and Hawaiian Treaty, which provides that "His Hawaiian Majesty shall not lease or otherwise dispose of, or create any lien upon any port, harbour, or other territory in his dominions, or grant any special privilege or rights of use therein to any other Power, State, or Government, nor make any Treaty by which any other nation shall obtain the same privileges," &c., does not constitute an infraction of the most-favoured-nation privileges secured to this country under Article III of the Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty.

Mr. Lister was also pleased to say that he was further to request that we would advise your Lordship as to the course which Her Majesty's Government would be justified in adopting in the above case with a view of vindicating their Treaty rights in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

No infraction of British "most-favoured-nation" rights.

That, in our opinion, the Memorandum annexed to the Treaty of Reciprocity concluded between the United States of America and the King of the Sandwich Islands on the 30th January, 1875, does not of itself constitute an infraction of the most-favoured-nation privileges secured to Great Britain under Article III of the Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty of 1851.

The Memorandum provides for two matters, viz.:—

1. That His Hawaiian Majesty, so long as the Treaty shall remain in force, will not lease or otherwise dispose of, or create any lien upon any port, harbour, or other territory in his dominions, or grant any special privilege or rights of use therein to any other Power, State, or Government.

2. That during the continuance of the Treaty he will not make any Treaty by which any other nation shall obtain the same privileges relative to the admission of any articles free of duty secured by the first-named Treaty to the United States.

With regard to the first of these matters, we beg to observe that, so long as the King of Hawaiia abstains from leasing, or otherwise disposing of, or creating any lien upon any port, harbour, or other territory in his dominions, and from granting any special privilege or rights of use therein to any Power, State, or Government whatsoever, he will be fulfilling his Treaty obligations both to this country and the United States, and neither Government will have any right to complain.

It is true the King may find himself in a dilemma should the word "grant" be hereafter said to mean that British ships are no longer entitled to use in each particular case those privileges to which, under Article III of the Honolulu Treaty of the 10th July, 1851, they are entitled to, or he grant hereafter to the United States of America any privilege which he is bound to extend to this country by Article III of the Treaty of 1851, but debarred from so extending by his stipulation in the Memorandum.

Possible difficulties should be pointed out.

We think that it will be a prudent course to point out at once to the Hawaiian Government the possibility of such difficulties arising.

Existing British privileges remain untouched.

2. With regard to the second of these matters, it seems to us that the Treaty with the United States merely prohibits future Treaties with other Powers, and leaves untouched the privileges secured to this country by the existing Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty.

My Lord,

Reciprocity Treaty between United States and Sandwich Islands. Bearing on British interests.

WE were honoured by your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 11th May last, stating, that with reference to our Report of the 24th January last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous correspondence on the subject, a further despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Commissioner and Consul-General at Honolulu, relative to the Reciprocity Treaty concluded between the United States and the Sandwich Islands. Mr. Lister further stated that he also inclosed a Memorandum which had been prepared at the Foreign Office, containing observations with respect to the possible effect of the Treaty in question upon the commercial interests of Great Britain; and that he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon, with especial reference to the question as to whether most-favoured-nation treatment can be claimed for this country in regard to customs duties under Article III of the Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty of 1851 in the event of the denunciation by the Hawaiian Government of Articles IV, V, and VI of that Treaty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Most favoured-nation treatment as to customs dues cannot be claimed under Article III of British Treaty in event of abrogation of Article IV.

That in our opinion Article IV of the Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty provides for customs duties, and would have been unnecessary if Article III of that Treaty had already made a similar provision. Article III therefore refers to favours, privileges, and immunities other than customs duties.

And in the event of the denunciation by the Hawaiian Government of Articles IV, V, and VI of the Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty, all stipulations between the two countries in reference to customs duties will cease at the expiration of the twelve months' notice.

As to right to abrogate Articles IV, V, and VI.

With respect to the construction of Article XVII of the Anglo-Hawaiian Treaty, we are of opinion that the right of either of the Contracting Parties to terminate Articles IV, V, and VI is not controlled by the words "In order that the two Contracting Parties may have the opportunity of hereafter treating and agreeing upon such other arrangements as may tend still further to the improvement of their mutual intercourse, and to the advancement of the interests of their respective subjects."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Minister at Tehran, in which Mr. Thomson stated that the Persian Government had granted a Persian subject, named Agha Mehdee, born in India of Persian parents, the right of trading, on payment of the 5 per cent. duty established by Treaty for British merchants, but that they had given notice that they would in future consider and treat such persons as Persian subjects within Persian territory.

That Lord Tenterden was also to inclose a Memorandum which had been drawn up in the Foreign Office on the subject. That the question which had thus been raised by Mr. Thomson respecting the right of persons of Persian origin, born within Her Majesty's dominions, but residing in Persia, to the privileges of British subjects in the latter country, appeared to your Lordship to be primarily one of international law, and, in that view, Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Such persons not entitled to privileges of British subjects in Persia.

That, assuming the law of Persia applicable to the cases which Mr. Thomson expects may arise to be correctly stated by the Persian Minister, a man born of Persian parents in Her Majesty's dominions, in our opinion, cannot in Persia claim or be entitled to the privileges of a British subject, but is in Persia subject to all the obligations which the law of Persia imposes upon its own subjects.

My Lord,

Swann v. Vines. Production of Foreign Office papers in Courts of Law.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to me two letters which your Lordship had received from Mr. Bennett, solicitor for Mr. Swann, who had an action at law pending against Mr. Vines, late Her Majesty's Consul at St. Michael's and Islay, requesting the production, before competent authority, of the originals or authentic copies of certain documents in the archives of the Foreign Office, which Mr. Bennett considered to be necessary for the support of his client's case: and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that I would favour your Lordship with my opinion as to the reply which should be returned to that application.

That the documents referred to in Mr. Bennett's last letter, together with other papers upon the subject of the case Swann v. Vines, were also forwarded to me therewith for my inspection.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

That, referring to previous cases, I find that the Librarian—now Mr. Hertslet—has been usually the person served with a subpœna duces tecum, and as no inconvenience will probably arise by a similar course being followed in the present case, I am of opinion that Mr. Bennett may properly be answered that Mr. Hertslet is the proper person to produce any documents of which the production can legally be called for.

"Privileged" documents. Mr. Hertslet not to produce them except by direction of the Judge.

With reference to the documents specified in the list referred to in Mr. Bennett's letter dated the 25th January, 1876, I am at a loss to see how some of them can be made evidence, whilst others are in the nature of privileged communications, and I therefore suggest that if Mr. Hertslet is called upon to produce any of these documents, he should not do so, except, in each case, by direction of the Judge who tries the cause.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received April 12.)

My Lord,

Commercial privileges granted by Portugal to France and extended to Great Britain.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon, in which attention was called to the circumstance that the Portuguese customs authorities would require, in extending to Great Britain, under the recent Portuguese Law and Royal Decree, the privileges of Tariff B annexed to the Treaty of the 11th July, 1866, between France and Portugal, the production of certain documents, according to the stipulations of that Treaty.

That we should observe that Mr. Watson remarks that those documents were not required to be produced under the Treaty of the 3rd July, 1842, between this country and Portugal.

That Mr. Lister was therefore to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our early convenience, with our opinion on the point raised in Mr. Watson's despatch, viz., whether the provisions of the Treaty of 1842 should modify the conditions attached to the privileges recently granted to British Trade.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Portugal justified in requiring production of certain documents before extending privileges to Great Britain.

That, in our opinion, the Portuguese Government have a right to require, in extending to Great Britain, under the recent Portuguese law and Royal Decree, the privileges of Tariff B annexed to the Treaty of the 11th July, 1866, between France and Portugal, the production of the documents referred to in Mr. Lister's letter.

In arriving at this conclusion, we have assumed that the provisions under Tariff B of the Treaty in question are more favourable to the British merchant than the provisions of the Treaty of July 1842, between Great Britain and Portugal, and that the last-mentioned Treaty will not be in any way affected to the prejudice of the British importer.

Temple, June 2, 1876.

My Lord,

Delagoa Bay. Case of the "William Shaw," captured previous to the arbitration.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the case of the "William Shaw."

That that vessel, a schooner belonging to Natal, was seized in September 1871 by Portuguese officials, in the Mapoota River, which was part of the territory included in the "Delagoa Bay" question then in dispute between Great Britain and Portugal. That she was seized on the ground that she ought, before entering the Mapoota River, to have gone to Lorenço Marques and paid certain duties. That she was also accused of having on board arms not mentioned in her manifest, and her master was said to have previously offended against the Portuguese Customs Laws.

That, after her capture she was taken to Lorenço Marques, and fined 100*l*. Her owner offered to pay the fine under protest, but his offer was refused, and the case was referred to the Supreme Court at Mozambique, which Court, however, did not appear to have given any formal decision thereon.

That in April 1872 the owner, having represented the case to Her Majesty's Government, claiming 3,600*l*. damages on account of the seizure of the vessel (he having no interest in the cargo), it was held that, as the question as to the sovereignty over the territory in which the seizure took place was about to be referred to arbitration, nothing should then be done in the matter.

That some months afterwards the "William Shaw" was released on a bond being given for the payment of such sum as might be awarded by a competent Tribunal in the event of the arbitration being decided against Great Britain, and it appeared that she was subsequently wrecked.

That since those transactions, the Delagoa Bay Arbitration had been decided in favour of Portugal, and, on the strength of that decision, the Portuguese Vice-Consul at Durban had claimed from the owner the sum of 750*l*., the amount named in the bond.

That, on the other hand the owners of the "William Shaw" and of the cargo contended that the result of the arbitration did not justify the proceedings of the Portuguese authorities at a time when the territorial sovereignty over Delagoa Bay was still in dispute, and that they claimed as compensation for the loss inflicted on them by those proceedings the sums respectively of 3,600*l*. and 800*l*.

That Lord Tenterden was to point out that it appeared from Sir H. Bulwer's despatch of the 30th March, 1876, that in October 1873 the then Lieutenant-Governor of Natal undertook, in a letter to the Portuguese authorities at Lorenço Marques, that the Government of Natal would hold itself responsible for the payment of the amount of the security mentioned in the bond to be given for the release of the vessel, but it did not appear that any claim had yet been made on the Colony for the fulfilment of that undertaking.

That, in those circumstances, Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

French award gives to Portugal the territory where the vessel was seized.

That in our opinion the award of the President of the French Republic must be held to give the territory in which the "William Shaw" was seized to the Portuguese at the time of the seizure; and in no sense can such territory be deemed neutral before or pending the arbitration.

If we entertained any doubts upon this general question, the terms of the bond in the particular case of the "William Shaw" would put an end to such doubts.

Her Majesty's Government cannot claim compensation.

Her Majesty's Government cannot therefore, in our opinion, make any claim whatever on the Portuguese Government for compensation on account of the loss suffered by the late Mr. David Leslie by reason of his ship being seized by the Portuguese in Portuguese territory for a breach of Portuguese law.

Bond entered into must be paid to Portuguese authorities.

We do not find amongst the papers transmitted to us the decision of the Tribunal at Mozambique, but, assuming that Tribunal to have awarded the sum of 750*l*., the Government of Natal is responsible for that sum to the Portuguese authorities at Lorenço Marques.

The subsequent loss of the "William Shaw" in no way affects that responsibility.

Case of Mr. Zoru, naturalized in Bombay under Indian Naturalization Act.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 6th October last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers, in which the question was raised as to whether Mr. Zoru was entitled to be furnished with a British passport in a foreign country, by virtue of a certificate of naturalization granted to him by the Government of Bombay under the provisions of the "Indian Naturalization Act No. XXX of 1852," a copy of which was also inclosed.

As to right to British protection abroad.

That it would be observed that in the letter from the India Office an opinion was expressed that Mr. Zoru was entitled to British protection abroad, as having been naturalized under the Indian Act already mentioned, which was based on the English Naturalization Act of 1844.

That your Lordship, however, observed that the 8th clause of the Indian Act contained the words "within the said territories," which would seem to imply that naturalization under it was confined to persons while actually resident in Her Majesty's Indian possessions.

That it was not improbable that the words in question were introduced into the Indian Act of 1852 in consequence of the provisions of the Act 10 and 11 Vict., c. 83, enacting that the Naturalization Acts passed by the Legislatures of any of Her Majesty's foreign possessions should have the force of law within such possessions.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take the subject into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Consul-General Stanley.

That a copy of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Laws of Naturalization and Allegiance was inclosed, at page 94 of which would be found a copy of the Act 10 and 11 Vict., c. 83, and at pages 96 and 97 the Instructions issued to Diplomatic and Consular Officers abroad, relative to the grant of passports to persons naturalized in British Colonies.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the privileges of naturalization to which Mr. Zoru is entitled are defined and limited by the Indian Naturalization Act No. XXX.

Consul-General Stanley right in refusing him a British passport.

And since that Act in terms confines the rights, privileges, and capacities thereby intended to be conferred to persons within the territories under British Government in India, Mr. Consul-General Stanley may properly be answered that he has acted rightly in refusing a British passport to Mr. Zoru.

Temple, March 15, 1876.

My Lord,

Case of the "Dolores."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 13th January last, stating that with reference to our Reports of the 20th September and the 21st and 29th October relative to the case of the "Dolores," he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship had thought it advisable, before sending any instructions upon the subject to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, to obtain a copy of the proceedings in the case. That had now been done, and that Mr. Layard's despatch inclosing copy and translation of the proceedings was sent therewith.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that document into our consideration, together with the former papers, which were also sent to us, and that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we saw any reason to modify the opinion expressed in the above-mentioned Reports.

That the point to which Lord Tenterden was to request that we would be good enough especially to direct our attention was that paragraph in our Report of the 20th September, in which we state that the "Dolores" was on a "lawful voyage, she carried a legal cargo, and her papers were regular and in perfect order. The only charge against her is, that the manifest was kept back from the boarding officer."

That those statements, Lord Tenterden was to observe, though very probably true, rested entirely on the evidence of the claimants, and were flatly contradicted by that of the captors, as would be seen from Sir John Walsham's despatch No. 548 of the 20th September, and from the copy of the proceedings then sent to us.

That, in those circumstances, your Lordship felt doubtful whether you would be justified in making use of the language of our Report as quoted above.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden, bearing date the 27th January, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose to us a further paper respecting the case of the "Dolores," with a request that we would have the kindness to take it into our consideration in conjunction with the correspondence on that subject which was already before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the information before us at the time when the Reports of the 20th September and the 21st and 29th October, 1875, were respectively made, led us to the conclusion that the "Dolores" was adjudged a lawful prize by the Tribunal at Algeciras, solely on the ground that the manifest was kept back from the boarding officer. It now, however, appears, from the copy of the proceedings in the case before the Spanish Court, which is laid before us, that there was evidence adduced tending to show that the vessel was engaged, not in lawful trade, but upon a smuggling adventure, and that the condemnation proceeded upon the ground that this fact was established.

Spanish Court justified in condemning for smuggling.

This being so, we cannot say that the Spanish Court were not justified in coming to the conclusion at which they arrived, though possibly they attached more weight to the evidence of the captors than we should have been inclined to do.

No further interference warranted.

We therefore think that the decision of the Spanish Tribunal was regular, and, being the decision of a Court of competent jurisdiction, that no further official interference in the case is warranted.

Gentlemen, Foreign Office, November 2, 1875.

Intestate estate of William Higgs.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you the accompanying despatch (No. 568) from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, in which he asks for instructions as to how he should act with regard to the property left by William Higgs, a British subject, who has lately died at Madrid, intestate.

The case which formed the subject of the correspondence in 1872, referred to by Mr. Layard (inclosed herewith)† differed from this, but in the course of that correspondence the proper mode of dealing with the property of British subjects dying intestate in Spain was incidentally laid down by the Law Officers of the Crown; and it is on account of the difficulty of following the course then prescribed that Mr. Layard applies for further instructions.

As to validity of old Treaties with Spain.

You will see that the course prescribed by the Law Officers in 1872 was founded on the provisions of the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain of 1667; and the question now raised is in the first instance dependent upon that of the validity of the ancient Treaties with Spain, which question has been referred to you for reconsideration in my two letters of the 26th ultimo; since, if those Treaties are ultimately decided to be no longer valid, their provisions will cease to afford any guidance in the matter.

If, however, you should, on reconsideration, come to the conclusion that the Treaties are still in force as regards British subjects in Spain, it will remain to be considered how the provisions of the Treaty of 1667 can be complied with in face of the difficulties to which Mr. Layard calls attention; and it appears to Lord Derby that the intention of the Treaty would be sufficiently met in this, and in similar cases, if, in the absence of any objection on the part of persons interested, Her Majesty's Consul were to remit the proceeds of the estate in the usual manner to this country, for the benefit of the next of kin.

I am to request that you will be good enough to take the inclosed papers into your consideration, and favour Lord Derby with your opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mr. Layard's last despatch.

I am, &c.
(Signed) TENTERDEN.

Law Officers' Report in reply to the foregoing Letter.

Opinion. Cases of intestacy are governed by Treaty of 1667.

That, in our opinion, the Article XXXIV of the Treaty of 1667 governs the case of British subjects dying intestate in Spain, and that Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to take that Article for his guidance in all cases of intestacy.

Mr. Layard's attention should be called to the words of that Article, from which he will see that the merchants in whose hands the goods, papers, writings, and books of accounts are to be deposited need not be British merchants.

Remuneration for custody of goods, &c.

We see no objection to the allowing a reasonable remuneration to the persons who have the custody of the goods, papers, and documents belonging to the intestate.

* The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be discovered when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain from the Law Officers the original as drawn up by them. The Law Officers, however, do not appear to retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the substance of the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has therefore been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as without it the bare Report, without the preamble, might not be wholly intelligible.

My Lord,

Capture of the "Lark" and detention of British subjects on board.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 24th January last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th May last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further correspondence relative to the case of the "Lark."

That we should see from that correspondence that, in accordance with our abovementioned Report, instructions were sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid to inform the Spanish Government that Her Majesty's Government were willing to accept the sum of 1,550*l.*, instead of 3,150*l.* originally claimed as compensation for the British subjects captured on board the "Lark;" and to express the hope that, on reconsideration, the Spanish Government would recognize the justice of the claims in question, and pay the reduced amount then claimed; but that the Spanish Government had declined to admit the claims or to pay any compensation.

That, in those circumstances, Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence which was sent therewith for convenience of reference, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps that should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government may insist on Spain paying compensation.

That we are still of opinion that your Lordship may properly insist, in the strongest manner consistent with diplomatic usage, upon compensation being made to the British subjects who were taken out of the "Lark," and detained as prisoners by the Spanish authorities.

We have, &c.

My Lord,

British vessel "Amalia," seized by Spanish guardacosta.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office, together with previous papers, on the subject of the capture by a Spanish guardacosta of the British vessel "Amalia," and the proceedings subsequently taken against certain of the crew by the guardacosta; and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would have the goodness to take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the case, and inform you what course we considered it would be advisable that Her Majesty's Government should now take in the matter.

That Lord Tenterden was to add that, as the affair was pressing, your Lordship would be glad to receive our report as soon as possible.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Proceedings against crew of the latter illegal. Her Majesty's Government should compensate.

That, in our opinion, the proceedings against the four Spanish sailors at Gibraltar have been illegal, and the men should be at once liberated, with fair compensation to them individually.

With respect to Her Majesty's Government and the Spanish Government, we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that the present case may be of considerable use for the future.

And we are of opinion that, whilst regret may be expressed by Her Majesty's Government for the proceedings against the four men at Gibraltar, Her Majesty's Government may very properly insist upon the Spanish Government expressing their regret at the insult offered to the British flag by a Spanish Government vessel in boarding and seizing a vessel flying that flag on the high seas, and far beyond Spanish jurisdiction.

Spanish Government should be pressed to respect British flag in future, and to compensate owners of the "Amalia."

And Her Majesty's Government may further properly insist upon the Spanish Government giving directions to all their vessels to respect the British flag in future cases, and upon compensation being made to the owners of the "Amalia" and her cargo for any loss or expenses incurred by the seizure, and return of that vessel to Gibraltar.

We have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received March 25.)

Temple, March 25, 1876.

My Lord,

Case of the "Uruguay," late "Octavia."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th January last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office upon the subject of the detention, at Kingstown, Jamaica, of the steamer "Uruguay" (formerly the "Octavia").

Connected with Cuban insurgents. Detained at Jamaica.

That the vessel in question was originally British, but she had lately become nominally the property of an Uruguan. It was, however, notorious that she really belonged to persons connected with the Cuban insurgents, and that she was intended to be employed in landing arms, and probably men, in Cuba. The Uruguan Government, at the instance of the Government of Spain, had notified to Her Majesty's Government that she was no longer entitled to fly the Uruguan flag.

That, in those circumstances, it was unlikely that any claim would be preferred diplomatically against Her Majesty's Government on account of her detention; and as no legal proceedings seemed to have been taken by any one interested in her on that account, your Lordship proposed to suggest to the Earl of Carnarvon that the action taken by the Governor of Jamaica in the matter, on the advice of the Attorney-General of the Colony, should be approved.

That it would be seen, however, from the inclosed papers, that considerable doubt was felt at first as to the proper course to follow with regard to the "Uruguay," and that your Lordship would be glad to be informed, for future guidance in cases of a similar nature, whether we were of opinion that the interpretation of the law laid down by the Attorney-General of Jamaica was correct.

Departure with British registry. Capture by Spanish man-of-war.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 23rd March, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 17th January last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing a despatch from the Governor of Jamaica, in which he reported the circumstances of the release from detention at Port Royal, with a British registry, of the "Uruguay" (now rechristened the "Octavia"), and of her subsequent capture and conveyance to Porto Rico by a Spanish man-of-war. That Lord Tenterden was also to inclose further correspondence on the subject, from the latter portions of which it would appear that it was the intention of the Spanish authorities to remove the crew to Cuba.

That, under those circumstances, he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would, at our earliest possible convenience, favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what course Her Majesty's Government should pursue in the matter.

We are also honoured with a further letter, dated the 23rd instant, from Lord Tenterden, stating that, with reference to his letter of that day's date, he was to transmit to us, for our information, the accompanying copies of telegraphic instructions which your Lordship had thought it advisable to address respectively to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid and to Her Majesty's Consul at Porto Rico relative to the case of the "Octavia," together with a further letter from the Board of Admiralty on the same subject, and the reply which your Lordship had caused to be addressed to their Lordships.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

There is no war, therefore no contraband of war. Capture illegal. May demand release.

That there is no war, but merely an insurrection, in Cuba; consequently, there is neither blockade nor contraband of war. The seizure, therefore, of the "Octavia," out of Spanish waters, was, in our opinion, illegal. And, assuming that vessel to have been lawfully under the British flag, and with a British register, Her Majesty's Government may, in our opinion, properly insist upon her immediate release.

The above Report was drafted before the receipt of Lord Tenterden's letter of the 23rd instant and its inclosures.

Resist by force, crew being landed in Cuba. (Reference to "Virginius.")

The antecedents of the ship are so notorious that some allowance may be made for the conduct of the Spanish authorities; but, remembering the treatment received by the crew of the "Virginius," we are of opinion that a force sufficiently strong to overawe all thoughts of resistance may properly be employed to prevent the Spaniards from landing the crew in Cuba.

My Lord,

Case of the "Octavia." Release of British subjects.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 27th ultimo relative to the case of the "Octavia," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying telegram from Her Majesty's Consul at Puerto Rico, and a letter from the Admiralty, from which we should see that all the British subjects taken on board that vessel (twenty-two in number) had been handed over to the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Eclipse" and taken to St. Thomas.

Detention of master, his wife, and three Cubans.

That the "Octavia" herself, however, the captain and his wife, and three Cubans, were still detained at Puerto Rico pending instructions from Madrid.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, together with those already before us; and that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we had prepared a Report on the letter of Lord Tenterden of the 27th March, 1876, but in consequence of the action taken by the Spanish Government, as stated in the papers transmitted with Lord Tenterden's letter of the 29th, we will not trouble your Lordship with that Report, as the circumstances are changed.

Her Majesty's Government may demand their release and that of the vessel.

We are of opinion that Mr. Layard may now properly be instructed to press upon the Spanish Government the illegality of the seizure of the "Octavia" out of Spanish waters, and to claim the immediate release of the ship, her master, his wife, and the members of the crew not yet released.

My Lord,

Claim of Mr. J. E. Whitman. Losses caused by Spanish Bank at Havana.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th March ultimo, stating that, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers and Dr. Deane of the 25th March, 1874, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Mr. James Whitman (March 14, 1876), relative to the claim of his brother, Mr. J. Edward Whitman, to compensation for losses alleged to have been caused to him by the action of the Spanish Bank, and of other banks and individuals at Havana acting under the influence of the Spanish Bank, with regard to certain speculations in gold in which he was engaged; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, together with the previous papers which were inclosed therewith,* and that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we see any reason to modify the opinion expressed in the above-mentioned Report of the 25th March, 1874.

Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere.

My Lord,

Mr. Kynock's claim. Cuba. "Figueredo" estate.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th April instant, stating that, with reference to the Report of the Law Officers and Dr. Deane of the 14th August, 1874, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further correspondence relative to the claim of Mr. Kynock against the Spanish authorities in Cuba.

That we should see from that correspondence that the Spanish Government had proposed a mode of settling the claim which Mr. Kynock maintained to be quite illusory, and that the Acting British Consul-General at Havana concurred in Mr. Kynock's view of the proposal.

Lord Tenterden also stated that, in these circumstances, he was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence, which was also sent therewith, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course that should be pursued in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That in our opinion the proposal of the Spanish Government will, as stated by Mr. Kynock and the Acting British Consul-General at the Havana, be of very slight, if of any use to Mr. Kynock.

Loss caused by acts of Spanish Government Agents. Spanish Government should indemnify him, and recoup themselves.

The loss incurred by Mr. Kynock was caused by the acts of those employed by the Spanish Government, and Her Majesty's Government may properly urge upon the Spanish Government the obligation of indemnifying Mr. Kynock, leaving the Spanish Government to recoup itself out of the produce of the sale of the Figueredo Brothers, and not relieving itself of the liability to indemnify Mr. Kynock by throwing the chances of the sale of the estate upon him.

My Lord,

Case of the "Victoria." Messrs. Durroch's claim for her detention.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd January last, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 20th July and 4th October, relating to the case of the "Victoria," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us letters from the owners of that vessel, requesting that your Lordship would demand from the Spanish Government a sum of 6,000*l.* for losses sustained by them owing to her detention at Barcelona by the Spanish authorities, and that Mr. Lister was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in making that claim upon the Spanish Government.

That the correspondence in that case was inclosed for convenience of reference if required.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Lister, of the 9th February last, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 22nd January, respecting the case of the British steamer "Victoria," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Barcelona on the subject, and to request that we would take it into our consideration, together with the previous papers which were then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Case before Spanish Courts. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government could not, at any time, have interfered diplomatically in the case of the "Victoria," the case being before the Tribunals of an independent country.

And this opinion is not modified by the fact that the "Victoria" has been burnt whilst under the custody of the Spanish Courts, for it appears from Mr. Layard's despatch of the 29th November, 1875, that the owners of the "Victoria" might have released the ship on giving security.

And we are further of opinion that Messrs. Durroch may properly be informed that their claim for 6,000*l*. cannot be demanded by your Lordship from the Spanish Government as a compensation for their losses by reason of the ship's detention at Barcelona.

My Lord,

Case of the "Amalia." Spanish captors tried at Gibraltar for piracy.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th April ultimo, stating that, with reference to our report of the 23rd March last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us further correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the case of the "Amalia," a British vessel lately captured by a Spanish guardacosta while on a voyage from Gibraltar bound for Oren, and which vessel was subsequently retaken by her crew, who took her and the four Spaniards placed on board into Gibraltar, where the captors were charged with piracy. That we would see that, in accordance with the advice contained in our above-mentioned report, the four Spaniards had been set at liberty, and that Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid had been instructed, in informing the Spanish Government of their release, to make a strong representation as to the capture of the "Amalia." That no further action, therefore, appeared to be called for at present, but that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion upon the proceedings taken in the matter by the authorities at Gibraltar, under the advice of the Attorney-General of the Colony.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to say that the previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No case of piracy. No foundation for proceedings.

That the proceedings taken by the authorities at Gibraltar against the Spanish sailors do not, in our opinion, admit of any justification, for we are unable to agree with the Attorney-General at Gibraltar, that there was a prima facie case, or anything like a prima facie case of piracy, and without this supposed piratical act there was no foundation for the proceedings.

My Lord,

Case of the "Octavia." Intention to submit to Prize Court.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th April last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 1st of that month, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid (Mr. Layard, No. 110, April 1, 1876) relative to the case of the "Octavia," and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Mr. Layard should be instructed to protest against the intention announced by the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs of submitting the case to a Prize Court, bearing in mind that there was no war, and that the information at present before Her Majesty's Government was to the effect that the "Octavia" was a British vessel, and was captured by a Spanish ship of war on the high seas.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to inclose the previous papers for convenience of reference.

We were also honoured with a letter from Mr. Lister, dated the 18th April ultimo, stating that, with reference to Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Porto Rico, containing fuller details as to the recent capture on the high seas near St. Thomas of the British steamer "Octavia" by the Spanish sloop of war "Hernan Cortes," and the subsequent proceedings relative to the "Octavia" and those on board her, and to request that we would take the inclosed despatches into our consideration, together with the papers already before us, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the case at our earliest convenience.

We were also honoured with a note from Mr. Lister, dated the 22nd April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Porto Rico, and to request that we would have the goodness to take it into our consideration in conjunction with the other papers before us relative to the case of the "Octavia."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Term "Prize Court," in time of peace.

That the term "Prize Court" may possibly be employed in a loose sense, but however that may be Her Majesty's Government may, we think, properly take higher ground, which will make all reference to the expression "Prize Court" needless.

Her Majesty's Government may demand release of vessel and crew seized on high seas.

And in our opinion Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to inform the Spanish Government that Her Majesty's Government claims the immediate release of the British ship "Octavia," and of all the persons on board that ship seized on the high seas by a Spanish man of war.

My Lord,

"Octavia." Doubts as to her right to hoist British flag.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th May instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 12th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter (to Mr. Farrer, 2nd May, 1876) and its inclosure from the Registrar of Seamen, expressing a doubt whether the "Octavia," at the time of her capture, was legally a British vessel, the bonâ fide property of a British subject, and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, together with those already before us.

That your Lordship had requested Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies to obtain from the Governor of Jamaica proof as to the nationality of M. de Cardova, the purchaser of the "Octavia," and any other information his Excellency could apply as to the legality and bonâ fide nature of the transfer of that vessel to British nationality.

That three further despatches relative to the case of the "Octavia" from Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid were also inclosed therewith for our consideration (Mr. Layard's Nos. 210, 224, and 237), and Lord Tenterden further stated that he was to call our special attention [? to the question] raised therein as to whether a Spanish Court is competent to decide upon the right of the "Octavia" to hoist the British flag, and that we would, no doubt, observe the reference to the "Virginius" as bearing on that of the "Octavia."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Spanish Court cannot decide as to flag. (Reference to the case of the "Virginius.")

That, in our opinion, the Spanish Court is not the Court which should inquire into or decide upon the right of the "Octavia" to fly the British flag.

Mr. Layard has, we consider, correctly stated the case of the "Virginius," and the principles which should govern the case of the "Octavia."

My Lord,

Seizure of "Marie Louise" in Sulu Archipelago.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 15th May ultimo, stating that, on the receipt of the Law Officers' Report of the 4th October last, your Lordship requested Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies to endeavour to procure from the Governor of Hong Kong further evidence as to the nationality of Mr. James Benjamin Field, who claimed compensation, as a British subject, from the Spanish Government, on account of his seizure by a Spanish naval officer while on a trading voyage in the Sulu Archipelago on board the German brig "Marie Louise," and on account of the treatment he afterwards underwent at the hands of the Spanish authorities in the Philippines.

Mr. Field's claim against Spain for compensation.

That he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office (May 8, 1876), inclosing a despatch upon the subject from the Governor of Hong Kong, and a statutory declaration made by Mr. Field, and to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, the inclosed documents afford sufficient proof of Mr. Field's British nationality to justify Her Majesty's Government in pressing his claim against the Government of Spain.

The former papers upon this subject were returned to us for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

His nationality proved Her Majesty's Government may support his claim.

That, in our opinion, the papers inclosed in the letter from the Colonial Office afford sufficient proof of Mr. Field's British nationality to justify Her Majesty's Government in pressing his claim against the Government of Spain.

My Lord,

Capture of the "Sultana." Proceedings of the Spanish in the Sulu Archipelago.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th February last, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 22nd and 30th October last relative to the case of the "Sultana," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Brunei (Mr. Low, No. 21), containing further information upon the subject.

That the previous correspondence was also inclosed, together with a précis of the same (4th February, 1876), which had been made in the Foreign Office, and that he, Lord Tenterden, was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we were still of opinion that compensation can be claimed from the Spanish Government for losses sustained by British subjects in connection with the capture of the "Sultana."

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to say that, if so, he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the particular losses or alleged losses for which compensation should be claimed, and the grounds upon which the claims should be based, and that he was to add that action had been delayed in the matter, as it was thought advisable to come to a decision in the first instance as to the line of policy that should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in the general question of Spanish proceedings in the Sulu Archipelago.

That the decision at which Her Majesty's Government had arrived upon that subject would be learnt from your Lordship's despatch to Lord Odo Russell No. 35 of the 17th January, of which a copy was sent therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

As to conduct of Spanish officers. Her Majesty's Government cannot claim compensation for British subjects.

That we have considered the statements contained in the further information forwarded by Her Majesty's Acting Consul-General at Brunei. As to the conduct of the Spanish officers, we adhere to the opinion expressed in the Report of the Law Officers of the 30th October, 1875.

But we do not find that proof of injury to British interests or of loss of property belonging to British subjects which would justify us in advising your Lordship that any claims for compensation should now be made upon the Spanish Government.

My Lord,

Detention of the "Joseph Dodds" with tobacco on board for Huelva.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 9th May, stating that, with reference to the Law Officers' Report of the 14th July last upon the case of the "Joseph Dodds," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further correspondence on the subject.*

That we would see therefrom that, before acting on the above-mentioned Report, your Lordship thought it advisable to obtain further information as to the proceedings of the Spanish Consul-General in the matter, and that the explanations received from the Spanish Government on this point have been referred to Messrs. Argles and Rawlins, the solicitors for the claimants, for their observations.

That Lord Tenterden was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence which was also inclosed, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the steps that should now be taken with regard to the claims arising out of the detention of the "Joseph Dodds."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the explanations received from the Spanish Government, and the observations and statements furnished by Messrs. Argles and Rawlins, show, as it appears to us—

1. That the inquiry made and the information sought at the Spanish Consulate in London was extremely imperfect.

2. That the fact that tobacco formed part of the cargo of the ship was not communicated to the Spanish Consul or his clerks when the inquiry was made and the information asked for.

Messrs. Breslauer should have inquired as to Spanish Customs laws.

3. That Messrs. Breslauer might and should, knowing, as merchants must be presumed to know, the strictness of the Spanish Customs laws, have made more precise and careful inquiries, and obtained more accurate information before they shipped that part of the cargo, which was to be landed at Huelva.

Spanish Consul not to blame.

4. No blame can be thrown upon the Spanish Consul in London for either misleading, or holding back information from, Messrs. Breslauer.

Claim cannot be supported.

We are therefore of opinion that no further steps can be properly taken with regard to the claims arising out of the detention of the "Joseph Dodds."

Case of the "Victoria." Messrs. Grant and Durrock's claim for detention.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Bourke's letter of the 31st May ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from Messrs. Grant, Durrock, and Co. (dated the 26th May), again urging their claim upon the Spanish Government for compensation on account of the proceedings of the Spanish authorities in regard to the "Victoria," and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether there is anything in Messrs. Grant and Co.'s letter to induce us to modify the views expressed in our Report of the 9th May last.

Mr. Bourke was pleased to say that the correspondence in the case was inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot modify former opinion. (See No. 94.)

Claim of Messrs. Bickford, Smith, and Co. Losses through hostilities near Bilbao.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th May last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the claim of Messrs. Bickford, Smith, and Co. to compensation from the Spanish Government for damage said to have been done to their fuse factory at Hurrigorri during the recent hostilities near Bilbao, and that he was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Messrs. Bickford, Smith, and Co.'s claim should be supported.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot support unless Spanish or other subjects are compensated.

That in our opinion the claim of Messrs. Bickford and Co. for compensation in respect of any loss which they may have sustained during the military operations near Bilbao cannot properly be supported unless the Spanish Government gives compensation to the subjects of Spain or of any other country in the same circumstances.

Spanish Decree cannot be considered by Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord,

Seizure of the "Octavia."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 9th August last, stating that on the receipt of our Reports of the 18th May your Lordship instructed Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid to claim from the Spanish Government the immediate release of the British vessel "Octavia," and of all the persons and property seized on board her.

Spanish proposal to deliver her to Her Majesty's Government in deposit, pending decision of Spanish Courts.

That in reply to this claim the Spanish Government proposed that the three prisoners still detained, who are alleged to be Cubans, should be released, and that the vessel and cargo should be placed in deposit, pending the judicial proceedings.

That this proposal Her Majesty's Government were unable to accept, inasmuch as it would involve an obligation to give the vessel up if the decision of the Spanish Court were to be adverse to her, and such an obligation would be a practical admission of the right of jurisdiction of a Spanish Court over a British vessel on the high seas.

That since then the Spanish Minister at this Court has proposed verbally to your Lordship that the prisoners should be released, and the "Octavia" and her cargo delivered to Her Majesty's Government, to be held in deposit until the question as to the seizure of the vessel has been determined, and as this proposal did not involve an admission of Spanish jurisdiction, Her Majesty's Government were disposed to consider it favourably.

As to owner. Mr. Cordova trying to recover her from British custody.

That it occurred, however, to your Lordship that, in the event of the "Octavia" being placed in the custody of British officers at Kingston or elsewhere, the owner, Mr. Cordova, might make an attempt to recover possession of the vessel by legal proceedings in the local Courts.

He undertakes not to do so.

That your Lordship therefore thought it advisable, before replying to the proposal of the Marquis de Casa Laiglesia, to obtain an undertaking from the owner that he would make no such attempt, and would indemnify Her Majesty's Government against expenses incident to the custody of the ship.

With that object a telegram was sent to the Governor of Jamaica, and an answer was received on the 29th ultimo, to the effect that the owner had given this undertaking in writing, and that he would prefer to receive damages and value rather than compensation and restitution.

His supposed bankruptcy.

That the Governor added that there was some doubt as to the owner's solvency.

Bankruptcy Law of Jamaica.

That this last statement raised a fresh difficulty, inasmuch as the Law of Bankruptcy in Jamaica is governed by "Law 25 of 1871," which declares what shall be deemed an act of bankruptcy, and enacts (sections 6, 11, 16 [3]) that the title of the trustee in bankruptcy, who corresponds to the assignee in England, shall relate back to the act of bankruptcy on which the adjudication may have been founded; and as, in this case, an act of bankruptcy may have already been committed by the owner of the "Octavia," his undertaking might be of no value. Her Majesty's Government could hardly set up as a defence to any legal proceedings which might be taken to recover possession of the ship, that the title of the owner has been divested by a judgment of Court of competent jurisdiction abroad, for that is what Her Majesty's Government deny.

That your Lordship would, therefore, be glad to know whether, under the circumstances, the custody of the ship by Her Majesty's Government might be regarded by an English Court as an "Act of State," so that, in the words of Chief Justice Cockburn in Feathers v. the Queen (explaining the case of Baron v. Denman), all private rights of action would become merged in the international question which has arisen between the two Governments.

Lord Tenterden also stated that he was to transmit to us the accompanying papers, as marked in the margin, being the correspondence that had passed relative to the case of the "Octavia" since the date of our above-mentioned Report, together with a copy of the Jamaica Bankruptcy Act, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to whether, in the event of the "Octavia" being brought into Jamaica waters under the proposed arrangement, legal proceedings would lie for the recovery of the possession of the ship and cargo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Report. No action would lie; her detention would be an act of State.

That in this case we are of opinion, and would therefore report, that neither against the officers nor against Her Majesty's Government could any legal proceedings be maintained in respect of the detention of the "Octavia" under the circumstances, inasmuch as the nature of her detention is one for which no action would lie, and we think a petition of right is only a form of procedure by which what would otherwise be an action against an individual is tried against the Crown, inasmuch as the nature of that detention is an act of State. It seems to us, however, that the mere holding as a deposit until the question as to the seizure of the vessel has been determined is an admission of Spanish jurisdiction, and, unless guarded by special terms, involves an agreement to restore the vessel to the possession of the Spanish Government in the event of the Spanish Prize Court deciding that it was a lawful capture.

Spanish proposal involves admission by Her Majesty's Government of Spanish jurisdiction.

We have not overlooked the statement, that "the proposal of the Spanish Government did not involve an admission of Spanish jurisdiction," but we are unable to see how a deposit pendente lite is to be regarded in that character, unless it involves the proposition that we have adverted to, viz., that it is to be handed over to the successful litigant upon the termination of the suit. We should submit, therefore, for your Lordship's consideration, whether the mere taking of the vessel upon such terms does not involve the very admission which in terms is said to be repudiated.

Owner's claim met by his own consent.

With respect to any claim by the owner, it appears to us that his claim would be met by his own consent, and we think any person claiming under him, e.g., a trustee in bankruptcy, would be answered by the same consent; for although the general proposition is true, that the title of trustee in bankruptcy relates back to the act of bankruptcy, yet a bonâ fide dealing by a third person without notice of such act of bankruptcy would be protected, and, further, we do not understand that Her Majesty's Government are setting up any claim of their own to the vessel in question, but are only claiming to hold it as against the Spanish authorities for the true owner, whoever that true owner may turn out to be.

Gibraltar waters. Limits within which vessels wrongfully captured may be retaken, &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Admiralty requesting your Lordship's opinion as to whether any fresh instructions should be issued for the guidance of Her Majesty's naval officers at Gibraltar in regard to the limits within which a vessel wrongfully capturing or captured in British waters might be pursued and taken by one of Her Majesty's ships.

That he was also to inclose a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposed to return to the Admiralty, and to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the proposed answer might properly be sent.

That a copy of the standing orders at present in force at Gibraltar would be found in the Admiralty letter of the 14th December, 1875, sent therewith, and a Law Officers' Report of the 4th October, 1872, bearing upon the subject, was likewise inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Recaptures may be made in British waters, and captors detained.

1. That we are of opinion that in British waters a vessel of any nationality wrongfully captured may be recaptured, and the capturing vessel may be lawfully detained.

British, but not foreign vessels may be recaptured on high seas.

2. On the high seas a British vessel wrongfully captured may be recaptured; but a foreign vessel, though wrongfully captured in British waters, cannot be lawfully recaptured upon the high seas.

But not in foreign waters, &c.

3. In foreign waters no vessel, British or foreign, though wrongfully captured can be lawfully recaptured.

4. The capturing vessel cannot be lawfully detained outside British waters.

We cannot, therefore, concur in the proposed answer to the letter from the Admiralty.

Temple, October 10, 1876.

My Lord,

British vessel "Amazona" at Bahamas, with guns for Cuban insurgents.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th September ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office (August 24, 1876), relative to the expected arrival in Bahama waters of a steamer named the "Amazona," said to fly the British flag, to have on board four guns ready for mounting, and to be intended for use by the Cuban insurgents against the Spanish Government.

That we would see that the Attorney-General of the Colony in his Report to the Governor raised doubts as to whether the provisions of clauses 4 to 10 of the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," were applicable to a vessel in the service of the Cuban insurgents, those insurgents not being recognized as belligerents, and, therefore, not constituting, in his opinion, a "foreign State at war with a foreign State at peace with Her Majesty."

That as the question thus raised by the Attorney-General of the Bahamas was one of great general importance, apart from the special question of the "Amazona," he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

Reference to case of "Salvador."

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to inclose a copy of the Judgment of the Privy Council on the case of the "Salvador," which was of a somewhat similar nature, but which arose under the old Foreign Enlistment Act (59 Geo. III, c. 69), and to add that your Lordship would also be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether the Colonial Attorney-General was correct in supposing that the "Amazona," if proved to be fitted out as a privateer to be used in the service of an unrecognized nationality, might be dealt with as a piratical vessel.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Attorney-General of the Colony has not given due weight to the Interpretation Clause, section 30, of the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870."

Case comes under Foreign Enlistment Act, though Cubans are not "belligerents."

If, therefore, the "Amazona" is in the employment, or intended to be employed, in the service of the insurgents in Cuba, although those insurgents may not be in the strict sense of the word "belligerents," the case is brought within the Statute. The case of the "Salvador," though under the former Foreign Enlistment Act, was decided upon words almost, if not quite, the same with the words in the 30th section of the Act of 1870; and is a clear authority upon the point that as in the 4th section of the Act of 1870, the insurgents are a "foreign State" at war with a foreign State at peace with Her Majesty.

"Amazona" not a pirate.

We doubt if the "Amazona," fitted out as a privateer and to be used in the service of an unrecognized nationality, could be dealt with as a piratical vessel.

The proceedings proper to be taken against her, if the facts should justify any proceedings when she comes to the Bahamas, will be, in our opinion, under the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870."

My Lord,

Spanish vessel "Virgen del Carmen," recaptured by British authorities at Gibraltar. Treatment of guardacosta men on board.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letters from the Colonial Office and their inclosures respecting the case of a Spanish trading vessel, the "Virgen del Carmen," which was alleged to have been captured at Gibraltar in British waters by a Spanish revenue cruizer, and was re-taken by the British authorities with two of the sailors of the guardacosta on board; that those two men had been handed over to the police; and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion whether, under the circumstances therein stated, those Spanish sailors (admitting them to belong to the Spanish navy and to have acted under orders from their superior officers) had rendered themselves amenable in any way to punishment by the local Tribunals.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to call our attention to an opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, dated the 4th October, 1872, in which Lord Granville was advised that "Her Majesty's Government would be exercising only a right in directing the seizure and detention of any Spanish guardacostas and the imprisonment of their crews, in the event of violation of British territory, till the Spanish Government gave some security against the repetition of similar insults."

That the Report in question was inclosed to us in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th August, which was then before us.

We have also the honour to acknowledge two further letters of the 5th instant, on the above subject, from Sir J. Pauncefote, with their inclosures, requesting that they might be considered with those transmitted to the Law Officers with his letter of the 30th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Guardacosta crew, acting under orders, not amenable to punishment.

That, in our opinion, the Spanish sailors taken on board the recaptured vessel, admitting them to belong to the Spanish navy and to have acted under orders from their superior officers, are not amenable in any way to punishment by the local Tribunals.

Sailors so taken should be released, as was the case in the present instance (the Officer administering to Lord Carnarvon, 20th September, 1876), on security for their appearance when required.

My Lord,

Case of the "Virgen del Carmen." As to detention of guardacosta men who captured.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that with reference to the seizure of the "Virgen del Carmen" by a Spanish guardacosta in the harbour of Gibraltar, and to our Report of the 18th ultimo, in reply to the letter from the Foreign Office of the 30th September, in which we stated that sailors taken under the circumstances referred to should be released on security for their appearance when required, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would inform you whether, in our opinion, that course should be adopted in cases where the magistrate was satisfied from the investigation of the case that the offenders were sailors of the Spanish navy, and acted under the orders of their superior officer, or whether the last paragraph of our Report was intended to apply only pending the inquiry.

That, as in default of finding security, the sailors would, it was presumed, be committed to prison, the question was one of grave importance, and your Lordship was desirous to give as full directions as possible for the guidance of the authorities at Gibraltar in such cases.

That the papers bearing on the case were therewith returned for convenience of reference.

1876

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Spanish Government responsible for acts of guardacosta men.

That, in our opinion, the question becomes one between the two Governments, as soon as the magistrate is satisfied that the offenders are sailors of the Spanish navy, who have acted under the orders of their superior officer, for whose acts the Government of Spain is responsible.

Spanish Consul should attend proceedings at Gibraltar.

The magistrate, in conducting the inquiry, will probably have, at all events he should always require, the attendance of the Spanish Consul, or of some other responsible Spanish official.

Men should be released on his promise to produce them if wanted.

This person's declaration that the accused are sailors of the Spanish navy, who have acted under orders, should in most, if not in all cases, till there is reason to distrust the good faith of the official, or of the Government on whose behalf he may be assumed to act, be accepted, and the accused be released on his (the official's) assurance that they shall be produced if any further inquiry is necessary or desirable.

Failing this, they may be detained, not as punishment, but for purposes of the inquiry.

In the event of the Consul or other official not choosing to attend, the magistrate need not assume that the accused are sailors of the Spanish navy, acting under orders, nor need the magistrate, in such a case, hesitate sending the accused to prison during the inquiry, and till such time as may be sufficient to satisfy him that the accused are persons in the service and under the orders of their Government.

The statement to that effect made at any time by the Spanish Consul, or other official, should be sufficient to procure the release of the accused from confinement.

The security should not, in our opinion, be a money security in the nature of bail, but the written assurance of the person acting on the responsibility of the Spanish Government, so that if the accused are at any time required and not produced the two Governments may be brought face to face.

Should this written assurance not be given, the magistrate may, in our opinion, detain the accused, not by way of punishment, but for the purpose and during the time of the inquiry.

Draft Order in Council. Seal fisheries. Close season.

WHEREAS by the "Seal Fishery Act, 1875," it is enacted that when it appears to Her Majesty in Council that the foreign States whose ships or subjects are engaged in the seal fishery in the area mentioned in the schedule to that Act, or any part of such area, have made or will make with respect to their own ships and subjects the like provisions to those contained in that Act, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Order in Council, to direct that that Act shall, after the date mentioned in the Order, apply to the seal fishery within the said area, or such part thereof as may be specified in the Order:

And whereas it has been made to appear to Her Majesty in Council that the foreign States whose ships or subjects are at present engaged in the seal fishery in the area mentioned in the schedule to the said recited Act will make with respect to their own ships and subjects the like provisions to those contained in the said recited Act:

Now therefore Her Majesty, in exercise of the power vested in her by the said recited Act, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, is pleased to direct that the "Seal Fishery Act, 1875," shall, after the date of this present Order, apply to the seal fishery within the area mentioned in the schedule to the said Act.

And Her Majesty, in exercise of the same power, by and with the like advice, is further pleased to fix the 3rd day of April in every year as the day before which the master and person in charge of, and every person belonging to, any British ship, and every British subject, shall not kill or capture, or attempt to kill or capture, any seal within the area mentioned in the schedule to the said Act.

My Lord,

English church at Stockholm.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 14th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us correspondence regarding the differences which had arisen between the British community and the general congregation of the English church at Stockholm respecting the management of the Church affairs and the appointment of the chaplain.

That the English church at Stockholm was formerly under the provisions of the Consular Act, but when, in 1874, the Government grant to English Church establishments abroad was withdrawn, Her Majesty's Consul was instructed to take the necessary steps for making over to the British community any rights Her Majesty's Government might have over the Church property.

That the transfer, however, had not been completely carried out, the deeds not having then been executed, although Her Majesty's Consul had informed the community that Her Majesty's Government renounced any lien they might have over the property.

That your Lordship would be glad if we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the position of Her Majesty's Government with regard to the chapel at Stockholm, and particularly upon the following points:—

To whom does it belong? To whom should it be made over?

Whether the chapel belonged to Her Majesty's Government, to the British community, or to both, or to the Anglican community of Stockholm as a sect; whether Her Majesty's Government had now any property or interest in the chapel to make over, and if so, to whom should they make it over?

That should we be of opinion that Her Majesty's Government had a property in the chapel at Stockholm which they could dispose of, and that it should be made over to the British community of that place, Mr. Lister was to request that we would take into our consideration the draft deeds of transfer inclosed in Consul Segrave's despatch of the 1st instant, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether they should be approved and executed.

We have also the honour to acknowledge three further letters from Mr. Lister, bearing date the 17th, 18th, and 21st ultimo, a letter from Lord Tenterden dated the 24th ultimo, and a further letter from Mr. Lister of the 25th ultimo, inclosing further papers with reference to the case of the English church at Stockholm, and requesting that we would take the same into our consideration, together with the previous correspondence relating to that subject which was then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Information imperfect, but Her Majesty's Government should in no way interfere, nor execute deeds of transfer.

That, without definite instructions as to what was the exact nature of the conveyance originally executed, and as to the Swedish law applicable to such conveyance, it is impossible to give any opinion as to the persons in whom the church is now vested, but under the circumstances, we are decidedly of opinion that Mr. Erskine and Mr. Consul Segrave may properly be instructed not to execute either of the deeds of transfer, and to inform all persons who have, or think they have, any interest in the matter, that Her Majesty's Government will in no way interfere.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd April ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch and its inclosures from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Tunis, reporting a judgment given by the Consular Court in that city in the case of the "New Gas Company" against "Foreign and Colonial Gas Company," and that he, Mr. Lister, was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Wood.

Tunisian Railway Company. Action in Consular Courts against Mr. E. A. Perkins.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 1st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us—

1. A letter received by your Lordship from the Secretary to the Tunisian Railway Company, complaining of the action of Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis, in the case of the prosecution before the Consular Court in that city of Mr. E. A. Perkins, one of the employés of the Company;

2. A report which, by your Lordship's directions, had been made by Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis on the matter;

3. A copy of the Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, regulating the proceedings of Consular Courts;

And that Mr. Lister was to request us to take those papers into our consideration, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion on the proceedings of Her Majesty's Consul-General in that case, and as to the answer which should be returned to the Tunisian Railway Company.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Proceedings strictly right.

That, in our opinion, the proceedings of Her Majesty's Consul-General were strictly right.

The Tunisian Railway Company may, we think, properly be answered to the above effect.

Shorthand writer and copy of depositions might have been allowed.

In reporting to your Lordship on this case we have purposely used the word "strictly," for we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that Her Majesty's Consul-General might, without any breach of his judicial duty, or the risk of a miscarriage of justice, have allowed the prosecution the presence of a shorthand writer and a copy of the depositions.

Messrs. White's chrome ore mines.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence noted in the accompanying list relative to the claim of Messrs. White and Co., of Glasgow, to the produce of certain chrome ore mines in Turkey, which claim had been hitherto supported by Her Majesty's Government.

Counter-claim of Messrs. Harten.

That he was now to draw our especial attention to the letter from Messrs. J. C. Harten and Co., of the 18th July last, urging that the influence of Her Majesty's Government might not be exercised on behalf of Messrs. White and Co., and to Sir H. Elliot's despatch No. 16, Commercial, of the 24th August, and that he (Mr. Lister) was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to Her Majesty's Ambassador in that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No ground for opposition of the latter.

That, assuming the facts stated in the Report inclosed in Sir H. Elliot's despatch No. 16, Commercial, of the 24th August last, we are of opinion that Messrs. Harten and Co. have no good reason for objecting to the use of proper influence by Her Majesty's Government in favour of Messrs. White and Co.

We observe that the objection taken by Messrs. Harten and Co. is confined to the Harmayik Mines, and the letter of the 18th July last from those gentlemen speaks of the Daghardi Mine and ore as belonging to them till May 1879.

We are not aware how far this statement in respect to the Daghardi Mine and ore is true.

Marriages in Turkey according to rites of Roman Catholic Church.
As to legality in England.
Lex loci.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 29th September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers, as marked in the margin,* in which a question is raised as to the legality in this country of a marriage celebrated in Turkey according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

That we would observe that Mr. Joly, the Acting British Consul at Smyrna, states that the local Turkish authorities recognize the validity of all marriages solemnized between Christians by the duly authorized priest to whose ecclesiastical jurisdiction either of the parties may belong, and that the children of such marriages are held to be legitimate.

That one of the parties to the marriage which had given rise to the question appeared to have been a Roman Catholic at the time of marriage, so that the marriage would, according to what is stated by Mr. Joly, be recognized as valid by the local authorities of Smyrna.

Sir Julian Pauncefote also stated that he was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether such recognition on the part of the local authorities would be sufficient to cause an English Court of Law to pronounce in favour of the validity of such a marriage as the one in question, as having been performed in accordance with the lex loci; and further, if we are of opinion that it would be held valid by such Court, whether the statement of the Acting Consul as to the practice of the Turkish authorities is sufficient to authorize your Lordship to cause Mr. Sholton to be informed that his marriage is legal and his children by it legitimate, and to issue instructions accordingly in regard to the registration of those children.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the matter into our consideration and have the honour to report—

Such marriages of British subjects legal in England, and children may be registered, even independent of the lex loci.

That, in our opinion, a marriage celebrated between British subjects in Turkey by a Roman Catholic priest, according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, would be held valid in this country, and the children of such marriage would be deemed legitimate. Your Lordship may therefore, we consider, issue directions for the registration of such children as legitimate.

We have considered the question of the validity of the marriage in this case, independently of the effect of the lex loci, but the fact that the law of Turkey (the lex loci) recognizes the validity of such a marriage is an additional reason for holding the marriage to be good.

Extradition of Charles Worms from Canada to United States. Mrs. Worms' petition.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, forwarding a petition from the wife of Charles Worms, who had been extradited from Canada to the United States, urging that he had been illegally given up, and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to Mrs. Worms.

That a previous letter from the Colonial Office sending newspaper reports of the proceedings in Worms' case was annexed for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

United States' Government acted within their Treaty rights.

That Mrs. Worms may, in our opinion, properly be answered that Her Majesty's Government cannot take any steps towards obtaining the surrender of her husband from the United States' authorities, because they have acted according to their Treaty rights in requiring and obtaining his extradition.

Canadian Government irregular in surrendering when proceedings were suspended.

We are, however, of opinion that the conduct of the Canadian Government in surrendering Worms, whilst all further proceedings were, by the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench of Lower Canada, suspended, was, to say the least, very irregular.

The Irish Law Officers to the Earl of Derby.—(Received October 19.)

Sir, Chief Secretary's Office, Dublin Castle, October 18, 1876.

Powers of attorney. Formalities necessary for verifying execution of.

IN reply to your letter of the 23rd September, 1876, we beg to state, for the information of the Earl of Derby, that we have caused inquiries to be made in the Office of the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery in Ireland, which is the office referred to in the despatch of Her Majesty's Consul at New Orleans, respecting the formalities required in that office for the verification of the execution of powers of attorney in foreign places: we inclose a copy of the forms of a power of attorney and of the affidavit verifying the execution of the same, and of the instructions issued by the Accountant-General, a compliance with which is required in that office.

Affidavits, witnesses, &c.

It will be found on reading these instructions that every power of attorney, whether in the Kingdom or in foreign places, must be executed in the presence of two attesting witnesses. That one of these witnesses must be either a magistrate, or a clergyman, or a notary public. That an affidavit of the due execution of the power must be sworn before some person duly authorized to take affidavits to be used in the Court of Chancery.

In this country, such person must be a Commissioner for taking affidavits in Chancery. In foreign places, the affidavit may be sworn before a Consul. The person before whom the affidavit must be sworn must not be one of the attesting witnesses.

The affidavit of the due execution of the power of attorney may be made by either of the attesting witnesses. It is not necessary that the notary should go before the Consul, or make any affidavit. The other attesting witness is equally competent to do so.

The statement, therefore, in Messrs. Janson, Cobb, and Pearson's letter of the 5th August, 1876, that the notary must make the affidavit, which M. de Fonblanque has assumed to be correct, appears to be incorrect.

We are not aware whether the practice in the Accountant-General's Office in England is the same as that which prevails here, or whether a less ample verification of powers of attorney executed in places abroad is accepted there.

Having made this statement, for the information of the Earl of Derby, we venture to suggest that, if the requirements of the Accountant-General in this country impose unreasonable difficulties in the way of suitors, this is a matter for the consideration of the Court of Chancery here. But it would appear from a letter of the Accountant-General to the Attorney-General, dated 18th October instant, and which we annex, that much practical inconvenience does not exist under the existing rules.

We have, &c.

Accountant-General's Office, Court of Chancery,
My dear Attorney-General, Dublin, October 18, 1876.

I ONLY returned from England this morning, or I should have attended to your note sooner.

As I have not seen the power of attorney, stated to have been objected to by me, I cannot give any explanations for the reason I refused to receive it.

I am very liberal as to receiving foreign and colonial powers, being well aware of the difficulty of getting them executed and witnessed, and I now very rarely put parties to the trouble, delay, and expense of an application to the Court, finding by experience that the Judge always sent for me, and agreed in what I had decided. I am satisfied if the document is regular in form, has two respectable witnesses, or even one in some distant parts of the world, and that the affidavit of execution sworn by either witness is sworn before a Consul or Ambassador in foreign countries, or before any person lawfully authorized to administer an oath in any part of Her Majesty's Dominions, a notary public is competent to swear the witness to a power of attorney in either Her Majesty's Dominions or in foreign countries; of course if a notary public is a witness, he ought not to administer the oath attached to the power.

In all cases I consider the solicitor in the matter responsible to the Court and me, and have never even heard of any attempt at fraud.

Yours, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 7.)

My Lord,
Temple, November 6, 1876.

Extradition of Charles Worms.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 14th June, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Colonial Office, dated the 27th September, inclosing a despatch from the Deputy-Governor of Canada in regard to the extradition of Charles Worms, and requesting to be informed how far the points then brought to notice in the inclosed Minute of the Canadian Privy Council affect or vary the opinion previously formed by us regarding the course taken by the Canadian Government in that case; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations that we might have to offer in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the Report of the Committee of the Privy Council of the Dominion and the Memorandum of the Minister of Justice.

In these documents it is argued that because Charles Worms, the fugitive whose extradition was demanded, did not, within fifteen days after the writ of habeas corpus had been refused, give notice in writing of appeal, and prosecute his appeal within thirty days, the warrant for his extradition, executed on the 11th April, and his extradition on the 17th April, were regular, and the proceedings or action of the Government were justifiable.

We regret that we are unable to agree with this reasoning.

"The Supreme Court Act, 1875," giving an appeal, was the statute in force.

The Chief Justice, on the 19th February, granted an appeal to the Supreme Court, and ordered that all proceedings should be suspended and stayed till the final decision of the Supreme Court—the Court of Appeal.

It should not have taken place when proceedings were stayed, notwithstanding technical informality.

Notice of this order of the Chief Justice was, on the 21st February, received by the Minister of Justice from the Clerk of the Crown; and, in our opinion, the Minister of Justice, so affected with the knowledge that all proceedings were stayed, should not have advised the extradition of the fugitive without further inquiry, and merely because certain technical and formal proceedings were not taken; the appeal, it is to be observed, having been granted by the Chief Justice.

Some communications also were had by the Secretary of State of Canada with the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Canada and with the Attorney-General of Quebec; so that every person officially concerned knew the terms of the decision.

The Act repealing the right of appeal had not become law when the warrant for the extradition of the fugitive was executed. It is not, therefore, necessary to refer to that part of the case.

And we are unable to give any weight to the argument of the Minister of Justice, that the warrant for extradition should issue to prevent the fugitive availing himself of the lapse of the two months.

Worms should have been warned to proceed with appeal.

The Judgment stayed the proceedings, and before the fugitive was given up by the Government, which knew the fact that proceedings were stayed, the Government should, in our opinion, have taken measures to inform the fugitive that, if he did not proceed with the appeal granted to him, his extradition would follow.

We are, therefore, still of opinion that there was irregularity in the extradition of Charles Worms.

Detention of British vessels in Venezuelan ports.
The "Annie Cotter," &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 27th October last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the conduct of the Venezuelan authorities in detaining in Venezuelan ports British vessels engaged in trade with those ports without assigning any reason for such detention.

That we should see that, in reply to notes on the subject addressed to him by Her Majesty's Minister at Caracas, the Venezuelan Minister for Foreign Affairs claimed for the Executive the power, under the 19th Law of the Venezuelan Code of Finance, to order the detention of any vessel, national or foreign, for a term of from 20 to 100 days. The mere suspicion of a vessel being engaged in clandestine traffic being sufficient for the exercise of this faculty.

That as it was obvious that, under a law of so arbitrary and unusual a character, foreign vessels frequenting the ports of Venezuela might be subjected to great injustice, your Lordship thought it advisable to ascertain what view was taken of the matter by the Governments of other countries whose subjects were likely to be engaged in trade with Venezuelan ports.

That the answers of the French, German, United States, Dutch, Danish, and Spanish Governments would be found among the inclosed papers, together with a summary of them drawn up in the Foreign Office.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to—

1. Whether a representation should be made to the Venezuelan Government respecting the general question of the right claimed by them to detain vessels on mere suspicion; and,

2. As to whether compensation should be claimed from the Venezuelan Government on account of the detention of the "Annie Cotter" and other British vessels against which no reasonable ground of suspicion could be shown to have existed.

We have also the honour to acknowledge the receipt of a further despatch, together with a letter from Sir J. Pauncefote, requesting that it might be taken into consideration in conjunction with the papers already submitted to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If law permits seizure only after discharge of cargo, Venezuelan Government must compensate.

That we gather from the despatch of Mr. Russell to Mr. Fish that the Venezuelan law under which the "Annie Cotter" and some other British vessels have been arrested applies in spirit and in letter only to cases in which the vessel is seized after the cargo has been discharged, and that this detention is in the nature of a penalty. Assuming this to be the only law upon which the Venezuelan Government can justify the arrest and detention of the "Annie Cotter" and other British vessels which were seized and detained while the cargo was still on board, we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government may properly insist upon full compensation being made for the arrest and detention of those vessels by the Venezuelan Government.

But we desire to call your Lordship's attention to Señor Blancó's letter to Mr. Middleton, dated the 3rd July, 1876, and inclosed in Mr. Middleton's despatch No. 60, 1876.

In this letter Señor Blancó does not, indeed, give the words of the law, but states its substance to be that the National Executive can order the detention of any vessel, national or foreign, for a term of from twenty to one hundred days, the mere suspicion of the vessel being engaged in clandestine traffic being sufficient for the exercise of this faculty.

Señor Blancó thus gives a view of the law under which the Venezuelan Government acted in arresting the vessels in question, totally different from the terms of the enactment cited by Mr. Russell.

If Señor Blancó is accurate the Venezuelan Government had, as a matter of right, the power to order the detention in their ports of foreign vessels, on suspicion that such vessels were engaged in clandestine traffic.

But the exercise of that right is so open to abuse that a representation may, we think, fairly be made to the Venezuelan Government, with the view of inducing that Government to alter and modify the law.

But if law permits seizure on suspicion of clandestine traffic, no compensation can be claimed, but modification of law may be requested.

2. Again, assuming Señor Blancó to be right, no compensation can, in our opinion, be claimed from the Venezuelan Government on account of the detention of the "Annie Cotter" and other British vessels.

Those several acts of detention are but instances of the injuries to which innocent persons are liable under the working of a law, which may be altogether mischievous, but which, nevertheless, the Venezuelan Legislature had the power to enact.

Inquire as to bearing of the law.

We submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that Mr. Middleton should be instructed to furnish accurate information of the law of Venezuela, bearing upon the arrest and detention of these vessels by the Venezuelan Government for your Lordship's guidance in the matter.

| 76 | Law Officers | 8, | Mr. Carigan's claim. "City of Waterford" forced to leave Galatz by Russian authorities. Military necessity the probable excuse. May represent case to Russian Government | 67 |
| 77 | Law Officers | 8, | Turkish blockade of Black Sea ports. If effectually maintained and confined to enemy's coasts and ports, it is right | 68 |
| 78 | Law Officers | 11, | Neutrals. As to condemnation of vessels carrying contraband of war. Her Majesty's Government may remonstrate | 68 |
| 79 | Law Officers | 11, | Danube Commissioners and Her Majesty's ship "Cockatrice" detained at Sulina by Russians. Rights of Commission under Treaty. Danube is neutral and free, but stoppage of navigation by torpedoes, &c., is justified by necessities of war. Commissioners must get a pass. Her Majesty's gun-boat cannot go up river | 69 |
| 80 | Law Officers | 12, | Navigation of the Danube stopped by the Russians. Course adopted is justified | 70 |
| 81 | Law Officers | 12, | Navigation of Danube stopped by the Turks. Not justified except as regards that portion of river actually commanded by Turkish forces. British captains cannot be treated as spies unless proved to be such | 70 |
| 82 | Law Officers | 12, | Navigation of Danube stopped by the Russians. Justified, but on grounds of military necessity, not out of regard for safety of neutral vessels | 70 |
| 83 | Law Officers | 17, | Detention of Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié." Warrant should be issued under Foreign Enlistment Act | 71 |
| 84 | Law Officers | 18, | Closing of Bosphorus and Dardanelles at night, and prohibition against firing guns in foggy weather. Justified by necessities of war | 71 |
| 85 | Law Officers | 18, | Iron-clads building for Turkish Government. Sale to Messrs. Watson and Gadban before outbreak of war. Her Majesty's Government may purchase them | 72 |
| 86 | Law Officers | 25, | Coal for use of Her Majesty's ships of war in belligerent ports. Agree to proposed certificate of destination, &c., if belligerents will accept it; but query as to security of belligerents that the certificate is genuine | 72 |
| 87 | Law Officers | 25, | Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié." Approving warrant. It need not be under seal, and should only be used in case of need. Messrs. Watson should be asked to give security | 73 |
| 88 | Law Officers | June 1, | Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié" was handed over to Turkish Government before declaration of neutrality. Name changed to "Hamadieh." Not satisfied that she was completely handed over. Should be arrested, and persons warned against infringement of Foreign Enlistment Act | 73 |
| 89 | Law Officers | 1, | Mr. Fell's railways. Cannot say as to his supplying engineering information to belligerents. He must not connect himself with any military operations | 74 |
| 90 | Law Officers | 1, | Tugs, &c., on Danube. Interference of Roumanian authorities with navigation. If Roumania is a belligerent, she is justified in the measures taken. (See also No. 56) | 74 |
| 91 | Law Officers | 6, | Belligerent ships of war. Approving draft to Admiralty as to enforcement of Regulations. Principal officer of Customs must watch and report breaches of neutrality, &c. (Draft to Admiralty annexed) | 75 |
| 92 | Law Officers | 13, | Warrant to search ships, &c., under Foreign Enlistment Act. As to limits of a port. Instructions for using warrant. (Warrant annexed) | 76 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 93 | Law Officers | July 6, 1877 | British vessels with coal for Port Saïd. Russian Consular certificates for protection from capture. Notice may be sent to "London Gazette." Not necessary to raise question of coal being contraband of war, or Port Saïd being a commercial port, as the coal might ultimately be used for war purposes | 77 |
| 94 | Law Officers | 25, | Case of the "Hermes." British insurers of French cargo on Greek vessel seized by Turks. Cargo, being abandoned by owners, becomes property of the insurers, who have a claim to compensation Her Majesty's Government may support them. (Lord Chancellor's opinions annexed.) British Government cannot complain of seizure of a foreign ship by Turks. British underwriters insuring a foreign ship run the risk of loss. British Government have no right to interfere | 78 |
| 95 | Law Officers | 25, | Black Sea blockade. Licence granted to Messrs. Valiano to pass through. Licences are allowable in certain cases, but special permission to individuals to break blockade cannot be recognized | 80 |
| 96 | Law Officers | 30, | Coal for Port Saïd. Russian Consular certificate for protection from capture. Russian Ukase. Sulphur not contraband of war, unless for enemy's use, &c. Coal is always liable to seizure. Use of Russian Consular certificate does not imply admission that coal is otherwise liable to condemnation. Sulphur notice should not be published without further information | 80 |
| 97 | Attorney-General and Dr. Deane | Aug. 6, | Black Sea blockade. Efficiency not impaired by navigation of small vessels under protection of Russian guns on shore | 81 |
| 98 | Law Officers | 16, | Navigation of the Danube and neutral commerce. Porte's explanations satisfactory | 82 |
| 99 | Law Officers | Sept. 14, | Black Sea blockade. Permission for Greek vessels to pass through. No right to make exceptions in favour of one neutral. Exceptions in cases of disabled vessels. Blockade must be equal for all | 82 |
| 100 | Law Officers | Oct. 30, | Porte's proposal to allow vessels to leave blockaded ports on condition of selling their cargoes of grain at Constantinople. Contrary to law of blockade, which must be universal. Neutrals might then treat the blockade as at an end | 83 |
| 101 | Law Officers | Nov. 3, | Seizure of Turkish iron-clad "Hamadieh" under Foreign Enlistment Act. Turkish protest against, on ground that she was Turkish property before the war began. Complainant may apply to Court of Admiralty for decision of question | 83 |
| 102 | Law Officers | 5, | Danube and Black Sea Railway. If a Turkish Company, must look to Turkey for protection | 84 |
| 103 | Law Officers | 5, | Five Greek vessels loading at Nicolaieff. If permitted to leave, Her Majesty's Government may declare Nicolaieff blockade no longer valid | 84 |
| 104 | Law Officers | 5, | Danube Public Act. Surplus funds. Surplus carried to the reserve fund cannot be used to make up deficit of income, but any balance not declared to be surplus may be so applied | 85 |
| 105 | Dr. Deane | 12, | Blockades. Licences for passing through. Allowable in exceptional cases. Reference to cases during Crimean war | 86 |
| 106 | Law Officers | 13, | Black Sea blockade. Representation of Black Sea Blockade Committee on inefficiency of it. Approves reply that if vessels are allowed to pass, Her Majesty's Government might refuse to recognize the blockade | 86 |
| 107 | Law Officers | 17, | Iron-clad building for Turkish Government. Proposal to relieve Messrs. Samuda from bond entered into, and to obtain bond from Messrs. Gadban, to whom she will be transferred. Approve, but the vessel must be watched | 86 |

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 108 | Law Officers .. | Nov. 20, 1877 | Russian prohibition of shipments by vessels bound for Turkish ports. (Letter from M. Petrocochino.) Legitimate act of sovereignty. Does not affect blockade question | 87 |
| 109 | Law Officers .. | 26, | Danube and Black Sea Railway. Gratuitous use by Russians. The railway being on Turkish soil, the Company (though an English one) must look to Turkey for protection | 88 |
| 110 | Law Officers .. | Dec. 7, | Turkish blockade of coast of Albania. Reference to case in 1861. Propose to inform Lloyd's, but wait for dates before communicating to "Gazette." Concur. Blockade of insurrectionary coasts is legal by law of nations | 88 |
| 111 | Law Officers .. | 12, | Breach of blockade. Seizure of Greek vessels, chartered by Italians, in Bosphorus, for. Approving memorandum for Italian Ambassador. (Memorandum annexed.) Views of Her Majesty's Government. The blockade was recognized as existing. A ship breaking blockade may be captured even during her return voyage, and after touching at another port, when driven there by stress of weather | 89 |
| 112 | Law Officers .. | 14, | Blockade of coast of Albania. Disagree with Turkish Law Officers. (Reference to American blockades, when Southerners became belligerents.) Blockade is an act of war, and must be confined to coasts in possession of the enemy | 90 |
| 113 | Law Officers .. | 19, | Breach of blockade. Seizure of vessels with British cargoes in Bosphorus, for. Owners protest on grounds of—1, inefficiency of blockade; 2, terms of notification; 3, Treaty rights. Efficiency of blockade is doubtful when many vessels pass blockading force. British, French, and American practice: vessels may be captured during voyage. Not protected while in Bosphorus. Legality of seizure is undoubted. Porte should be urged to keep the blockade efficient, to grant no more licences, and to cause Prize Court decisions to be sound. Above applies also to seizures of Italian vessels | 90 |
| 114 | Law Officers .. | 27, | Proposed marriage at Smyrna of British subject with deceased wife's sister valid by lex loci. As to question of domicile in Turkey. British subject retaining nationality of origin cannot abandon British domicile | 92 |

| 115 | Law Officers .. | Feb. 5, 1877 | Fisheries. Halifax Commission under Treaty of Washington. Case of Her Majesty's Government. Suggest certain alterations. French rights lessen United States' privileges. Agree to amount of compensation claimed. Commissioners' award must be unanimous. Headland question must be strongly supported. Question of Customs remission as offset not to be raised by Her Majesty's Government. Values to be assessed only on privileges under Article XVIII, compared with those in Articles XIX and XXI | 93 |
| 116 | Law Officers .. | 21, | Lacepede Islands. Right of Great Britain to sovereignty over. Mr. Geddes licensed to occupy by Governor of Australia. Mr. Roberts subsequently hoisted United States' flag, as agent to Mr. Lord, who claimed for United States. Governor of Australia right in granting licence, if not previously claimed, &c., by another country. Act of Congress does not justify Mr. Roberts' action. United States have no claim. Royal Commission to a Governor is not questionable by countries who have not previously claimed territory implicated; but possession should be taken. As to power of a Consul in a Colony (with reference to Mr. Lord, the United States' Consul-General). Exequatur may be withdrawn. General principle. Validity of declaration to annex territory is doubtful. Actual possession or evidence of ownership necessary, also visits from ships of war | 95 |

| 117 | Law Officers .. | June 2, 1877 | Case of Peter Martin, conveyed in custody down Stickine River. Question of right to navigate rivers of Alaska. Privileges of Great Britain under Treaty with Russia of 1825, revoked by Treaty between Russia and United States of 1867, and forfeited by conduct of British Government in negotiating Treaty of Washington. Right to convey a prisoner doubtful in any case, and unlawful under navigation clauses of Treaty of Washington. Peter Martin must be given up to United States | 97 |
| 118 | Law Officers .. | Aug. 9, | Halifax Fishery Commission. Mr. Ford's answer to United States and views on Headland question. Approving. (For text of reply see Confidential Paper No. 3404, Appendix D) | 99 |
| 119 | Law Officers .. | Nov. 16, | Canadian Extradition Act. No stipulation as to trial for other than the extradition crime; but Canadian Minister may refuse extradition, &c. The Act is sufficient for execution of Treaties under Extradition Act of 1870, and the latter may be suspended in Canada while Canadian Act remains in force; but the powers conferred by it on Canadian Minister is very extensive | 99 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 120 | Law Officers .. | Nov. 5, 1877 | Seizure of the "Jane Francis" for putting in at port of Tucacas, for which she was improperly cleared by Venezuelan Consul at Demerara. Compensation paid for losses, but Decree issued denying compensation in future for breaches of law caused by improper acts of Venezuelan Consuls. Municipal law will not relieve Venezuela from responsibility for acts of its Consular officers attaching to her by international law | 100 |

ZANZIBAR.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 121 | Law Officers .. | May 24, 1877 | Legal Vice-Consul's powers. Order in Council confers powers on Consuls, but not on Vice-Consuls. Supplemental Order should be passed | 102 |
| 122 | Law Officers .. | Aug. 4, | Suits between British subjects and subjects of Zanzibar. Jurisdiction hitherto exercised by Consul. He has no jurisdiction. New Order in Council must validate his proceedings | 102 |
| 123 | Law Officers .. | Nov. 27, | Scheme of British subjects to administer Sultan of Zanzibar's territory on mainland. May be carried out without Her Majesty's consent, which might cause complications with other countries; but the scheme might involve acts contrary to the Foreign Enlistment Act | 103 |

No. 1 a. [Colonial Office.]

[May 12, 1877.]

Law Officers of the Crown to Colonial Office.

My Lord, Temple, May 12, 1877.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Malcolm's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed to forward to us the accompanying copy of a Commission issued by Her Majesty to Sir T. Shepstone, and to request our attention to certain transactions which had occurred in connection therewith.

Commission empowering Sir T. Shepstone to annex the Transvaal.

That we would observe that the Commission, after directing an inquiry into the cause of the late disturbances in the territories adjacent to Her Majesty's Colonies in South Africa, empowered Sir T. Shepstone, if he should deem it necessary in order to secure the peace and safety of the said Colonies, by a Proclamation under his hand, to declare that from and after a day to be therein named so much of any such territories as aforesaid as to him should seem fit should be annexed to and form part of Her Majesty's dominions, and that Sir T. Shepstone was thereupon appointed Administrator of such territories provisionally and until Her Majesty's pleasure should be more fully known; and that it was further provided that no such Proclamation should be issued unless (among other things) he was satisfied that the inhabitants of any district to be annexed, or a sufficient number of them, or the Legislature thereof, desired to become Her Majesty's subjects.

That Sir T. Shepstone, acting under that Commission, went from Natal in March last to the neighbouring Republic, commonly called the Transvaal Republic, which had been for some time the seat of grave disturbances with the native tribes. That he found the Republic in a state of anarchy. That the taxes could not be collected, nor obedience to the laws enforced. That all trade was suspended and the public treasury empty. That he also found that a large proportion of the inhabitants were anxious that the country should be taken under the British flag, as a means of protection against the hostile natives, who had already defeated the Republic, and who were only restrained from overwhelming it by the presence of the British Commissioner.

That, at the same time, it was of the highest importance to the British Colonies to prevent the destruction of the Republic by the natives, inasmuch as such an event, if it were to happen, would certainly lead to a general uprising of the natives, and an attack on the British Colonies, with all the horrors of a Kaffir war.

That, under those circumstances, Sir T. Shepstone, after trying various methods of escaping from the perilous situation, had come to the conclusion that the emergency was so grave as to justify him in issuing a Proclamation under his Commission, declaring that the Transvaal Republic should be annexed to and form part of Her Majesty's dominions, and that he was at the present time, your Lordship had no doubt, carrying on the government of the Republic as Administrator.

That that step appeared to have been taken without, on the one hand, any act of cession by the President or the Volksraad (the Legislature) of the Republic, though at the instance of a large number of the inhabitants, and without, on the other hand, any exertion of force, though a corps of British soldiers had been encamped on the frontier of the Republic, and had then, it might be assumed (since the Proclamation) marched into it.

That your Lordship had not yet received the terms of the Proclamation, but that might be assumed to have contained a recital of the emergency, and a declaration that the Republic was, from a date therein named, annexed to and formed part of Her Majesty's dominions.

That, under those circumstances, your Lordship desired to be advised as to what were the powers of Her Majesty of legislating for the Transvaal Republic. Was it to be regarded as a conquered Colony, and had Her Majesty the same power of making arrangements by Order in Council for its constitution and government as in the case of other conquered or ceded Colonies? or could it be deemed to fall within the scope of the Falkland Islands Act (6 Vict., cap. 13) as extended by 23 & 24 Vict., cap. 121?

That, as your Lordship was very anxious to be informed of the legal position of the Crown with regard to the Republic, Mr. Malcolm was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration at the earliest moment possible.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to

Report—

That, under the circumstances stated in Mr. Malcolm's letter, we are of opinion that the territory lately under the Government of the Transvaal Republic is to be regarded as conquered or ceded territory, and that Her Majesty has the same power, by Order in Council, of legislating for the inhabitants of this territory as she possesses in cases of conquered or ceded Colonies.

We think that the case does not fall within the scope of the Falkland Islands Act (6 & 7 Vict., cap. 13) as extended by 23 & 24 Vict., cap. 121.

We have, &c.

Law Officers of the Crown to Colonial Office.

My Lord, Temple, September 25, 1877.

Establishment of High Court of Justice in the Transvaal: Question raised by Judge Kotze.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Mr. Herbert's letter of the 1st August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from Sir T. Shepstone on the subject of the establishment of a High Court of Justice in the Transvaal territory, and the appointment of officers to that Court.

2. That Sir T. Shepstone appeared to have found himself under the necessity of making legislative provision for an improved system of administering justice, while, owing to the advice given by Judge Kotze, of the Transvaal, he was in doubt whether the power to make such provision was vested in himself, or where it was to be sought for.

3. That the question as to the power of Her Majesty, in the circumstances which had happened, to legislate for the Transvaal by Order in Council, had already been referred to us by the letter from the Colonial Department, dated the 9th May, 1877, and in our Report upon that letter, dated the 12th May, we stated that the Transvaal was to be regarded as conquered or ceded territory, and that Her Majesty had the same power of legislating by Order in Council in this case as in other cases of conquered or ceded territory.

4. That it would therefore appear that Judge Kotze (a copy of whose opinion was inclosed) was incorrect in the view he had taken that no legislative authority resided in Her Majesty with reference to the territory of the Transvaal.

5. That Judge Kotze, however, seemed to regard certain words of the Proclamation issued by Sir T. Shepstone when annexing the territory (copy of which was annexed) as being equivalent in their restrictive force to the grant of a Constitution by Her Majesty to a conquered or ceded Colony, so as to preclude Her Majesty or the Administrator from legislating by Order in Council or by Proclamation.

6. That the words in question, as quoted by Judge Kotze, were a declaration "that the Transvaal would remain a separate Government with its own laws and Legislature, and that it was the wish of Her Most Gracious Majesty that it should enjoy the fullest privileges compatible with the circumstances of the country and the intelligence of its people." That your Lordship, however, was inclined to view these words as pointing to the maintenance of the individuality of the Transvaal, and to a guarantee against its absorption in any other community, rather than as the constitution of any legislative authority within the State or restriction upon Her Majesty's legislative powers towards the Colony.

7. That Mr. Herbert was further pleased to state that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion:—

(1.) Whether in the circumstances Sir T. Shepstone had power to issue the Proclamation making provision for the administration of justice in the Transvaal, a copy of which was sent therewith.

(2.) Whether the words of the Proclamation issued by Sir T. Shepstone on the annexation of the Transvaal, quoted by Judge Kotze, have the effect of abrogating or limiting Her Majesty's power of legislating by Order in Council for the Transvaal terrritory.

(3.) Whether anything disclosed in the papers has the effect of abrogating or limiting the power of Her Majesty to legislate by Order in Council for the Transvaal, and, if so, to what extent.

(4.) Whether Sir T. Shepstone, as Administrator of the Transvaal under the Commission issued to him (copy of which was sent therewith), has or has not power by Proclamation to make such provisions for the peace, order, and good government of the Transvaal as may appear necessary, no Charter or Constitution having hitherto been granted to the Transvaal by the Crown.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to

Report—

1. That Sir T. Shepstone's Commission being limited to a power to annex and administer, he had not, in our opinion, power to issue the Proclamation making provision for the administration of justice in the Transvaal, because such Proclamation provides for an alteration in the existing laws of the territory. It will, however, be competent for Her Majesty to give validity to the provisions of a Proclamation by an Order in Council.

2. The words of the Proclamation issued by Sir T. Shepstone on the annexation of the Transvaal have not, we think, the effect of abrogating or limiting Her Majesty's power of legislating for the annexed territory by Order in Council. The language of the paragraph of the Proclamation referred to by Judge Kotze is vague and not happily chosen; but we consider that, properly construed, such paragraph merely contains a promise that Her Majesty will grant to the Transvaal a separate Legislature, and that the territory shall not be absorbed into any other State.

3. In our opinion, nothing disclosed in the papers submitted to us has the effect of abrogating or limiting the power of Her Majesty to legislate by Order in Council for the Transvaal.

4. Sir T. Shepstone, as the Administrator of the Government under the Commission issued by Her Majesty, has in our opinion power by Proclamation to make such provision for the peace and good government of the Transvaal as may be necessary, provided he does not by such Proclamation assume to alter or abrogate existing laws.

My Lord,

Dahomey blockade.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 27th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, and its inclosures, from the Admiralty, reporting that the blockade of the coast of Dahomey by Her Majesty's naval forces had been raised, and that he was to request that we would prepare a draft form of notice of the raising of the blockade for insertion in the "London Gazette" of Friday next, the 29th instant.

Raising of.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have the honour to submit the following draft form of notice for your Lordship's consideration:—

Notice for "Gazette."

"It is hereby notified that the Earl of Derby, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty a copy of a letter from Commodore Sullivan, the Senior Officer of Her Majesty's ships and vessels on the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa Station, dated 'Her Majesty's ship "Sirius,"' Whydah, 12th May, 1877, informing their Lordships that the blockade of the sea-coast of the Kingdom of Dahomey, which for some time past has been maintained by Her Majesty's ships, had been raised from that date."

No. 3.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 3.)

My Lord, Temple, November 2, 1877.

British chapel at Vienna.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the following point, connected with a British chapel which had been recently built at Vienna.

Built by public subscription.

That the funds for building it were collected by public subscription, and it was intended that the work should have commenced in 1875, but it was found at that time that the Church of England form of worship was not one of those recognized by Austrian law, and that consequently its public exercise in the proposed chapel would be illegal. That discovery led to communications between the British Ambassador and the Austrian Government, the result of which was that an opinion was given by the latter that, if the building were to be placed under the control and jurisdiction of the Ambassador, its use for the purpose for which it was to be constructed might be sanctioned, but not otherwise.

That the question of the acceptance of that arrangement was submitted to Her Majesty's Government, who, after some hesitation, consented to it; but did so on the express understanding that the property in the building should not be vested in them, either absolutely or on any trusts, and that they should not be called upon to contribute anything towards its erection or maintenance.

That the Ambassador having informed the Austrian Government that he was auuthorized to accept the position towards the chapel which he was required to assume, it was licensed as being under his control and jurisdiction by an Imperial rescript dated the 15th March, 1875, whereby it was declared that, "A chapel for the religious use of the members of the British Embassy who belong to the Anglican Church, as well as for that of such British subjects, either residing in or passing through Vienna, as the British Ambassador for the time being may admit to it, may be erected in Vienna, and that religious service according to the Anglican Ritual may be performed there, on condition that the said chapel, and the use of the same for the said purpose, remain under the control and jurisdiction of the British Embassy."

That the building, which was now said to be completed, had been conveyed to the Bishop of London and his successors.

That the Ambassador had now raised the question whether marriages, which had hitherto been solemnized in the Embassy house, under the provisions of the Act Geo. IV, cap. 91, could be solemnized in the chapel when it should be opened; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the chapel might, under the circumstances, be considered to be the "chapel of the British Ambassador" within the meaning of the Act, for the purpose of solemnizing marriages in pursuance thereof. That such papers were inclosed as would explain the precise position in which the matter stood.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 28th July last, he was to transmit a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Vienna with regard to the locality of the English chapel; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take that paper into our consideration, with the previous papers then before us, and furnish your Lordship with our opinion upon the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Marriages may be solemnized therein under the Act.

That the Chapel may, in our opinion, be considered to be the "chapel of the British Ambassador" within the meaning of the 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91, for the purpose of solemnizing marriages in pursuance thereof.

No. 4.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 21.)

My Lord, Temple, July 21, 1877.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 27th June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to submit to us the accompanying papers on the subject of the schooner "Ida."*

British vessel "Ida" purchased by Mr. Eden.

That it would appear that that British vessel was purchased by Mr. Eden, a British subject, who paid for her and obtained a bill of sale, but neglected to perfect his title by having her transferred in his name at the port of registry in Jamaica, according to the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854. Nevertheless, he had a beneficial interest in the vessel as against the seller, such as was recognized by the Merchant Shipping Act of 1862. That while on a coasting voyage the master fraudulently sold the vessel by auction for 401 dollars to one Newball, a citizen of the United States of Colombia.

Failure to register her at Jamaica.

Fraudulent sale by the master to a Colombian.

That Mr. Eden, on being apprised of that fraud, proceeded to Colon, where the "Ida" was arrested through the intervention of of Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, and the matter was placed in the Colombian Court of San Andres. That before the decision of the Court was given the "Ida" was allowed to escape from Colon at night; that judgment was, however, subsequently pronounced to the effect that the "Ida" was the property of Mr. Eden, and had been unlawfully and without authority sold by her captain, but that, before she should be delivered, Mr. Eden was to pay to Newball the sum of 386 dol. 80 c. for the attachment at Colon. That Mr. Eden protested against that decision, and refused to pay that sum, and the vessel was again attached, and in June 1876 was still at San Andres (see Mr. Eden's memorial, paragraphs 11 and 12, inclosed in Colonial Office letter of the 15th August, 1876).

Decision of Colombian Court in favour of Mr. Eden.

Escape of "Ida" and transfer to Bolivia flag.

That what had since become of the vessel did not appear from the papers, but it would seem that she was still in the possession of Newball, who had changed her name from "Ida" to "Anna," and put her under the Bolivian flag.

Refusal of British officer to interfere because of non-registration.

That Commodore Lyons had refused to take any action on the ground that the vessel was not registered in Mr. Eden's name at Kingston, the port of registry, but in the name of the former owner, from whom he purchased her, Mr. Robert Bodden (Inclosure 9 in Consul Mallet's No. 37 of the 5th November, 1876). That the vessel had, however, since then been registered in the name of Mr. Eden (see Mr. Eden to Mr. Harvey, 21st February, 1877, inclosed in Colonial Office letter of the 18th May, 1877).

That it would seem to be admitted by the decision of the Court of San Andres that the sale of the vessel to Newball under the circumstances above detailed could give him no legal title to her.

That it appeared to your Lordship that the fact of non-registration of the vessel in Mr. Eden's name did not disentitle him to the assistance of Her Majesty's Government in his efforts to obtain justice and to recover possession of his property, and that, especially now that he had effected the registration of the vessel in his own name at Kingston, the Bolivian Government should be called upon to detain the vessel in order to allow Mr. Eden to prove his title and recover possession of her.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we concurred in that view, and if so, that we would also favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what measures might properly be taken in the event of a refusal on the part of the Bolivian Government to comply with that request.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Bolivian Government should detain vessel to allow Eden to prove title.

That the Bolivian Government may, in our opinion, properly be called upon to detain the vessel in order to allow Mr. Eden to prove his title and recover possession of her.

* Colonial Office, August 15; Consul Mallet, No. 37, November 5, 1876; Colonial Office, May 18, 1877.

1877

The Bolivian Government may, however, have some good excuse or reason for refusing to take any steps to assist Mr. Eden in the matter, and we are therefore unable, with the information before us, to say what measures might properly be taken in the event of a refusal on the part of the Bolivian Government to comply with the request made upon that Government to assist Mr. Eden.

Ground application on illegal use of Bolivian flag.

We presume the application to the Bolivian Government would be a request based, among the other facts of the case, upon the judgment of the Court of San Andres and the use by the ship of the Bolivian flag, which apparently she is not entitled to sail under.

No. 5.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received January 24.)

My Lord,

Temple, January 23, 1877.

Exterior crimes against Brazil.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd December ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report dated the 25th July last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us correspondence which had passed since that date on the subject of the Brazilian law as to trying foreigners for crimes against Brazil or Brazilians, committed out of Brazilian jurisdiction.

Brazil abandons case of crimes against individuals by British subjects, &c.

That we should see by the inclosed papers that the Brazilian Government admitted that crimes committed by British subject against individual Brazilians out of Brazil could not be punished in Brazil, because a similar power was not claimed by Great Britain as regarded crimes committed by Brazilians against British subjects out of British jurisdiction. That according to the Brazilian law such offenders could either be given up to the Government of the country where the offence was committed, or expelled from Brazil.

Law the same as French Law of 1808.

That as regards crimes against the Brazilian State, the principle of the Brazilian law was the same as that of the French Law of 1808, which had been adopted by other countries, and which had not been protested against by the Government of this country.

As to withdrawal of British protest.

That we should see also, by the Home Office letter of the 7th December, that Mr. Secretary Cross was of opinion that, in the circumstances, the protest of Her Majesty's Government against the Brazilian law may be withdrawn.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we concurred in the opinion expressed by Mr. Cross.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Law provides punishment for promoting war against Brazil;

for giving information as to Brazilian forces;

for making statements against the Emperor.

That, on referring to Mr. Buckley Mathew's despatch (No. 93, Confidential, of the 7th October, 1876) to your Lordship, we respectfully call your attention to the 69th Article of the Code of Brazil, which decrees imprisonment with hard labour for from two to six years against any person who shall excite a nation to declare war against Brazil without succeeding in his object. To the 72nd Article, which sentences to hard labour for from six to twenty years any person giving to a hostile Government or their Agents any knowledge of the state of the Brazilian forces, and to the 88th Article, which awards from four to twelve years' hard labour to any one who misrepresents the moral or physical state of the Emperor.

Application of this provision to British Members of Parliament and others.

Your Lordship will see that these provisions place in peril any person who, in his place in Parliament, for instance, or as a newspaper correspondent, or a merchant in the course of his business transactions, or other person who may make remarks hostile to, but unsuccessful in causing war against Brazil; or make some misstatement as to the health of the Emperor, or convey intelligence of the state of the Brazilian forces.

The Baron de Cabo Frio, in the extract from his letter given by Mr. Buckley Mathew, does not say that the punishment for these crimes which come under Article 1 shall be inflicted in those cases only where the laws of the country of the offender establish punishment against foreigners in like cases.

This restriction apparently applies only to cases within Article 3.

Suggesting further remonstrance.

We have thought it our duty to submit these observations to your Lordship, since the explanation given by the Baron de Cabo Frio, so far as Article 3 is concerned, may satisfy your Lordship that the protest may be withdrawn, and yet Article 1 induce your Lordship to make a further remonstrance to the Brazilian Government.

We have, &c.

Exterior crimes against Brazil.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 23rd ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of a despatch which your Lordship proposed to address to Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro upon the subject of the law lately passed in Brazil relative to crimes committed by foreigners out of Brazilian jurisdiction; and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proposed instruction rightly defined the position which should be taken up by her Majesty's Government in the matter.

That the previous papers in the case were therewith returned for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approving draft.

That the proposed instruction, in our opinion, properly defines the position which Her Majesty's Government should take up.

Annex to No. 6.

The Earl of Derby to Mr. Mathew.

(No. 11.)

Sir,

Foreign Office, February 20, 1877.

I have had under my consideration, and have consulted Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department and the Law Officers of the Crown upon your despatch No. 93, Confidential, of the 7th October, and the previous correspondence, relating to the law lately passed in Brazil, by which British subjects are made liable to punishment in that country for certain crimes committed out of Brazilian territory.

Crimes against individuals.

Do not dispute right to expel or surrender offenders for.

It appears from your above-mentioned despatch that the Brazilian Government clearly admit that that part of the law which relates to crimes against individual Brazilians does not apply to British subjects, inasmuch as Great Britain does not claim a similar jurisdiction in the case of crimes committed against British subjects out of British territory. With regard to this class of crimes, the Brazilian Government only claims the right to give up the offenders to the Government of the country in which the offence was committed, or to expel them from Brazil, and it appears to Her Majesty's Government that this claim cannot be disputed.

As regards this part of the law, therefore, the announcement made by Mr. Drummond to the Brazilian Government, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, as reported in his despatch No. 184 of the 14th December, 1875, becomes unnecessary and may be withdrawn.

Crimes against the State.

With respect to that part of the law which relates to crimes against the Brazilian State, the case is somewhat different.

The right of a State to punish such crimes committed by foreigners out of its territories is claimed by the French Law of the 27th June, 1866, which is only a slight modification of the Law of the 17th November, 1808, in force up to that date. A similar right has been assumed in laws passed by other States, and Her Majesty's Government have not protested against the principle thus laid down.

The only occasion on which Her Majesty's Government protested was in 1852, when it was proposed to pass a law in France extending the principle to crimes against individuals, and on that occasion the proposal was abandoned.

Law applicable under certain circumstances.

For these reasons Her Majesty's Government feel that they would not be justified in refusing to allow the Brazilian law to be applied to British subjects under certain circumstances, and you will so inform the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, but in doing so you will point out to his Excellency that the Brazilian law goes much further than the French law, which applies only to crimes "attentoire à la sûreté de l'Etat," to the forgery of the Seal of the State, and counterfeiting national currency or papers; and that a strictly literal interpretation of the Articles 69, 72, and 88 of the Brazilian Code, to which you call attention in your above-mentioned despatch, would render non-Brazilians liable to severe punishment for acts which, however culpable they might be if committed by Brazilians, or by foreigners in Brazil, might be perfectly legitimate on the part of a foreigner out of Brazil. The provisions of those Articles would, for instance, place in peril any person who, in his place in Parliament, or as a newspaper correspondent, or a merchant in the course of his business transactions, or in other circumstances, might make remarks hostile to, but unsuccessful in causing war against Brazil, or make some misstatement as to the health of the Emperor, or convey intelligence of the state of the Brazilian forces.

But not to speeches in Parliament, or newspaper articles, &c.

Reserve right to protest.

Her Majesty's Government cannot for a moment suppose that the Brazilian law was ever intended to apply, or that the Brazilian Government would ever attempt to apply it, to such cases, but at the same time they feel it their duty formally to reserve their right to protest against the application of that law to a British subject should an occasion arise which, in their opinion, would call for remonstrance and intervention.

I am, &c.

(Signed) DERBY.

Temple, November 24, 1877.

My Lord,

Assault on Mr. Eisenstück, German Consul at Leon, by Señor Seal.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 25th September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers, as marked in the margin, relative to a difference which had unfortunately arisen between the Government of Germany and that of Nicaragua, originating in two assaults committed by a Señor Seal—the first upon M. Paul Eisenstück, then Acting German Consul at Leon; the second (in which it was alleged that Señor Seal was assisted and protected by some soldiers sent for that purpose by the Third Alcalde) upon the same gentleman, M. Maurice Eisenstück, the German Consul, and others; the object of the several assaults having been to enable Señor Seal to regain possession of his wife, step-daughter to M. Paul Eisenstück, with whom she was staying.

That no British subject was concerned in the matter, and no British interest was directly affected by it, but there were questions involved which were of general importance to all nations whose subjects frequent the Republics of Central America, and an appeal having been made by both Germany and Nicaragua for the moral support of Her Majesty's Government, they were unwilling to decline altogether to express an opinion.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion whether the circumstances of the case justified the demands of the German Government for reparation to their full extent, and, if not, in what respect Her Majesty's Government might properly use its good offices to obtain a modification of them.

That the documents to which your Lordship would direct our special attention were the following:—

1. The despatch of the German Government to their Minister in Central America, inclosed in Count Münster's letter of the 18th April, 1877, which contained an exposition of the facts of the case from the German point of view and of the nature of the reparation demanded.

2. The exposition of the facts of the case from the Nicaraguan point of view contained in the address to Congress of the Nicaraguan Minister for Foreign Affairs of the 16th May, translation of which would be found at p. 5 of the "Star and Herald" of Panama of the 21st July.

That this was inclosed in the letter from Señor de Marcoleta of the 27th August.

3. The letter from Señor Rivas, Nicaraguan Minister for Foreign Affairs, to your Lordship of the 11th July, 1877.

4. The despatch from Mr. Locock, Her Majesty's Minister in Central America, No. 72 of the 25th July, containing observations thereon.

5. Mr. Locock's No. 79 of the 6th August, transmitting the observations on Señor Rivas' letter of M. von Bergen, the German Minister.

6. Mr. Locock's No. 73 of the 27th July, containing legal opinions as to the invalidity of the proceedings of the local Tribunals in the case.

7. Letter from Señor Rivas, Nicaraguan Minister for Foreign Affairs, to the German Minister for Foreign Affairs, dated Nicaragua, the 11th July (see cutting from the Panama "Star and Herald" of the 21st August, 1877).

8. The letter to your Lordship from Señor de Marcoleta,* Nicaraguan Minister at this Court, soliciting the friendly intervention of Her Majesty's Government with the Government of Germany to effect an amicable arrangement of the question.

We were also honoured with a note from Lord Tenterden, dated the 13th October, stating that with reference to Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 25th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us for consideration, with the papers already received, the accompanying letter from the Nicaraguan Minister at this Court, respecting the affair of Eisenstück, the German Consul at Leon.

We were further honoured with a letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 3rd November instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 25th September, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration, the accompanying further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Central America relative to the Eisenstück affair, and to add that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the case at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered these papers, and have given very close attention to Mr. Locock's two despatches Nos. 72 and 79, dated the 25th July and the 6th August.

German demands are just; Her Majesty's Government cannot use good offices to obtain modification.

And, looking to the conduct of the Government and authorities of Nicaragua, we are unable to say that the circumstances of the case do not justify the demands of the German Government, or that Her Majesty's Government can properly in any respect use its good offices to obtain a modification of those demands.

Treaty of Managua.

Mosquito Indians.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd November ultimo, stating that in 1860 Her Majesty's Government concluded a Treaty with the Republic of Nicaragua relinquishing the Protectorate of Great Britain over the Mosquito Territory, and, in return for the cession to Nicaragua of sovereign rights over the territory in question, subject to certain restrictions as to self-government, Nicaragua had, by Article V of the Treaty, agreed to pay to the Mosquito Indians an annual sum of 5,000 hard dollars, by half-yearly payments to be paid at Greytown.

Non-payment of subsidy by Nicaragua.

That up to the present time, however, the Nicaraguan Government had neglected to make any payment to the Mosquito Chief, notwithstanding the repeated representations made to them by Her Majesty's Government.*

That Sir Julian Pauncefote inclosed a copy of the Treaty of Managua, together with the papers marked in the margin, which would show us how the matter now stands.

That the Nicaraguan Government expressed their willingness to pay the subvention so soon as they should enter into possession of "full sovereignty" over the Mosquito Territory, and they pointed to a so-called rebellious Proclamation issued by the present Mosquito Chief on his accession in 1874 at the age of 18. That that Proclamation was instantly withdrawn, but were it otherwise, the excuse put forward by the Nicaraguan Government for the non-payment of the subsidy appeared to be frivolous, as they had never pretended that the circumstances referred to gave them the right to annul the Treaty under which they continue to claim sovereign rights over the Mosquito Territory, nor had they ever been impeded in the enjoyment of such rights as were conferred on them by the Treaty.

That Mr. Locock, in his note to the Nicaraguan Minister, a copy of which was inclosed in his No. 89 of the 28th August last, had called upon his Excellency for the immediate payment of the instalments of the subvention then due, together with interest thereon.

That as regarded the claim for interest, Mr. Locock desired to be informed whether it could properly be pressed, and as in the present case default had been made in the payment of a liquidated debt at stipulated dates, the demand for interest on the arrears would seem to be founded on reason and practice, but before sending further instructions to Mr. Locock, your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion on that point, and with any observations which might suggest themselves to us on the claim generally.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

As to term "full sovereignty."

That the soundness of the excuse put forward by the Nicaraguan Government that they have not entered into possession of "full sovereignty" over the Mosquito Territory depends upon the sense of the word "full," a word which is not in the Treaty.

So far as the papers before us enable us to form an opinion, Nicaragua was not to have or enter into "full sovereignty" until the Mosquito Indians agreed under Article IV of the Treaty to absolute incorporation, and subjected themselves to be governed by the general laws and regulations of the Republic.

Mosquito Proclamation no excuse for non-payment.

And a Proclamation issued in 1874 cannot be used as a reason for not having paid money, the payment of which, under the Treaty (Article V), should have been completed in 1870.

Great Britain may demand payment with interest.

And since Great Britain was one of the two parties to the Treaty, Nicaragua being the other, Great Britain has, in our opinion, the right to call upon the other contracting party to comply with the terms of the Treaty and pay, without further delay, the amount due under Article V to the Mosquito Indians.

The Nicaraguan Government might have been called upon to begin paying the annual instalments seventeen years ago; this, however, was not done, and we think that under the circumstances the payment of some sum in the nature of interest may fairly be demanded.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, together with the previous papers, the accompanying letter from Mr. F. S. Reilly, inclosing the draft of a further Order in Council for China and Japan, which he had been instructed to prepare, conferring on certain officers in those countries, who would be styled "Acting Consuls," the powers now vested in duly commissioned Consuls or Vice-Consuls or officers acting temporarily for them by the 25th section of the China and Japan Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would take that draft into our consideration, and favour Lordship with our opinion thereupon.

Limit of time.

That Lord Tenterden was to add that your Lordship proposed to adopt Mr. Reilly's suggestion as to the limit of the duration of the Order in Council in question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Customs privileges at Chinkiang.
Case of the "Cadiz" hulk.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit correspondence relating to a claim preferred against the Chinese Government, by the China Navigation Company, for compensation for losses that they had sustained, in consequence of the withdrawal of certain "Customs privileges" theretofore enjoyed by them in respect of a hulk moored at the Treaty port of Chinkiang.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a printed memorandum on the case, dated August 1877, in which the facts were shortly stated, and certain conclusions arrived at adverse to the claim of the Company.

That he was also to draw our attention to a letter subsequently received from the Chinese Minister at this Court, transmitting the opinion of counsel consulted in London on behalf of the Chinese Maritime Customs, and that we should observe that they had arrived at the same conclusion.

That, on the other hand, Sir Thomas Wade had expressed a contrary opinion in a memorandum which was inclosed for our consideration, and in which he contended that on the proper construction of Article XVII of the Treaty of Tientsin (which would be found at p. 1 of the Appendix to the printed Chinese Case), it was not competent to the Chinese authorities to order the removal of the hulk without having previously established, before the competent authority of the British owner, that the hulk was causing the obstruction and injury complained of, and that the suspension of her "Customs privileges" under the circumstances mentioned was, as advised by Sir Edmund Hornby at the time, illegal.

That Sir Thomas Wade had furnished your Lordship with a memorandum to the same effect, by Mr. Hewlett, of the Chinese Consular service, which was likewise inclosed for our perusal.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request our opinion on the questions raised, at our earliest convenience, as the Chinese Minister was urgently pressing for a reply to his communications of the 7th June and the 20th July last, which had been delayed, by reason of the pressure of other business having prevented Sir Thomas Wade from furnishing his Report on the case at an earlier date.

That your Lordship considered the question at issue one of great importance, and, having regard to the strong opinion entertained by Sir Thomas Wade in favour of the claim of the Company, and against the views of the Chinese Government in respect of the rights of British subjects under the Treaty, your Lordship desired Sir J. Pauncefote to request that, before finally giving our opinion, we would be good enough to hold a conference on the case at the Foreign Office, with Lord Tenterden, Sir Thomas Wade, and himself.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir J. Pauncefote, bearing date the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 24th ultimo, he was to transmit, by your Lordship's directions, two further letters from the Chinese Minister at this Court, relative to the case of the "Cadiz" hulk at Chinkiang, which he was to beg might be taken into our consideration in connection with the previous papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the rights which China has, by the law of nations, over the rivers in China can be limited only by the special and definite terms of a Treaty or other instrument surrendering such right either entirely or partially.

Treaty of 1858 does not abridge Chinese rights over rivers.

Chinese justified in removing hulk.

The XVIIth Article, however, of the Treaty of 1858—and we are not aware of any other provision in that Treaty—does not, in our opinion, abridge the rights of the Chinese Government over and upon the rivers in China, and, so far as the case of the hulk "Cadiz" is concerned, we think that the Chinese authorities were entitled, under the circumstances, to order the vessel to be removed from her moorings, and that they would have been justified, upon the order not being complied with, in removing her themselves.

Owners have no claim for withdrawal of privileges.

We also think that if the Chinese authorities withdrew the facilities granted to the owners of the hulk, or those using her as a landing-place for goods, because the order for her removal was disregarded, no claim for damages consequent on such withdrawal can properly be made against the Chinese Government.

We should not have troubled your Lordship with any further observations, if we had not had the opportunity of conferring with Sir Thomas Wade, and with Lord Tenterden and Sir Julian Pauncefote, upon the questions raised in the case.

Danger of acknowledging Treaty rights of the Chinese.

At this conference Sir Thomas Wade expressed himself very strongly upon the mischiefs which would or might follow, if the view which we have taken of the Treaty or other rights of the Chinese Government were known to that Government.

These consequences, so feared by Sir Thomas Wade, may be provided against by further arrangements, but should not, we think, affect the opinion, which, after the fullest consideration, we have above submitted to your Lordship upon the present rights and powers of the Chinese Government.

Question may be evaded.

In the particular circumstances of the hulk "Cadiz" there are, however, facts which may enable your Lordship to answer the Chinese Minister, without noticing the Treaty, or entering upon the general question of territorial rights.

The first complaint of any kind was made by the British Consul in April 1875, stating that the action of the river was undermining the Bund, and giving notice to the Taotai that the Chinese Government would be held responsible for the damage done by the river to the British concession.

The Chinese thereupon, and after some examination of the river, came to the conclusion that the "Cadiz," by some action on the current, caused the damage to the Bund. The owners of the "Cadiz," on the other hand, and they, too, had an examination of the river made in their behalf, asserted that the "Cadiz" was in no way the cause of the injury.

A very lengthened discussion then took place between the Chinese authorities, the agents of the owners of the "Cadiz," and the British Consul at Shanghae, who had been asked by the Taotai to enforce the removal of the "Cadiz." This request the Consul did not comply with.

The state of things was this:—

There was damage being done to the Bund.

The cause of the damage was a matter in dispute between the parties.

The dispute could be put an end to by an experiment.

Request for temporary removal of hulk.

And accordingly, on the 28th March, 1876, on the 17th April, and the 9th and 24th May, 1876, the Taotai stated on behalf of the Chinese authorities that all that was asked was "the temporary and experimental removal of the hulk."

This removal being refused, the privileges were withdrawn in the manner and after the delay now to be described.

The British Consul being informed that it was intended to withdraw the privileges requested, in June, that the threatened measure should not be carried out. The execution of the measure was therefore further delayed for fifteen days, the Taotai, at the same time, again informing the Consul that all that was desired was the temporary removal of the "Cadiz," pending the investigation and arrangement of the matter.

Should have been complied with.

China Navigation Company have no claim.

This request of the Taotai that the "Cadiz" "should be temporarily and experimentally removed" was a most reasonable request, which should have been complied with, and upon the merits of the case, and without reference to the Treaty, we are of opinion that the China Navigation Company have no ground for any claim for compensation against the Chinese Government.

British claims arising out of civil war. (Property seized by troops.)

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 18th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Bogotá, calling attention to the disregard paid by the Colombian Government to her Treaty engagements with this country, as regarded the investigation of British claims and the granting of compensation to British subjects for the forcible seizure of their property during the civil war.

Neglect to satisfy.

That we would perceive that General Salgar alleged that he had no power to grant compensation for the seizure of British property without the express sanction of the Congress, and that the consideration of such claims must be postponed until peace and good order were re-established within the Republic.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote also inclosed the draft of a despatch which your Lordship proposed to address to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá upon that subject; and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proposed instructions were warranted by the Treaty rights of the country and consistent with the law of nations.†

Claims arising out of civil war.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 10th August last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 30th July, he was to transmit a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Bogotá, inclosing copies of laws passed by the Colombian Government, dealing with the claims of foreigners and others arising out of the civil war.

Colombian Decrees as to submission of.

That by those Decrees it was stipulated that foreign claims should be submitted to and approved by the Supreme Federal Court before payment could be made thereon.

Treaty rights.

That your Lordship considered that such a proceeding, if persisted in, would violate the provisions of the existing Treaty, and cause grievous delay and expense to the claimants, who have every right to demand immediate compensation for the expropriation of their goods.

Refusal to receive claims in usual diplomatic manner.

That we should perceive that the Colombian Government refused to entertain the proposal submitted to them by the Representatives of England, France, and Germany, that foreign claims should be presented to the Government in the usual diplomatic manner, and that the Government having once received them, should refer them, if thought necessary, to their own Law Officers, or even to their Courts of Law.

That your Lordship feared that if these and similar laws were not strongly opposed the Treaty between this country and Colombia would rapidly become practically null and void. That Sir J. Pauncefote was therefore to request that we would take that case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, having regard to the Treaty rights of this country, Her Majesty's Government were entitled to insist that the claims of British subjects arising out of enforced military requisitions should be settled by the Executive and Administrative Department of the State without reference to the local Tribunals.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government may insist on their being so received, without reference to local Tribunals.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government are entitled to insist that the claims of British subjects arising out of enforced military requisitions should be presented diplomatically to, and be received by the Executive and Administrative Department of the State, and without reference to the local Tribunals.

Capture of British vessel "Brisk" by one of the revolutionary parties in Dominica.
Mr. Godet's claim.

On the 30th September, 1876, the British schooner "Brisk," while on a voyage from Turk's Island to Cape Haytien, laden with a cargo of salt, was seized by two Dominican armed vessels off Fort Liberty, where she was to touch on her voyage. At that time the President of Santo Domingo, Espaillat, was striving to hold the country against the two revolutionary parties of Baez and Gonzalez. The "Brisk" was captured by order of an officer of Gonzalez, the object of the seizure being to arrest a passenger on board the schooner named Ritchie, an American citizen, who was suspected of having bought arms and ammunition for the party of Baez. On reference to the map contained in Major Stuart's despatch No. 34 of the 29th October last, it would be seen that the place of capture was in Haytian waters.

That the "Brisk," immediately after her capture, was ordered by the seizors to be taken to Porto Plata, and on her voyage to that port she encountered a storm and was lost with all on board.

Another revolutionary party now in power.

That the party of Baez were now in power, and the question arose whether, under the circumstances above stated, Her Majesty's Government could claim reparation from the existing de facto Government of Santo Domingo for the outrage committed by the Gonzalez party on the British flag, and compensation to the owner of the "Brisk" for the loss of his vessel and cargo.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No claim on present de facto Government for acts of the other revolutionary party.

That, in our opinion, no claim for compensation to the owner of the "Brisk," nor reparation for the outrage committed on the British flag by the Gonzalez party, can be claimed from the existing Government of Santo Domingo.

Turkish objection to right of search.

That the objection which the Turkish Government may take to the exercise of the right of search of vessels under the Egyptian (that is, the Turkish) flag is one which, in the circumstances of the case, your Lordship might be disposed to overlook or ignore, since without the exercise of that right the Convention may come practically to nothing.

Convention does not authorize search of Turkish vessels.

But, advising your Lordship on a matter of international law, we cannot say that the Convention authorizes the search of Turkish vessels, and hence difficulties may arise under Article VI.

Subject to the above observations, the Convention and instructions (with the omission suggested by Lord Tenterden in the margin of the instructions) may, in our opinion, properly be sent to Mr. Vivian.

Mixed Courts. Date at which the quinquennial period should commence.

My Lord,

Temple, March 12, 1877.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take into our consideration the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, containing a copy of a letter from the Egyptian Government upon the subject of the date at which the quinquennial period for which the Mixed Courts were established should commence.

* The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be found when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain the original draft of the Report. The Law Officers, however, do not retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has, therefore, been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as the bare Report, without the usual preamble, would not be wholly intelligible.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would inform your Lordship of our opinion on that point.

That Lord Tenterden annexed a memorandum by Sir Julian Pauncefote, in which he drew attention to the Orders in Council of the 1st February, 1876, as bearing on the question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1st February, 1876 but date might be fixed with the other Powers.

That, in our opinion, the 1st February, 1876, is the date when the quinquennial period for which the Mixed Courts were established should commence.

But your Lordship might, as suggested by Sir Julian Pauncefote, properly act in fixing the date with the other Powers, taking the date, however, to be either the 1st January or 1st February, 1876.

Egyptian law respecting arrangement between debtor and creditor.

As to consent of Powers being necessary.

My Lord,

Temple, March 12, 1877.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two despatches from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, inquiring whether it was necessary that the Judicial Courts in Egypt should obtain the consent of the Powers to the addition to the Egyptian Code under Article 12 of a general law empowering them to sanction and protect an equitable arrangement between a debtor and his creditors.

That Lord Tenterden inclosed a memorandum drawn up by Sir Julian Pauncefote on the subject, together with the former papers, and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the instructions which should be given to Mr. Vivian by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the proposed new law may work a material change, for instance, defeat the rights of the dissentient minority of creditors.

Mr. Vivian should not consent till law is seen and approved by the Powers.

We are therefore of opinion that Mr. Vivian should be instructed not to give his consent to the proposed law until the text of such law has been seen and approved by the Powers.

Jurisdiction in bankruptcy. Conflict between Mixed Tribunals and Consular Courts.

My Lord,

Temple, July 2, 1877.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th March last, stating that he was to transmit to us papers relating to a conflict of jurisdiction in cases of bankruptcy which had arisen between the Mixed Tribunals and the Consular Courts in Egypt.

That we should perceive that a proposal was made to confer on the Mixed Tribunals in Egypt exclusive jurisdiction in all cases of bankruptcy without regard to the nationality of the parties concerned, such jurisdiction having until then been shared between the Consular and the Mixed Courts, according to the nationality of the bankrupt and his creditors.

That, as that was a matter which might seriously affect British commercial interests, Lord Tenterden was to request us to take the inclosed papers into consideration and to favour your Lordship with our opinion on them, and in particular as regards the following points:—

1. Whether any jurisdiction in bankruptcy where the debtor is a foreigner was vested in the Mixed Tribunals by the terms of Article 9 of the Règlement Judiciaire, and if so, whether proceedings in bankruptcy instituted in a British Consular Court become void in the event of a foreign creditor appearing, who was entitled to claim under the bankruptcy.

2. Whether we considered it desirable that exclusive jurisdiction in bankruptcy should be vested in the Mixed Tribunals as proposed, and if so, whether we would recommend that, as a condition to the assent of Her Majesty's Government to that course, any modification in the Code of Bankruptcy as administered by the new Tribunals should be insisted on.

That, in connection with that subject, Lord Tenterden was further to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, inclosing a copy of a newspaper containing the report of a judgment of the Court of Appeal affecting the question under consideration.

That Lord Tenterden was also to transmit a copy of the Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire and Egyptian Codes, and of the printed correspondence referred to in the inclosure of that letter.

We have also the honour to acknowledge the receipt of further letters on this subject, bearing date the 12th April, 1877, the 27th April, 1877, and the 26th ultimo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot agree whether Mixed Courts have jurisdiction when debtor is a foreigner.

That (1) the question whether any jurisdiction in bankruptcy, where the debtor is a foreigner, was vested in the Mixed Tribunals by the terms of Article 9 of the Règlement Judiciaire is one of very great difficulty.

If they have jurisdiction, it is exclusive, and proceedings in Consular Court would be void on foreign creditor appearing.

After a very careful discussion and consideration, we are unable to come to an entire agreement upon the subject. We concur, however, in the opinion that if the Mixed Tribunals have jurisdiction in bankruptcy such jurisdiction is exclusive, and that therefore proceedings in bankruptcy instituted in a Consular Court would become void in the event of a foreign creditor entitled to claim under the bankruptcy appearing.

Exclusive jurisdiction should be vested in Mixed Courts.

2. We are clearly of opinion that it is, under the circumstances, desirable that exclusive jurisdiction in bankruptcy should be vested in the Mixed Tribunals as proposed.

One Judge might be of nationality of the bankrupt.

It does not occur to us that if exclusive jurisdiction in bankruptcy is given to the Mixed Tribunals, as suggested, any modification of the Code of Bankruptcy will be necessary, unless indeed it should be deemed advisable to provide that one of the Judges in bankruptcy cases shall be, if possible, of the same nationality with the bankrupt.

Case of Mr. James Wilson.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers relative to certain legal proceedings in which Mr. James Wilson was concerned, arising out of contracts entered into by him and other parties with the French Government, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, under the circumstances detailed in Mr. James Wilson's letters to Lord Lyons of the 20th and 22nd December last, any action was called for on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

Illegal treatment at hands of French Government.

That during the proceedings which took place in France in 1874, Mr. James Wilson appealed to Her Majesty's Government for protection, as a British subject, against what he conceived to be illegal treatment at the hands of the French Government. His complaint was considered at the time, and he was informed that the circumstances of his case did not warrant any official interference on his behalf.

That on receipt of Lord Lyons' despatch No. 325 of the 22nd December last, it appeared to your Lordship that the case was one which did not in any way concern Her Majesty's Government; and that, even if they were in possession of sufficient information to judge whether the compromise referred to did not amount to a "compounding of felony," Mr. James Wilson had failed to show any grounds which justified his application for the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown. That Lord Lyons was accordingly instructed to reply in that sense to Mr. Wilson's letter of the 20th December. That Mr. Wilson's letter of the 22nd December had since been received, and it appeared to your Lordship to contain nothing which altered the complexion of the case.

That, if we should concur in that view and in the propriety of the reply sent to Mr. Wilson's letter of the 20th December, your Lordship proposed, subject to any observations with which we might favour your Lordship on the case, to inform Mr. Wilson that you saw no grounds for modifying the decisions arrived at and already communicated to him by Lord Lyons.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No grounds for interference of Her Majesty's Government.

That, in our opinion, Mr. Wilson may properly be informed that your Lordship sees no ground for modifying the decision arrived at and communicated to him by Lord Lyons.

My Lord, Temple, July 2, 1877.

English Insurance Companies. As to providing a French agent when transacting business in France.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 5th April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, relative to a question which had arisen as to whether English Insurance Companies were bound to provide a French representative when transacting business in France.

Convention respecting Joint Stock Companies.

That Mr. Lister was to observe that Article I of the Convention between Great Britain and France of the 30th April, 1862, declared that Joint Stock Companies of either nation might exercise all their rights, "dans toute l'étendue des Etats et Possessions de l'autre Puissance sans autre condition que de se conformer aux lois des dits Etats et Possessions."

French Decree imposing tax.

That by an Act of the French Legislature, dated the 23rd August, 1871 (copy of which was inclosed), Article 6, a tax was imposed on policies of insurance (marine and fire).

That Article 7 declared that that tax should be collected and received on account of the Treasury by the Companies' underwriters, brokers, &c., effecting the insurances.

That Article 10 provided that "un Règlement d'Administration Publique" should determine the mode of payment of the above tax, and the rates at which it should become payable, and also all other matters necessary to carry out the provisions of Articles 6 and 7; and that every contravention of the said "Règlement" should entail a fine of 50 fr.

That the "Règlement" in question was made by a Decree of the "Commission Provisoire chargée de remplacer le Conseil-d'Etat," and was dated the 25th November, 1871.

That Article 10 of that Decree declared, inter alia, that foreign Insurance Companies "doivent avant toute opération ou déclaration, faire agréer par l'Administration de l'Enregistrement un représentant Français personnellement responsable des droits et amendes."

That Messrs. Arends and Seidler (the latter a British subject), merchants of Nantes, had been appointed Agents in France for the Liverpool, London, and Globe Insurance Company of Liverpool, and they were called upon by the "Directeur-Général de l'Enregistrement du Département de la Loire Inférieure" to submit for approval the name of a French subject as surety for the payment of the tax and fines, in accordance with Article 10 of the Decree. That Mr. Seidler protested against that provision as contrary to the Convention of 1862.

That Mr. Nestor Treitt, the French Counsel to the British Embassy at Paris, had been consulted, and he was of opinion that the provision of Article 10 of the Decree complained of by Mr. Seidler is a violation of the Convention.

That Her Majesty's Ambassador, however, was desirous, before acting on that opinion, to receive instructions from your Lordship on the subject. That the point seemed to your Lordship not free from doubt, and Mr. Lister was accordingly to request that we would take that matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Lister, bearing date the 16th April last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration, in conjunction with the papers inclosed in the letter from the Foreign Office of the 5th April, a further despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris on the subject of foreign Insurance Companies in France.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot agree with M. Treitt that tax is contrary to Convention. French Government may require appointment of French agent as security for the tax.

That we are unable to agree with Mr. Treitt, whose opinion is formed on general reasons of policy, and not upon the words of the Convention of 1862.

That Convention provides that foreign Insurance Companies may exercise their rights in France, subject, however, to a compliance with the law of France.

In our view the meaning of this provision of the Convention is that foreign and French Companies should be placed upon the same footing, and we think that the Law of the 25th November, 1871, practically does place foreign and French Companies in the same position.

There is, therefore, in our opinion, no violation of the Convention of 1862 in requiring that foreign Insurance Companies should be obliged to have as representative a French subject, who may become surety for the payment of the tax and fines.

That, having considered the further papers transmitted by Mr. Lister, we are confirmed in the opinion that the French Government may insist upon a French representative.

Marriage at Havre.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre* asking for instructions as to the propriety of celebrating a marriage between two British subjects under the following circumstances:—

John Julian, engineer of a British vessel plying between Cardiff and Havre.

That John Julian, the intended husband, is the chief engineer on board the "William Banks," a British steamer plying between Cardiff and Havre. That the "William Banks" came to Havre every eight or nine days, and remained there about sixty hours. That she had been running between the above-mentioned ports for over three years, and John Julian had a room at Havre as well as at Cardiff, which he occupied in the interval between the journeys.

Question of residence.

That under the Consular Marriages Act (12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68) the notice of marriage must contain a statement that each of the parties had dwelt within the Consular district during one calendar month at the least (section 2), and by section 6 a declaration was required that the parties had had their usual place of abode within the district.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to request that we would take this matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to whether, under the circumstances above mentioned, John Julian could properly make the declaration required, and, if not, whether, in the event of his making such declaration, the Consul was bound to solemnize the marriage, the validity of which would not thereby be affected (section 13), or would be justified in doing so, leaving the declarant to the risk of incurring the penalties prescribed by the Act in the case of false declarations.

* Consul Bernal, No. 38, September 25, 1877.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Having a residence at Havre, he may make usual declaration, though personally absent during the month.

That if John Julian has had a boná fide residence at Havre for the period described, i.e., three years, which continued up to the last, he may properly make the declaration required, although in pursuing his avocations as an engineer on board ship he has been personally and physically absent from Havre during the month.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Consuls should produce them on order of Court, where public interests are not concerned.

Slave Trade Treaty of 1841. Extension to German Empire.

Port to which Germa vessel should be sent for adjudication.

As to other parties to Treaty of 1841 joining in new Declaration.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence relating to an application from the Government of Germany for the extension to the whole of the German Empire of the Treaty of 1841 between Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia, and Russia, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, and also for the amendment of so much of the "Instructions to Cruisers," which formed an integral part of the Treaty in question, as related to the port to which a Prussian vessel, or a vessel belonging to the Hanse Towns captured under the Treaty, should be sent for adjudication.

That, in conformity with the provisions of the existing Treaties with Prussia and with the Hanse Towns of 1841 and 1837 respectively, a Prussian vessel detained by a British cruiser for an infraction of the Treaty of 1841 would be sent for adjudication to Stettin, a Hamburgh vessel to Cuxhaven, a Bremen vessel to Bremerhaven, and a Lubeck vessel to Travensmunde.

The German Government now desired that all vessels flying the German flag, which would necessarily include not only Prussian vessels, but also vessels belonging to Hamburgh, Bremen, Lubeck, Oldenburgh, and Mecklenburgh, which had been incorporated in the German Empire, should be brought to Cuxhaven for adjudication, and handed over to the jurisdiction of that German State to which the home port of the vessel belonged.

That Her Majesty's Government were willing to accede to the wishes of the German Government both as regards the extension of the Treaty to the German Empire, and as to the port to which a vessel flying the German flag should be sent for adjudication.

That Lord Tenterden was to state that the Treaty in question was never ratified by the Government of France, and therefore it subsisted only between the other parties thereto.

That the draft of an instrument for carrying out the proposed arrangement was transmitted therewith. It was in the form of a Declaration, the substance of which had been approved by the German Government, but that we should observe that neither Russia nor Austria were made parties to it, and that, indeed, so long as Great Britain and Germany were bound by the Treaty and this Declaration, no inconvenience would practically result from the non-adhesions of the other two Powers to the arrangement proposed. There was no reason, however, to believe that Russia or Austria would refuse their adhesion to it, and the question arose whether, having regard to the fact that the Declaration was virtually an Act of Accession to the Treaty of 1841, it would not be in conformity with precedent and usage, if not actually necessary, to invite the Governments of Russia and Austria to become parties thereto. On that point Lord Tenterden was to refer us to the observations of Calvo, vol. i., sec. 587, p. 711, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon, and as to whether in other respects the draft Declaration was proper and sufficient in form and substance to carry out the objects in view.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That at the time of the ratification of the Treaty of December 1841 the North-German Confederation did not exist as a European Power, and therefore can only become a party to the rights and obligations imposed by that Treaty by—

Germany must either "accede" or new Treaty be signed.

(1.) An Act of Accession to that Treaty, or
(2.) By a new and separate Treaty to the same effect.

It is true that the parts of the North-German Confederation, viz., the Kingdom of Prussia and the Hanse Towns, were separately parties to Slave Treaties, but the fact remains that the North-German Confederation was, and is, a Power unknown to the Treaty of December 1841. That Power now wishes to become a party to the Treaty, and in our opinion the proper course to that end will be by a Declaration of "Accession."

The objection on the part of the German Government to the term "Accession," a term well known in International Law, is not quite intelligible.

Approving draft Declaration, &c.

We approve of the draft Declaration as drawn by Mr. March, but think it advisable to make some additions to the Preamble.

We think the Preamble should commence with a recital of the fact of the Treaty with the Hanse Towns, followed by the recital as now appears in the draft of the Treaty of 1841.

After these should be some such recital as the following:—

"Whereas the said Hanse Towns and the said Kingdom of Prussia are now parts of the North-German Confederation and are included in the Empire of Germany, and His Majesty the Emperor of Germany is desirous that the provisions of the said Treaty of the 20th December, 1841, which at present apply to Prussia (&c., as now follows in the draft Declaration).

Such words in the Preamble may perhaps meet the objection which is made to the term "Accession," and with these additions we approve of the Declaration of Accession as drafted.

Austria and Russia should be invited to join.

We agree with the remarks of Calvo, vol. i., p. 711, and are of opinion that it would be right and proper to invite the Governments of Russia and Austria to become parties to the proposed Declaration.

My Lord, Temple, April 20, 1877.

Ionian bondholders.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to bring once more under our consideration the case of the Ionian bondholders, which had been the subject of diplomatic correspondence during the last two years and of numerous Reports from ourselves and our predecessors.

That Lord Tenterden was to transmit to us the inclosed printed memorandum, which had been prepared in the Foreign Office Department with a view to facilitate our labours to some extent by precising the questions which still remain at issue between the bondholders and the Greek Government, and by referring us to those portions of the voluminous correspondence which bore upon them.

That Lord Tenterden was also to transmit to us a volume containing laws relating to the currency.

That your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion on the questions which it was proposed at p. 11 of the memorandum should be submitted to us, as well as with any general observations which the present aspect of the case might suggest to us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the Greek Government has now given way upon the questions whether the place of payment should be Corfu or Athens, and the effect of the ex post facto law of 1865 regulating the currency and fixing the value of the pound sterling.

Entitled to payment in Corfu, in Ionian currency at rate as in Tariff of 1827.

As to the question now submitted to us through Lord Tenterden, we agree with the opinions of the Law Officers, the 11th May and the 4th August, 1875, and the 25th October, 1875, that the bondholders are entitled to be paid in Corfu the value of pounds sterling in Ionian currency; but having now had our attention specially called to the provisions of the Ionian law (Act No. 57 of the 15th March, 1827), we think that the payment should be of so much silver of that currency as will represent the amount due at the rate mentioned in the tariff contained in such law. We may add that in making our previous Reports upon this subject we were led to suppose, by statements in the papers laid before us, that a sovereign was part of the Ionian currency, but it now appears that this is not so.

Sovereign not Ionian currency.

We think that the bonds which make the loans payable in "pounds sterling" and those which contain the words "according to the value rate of the Ionian monetary tariff," stand upon the same footing, and should be treated in the same manner.

Interest.—Date from which payable.

With regard to the date from which the bondholders should be paid interest, we think that as the Greek Government first tendered the money at Athens, and in drachmas and leptas, the bondholders were justified in then refusing to accept payment. It seems to us that the bondholders are entitled to be paid interest on the total amount of their loans to the day when they refused to receive the silver dollars afterwards deposited in the Ionian Bank at Corfu (see memorandum, p. 11).

Tribunals may decide minor questions.

We see no difference now between the two Governments which requires the further interference of Her Majesty's Government on behalf of the bondholders, nor any matter which can properly require the action of the Tribunals, unless it be the right of the bondholders to interest on any amount due to them for the difference between that which they might have received in March 1875 and the sum which they may now be found entitled to. If there be any question upon this subject, we think it may properly be referred to the Ionian Tribunals.

Inaccuracy in bondholders' protest.

In expressing the above opinion, we now assume that it is not accurate to say, as stated in the bondholders' protest, and referred to on p 2 of the Foreign Office memorandum of the 30th January, 1877, "That by the Ionian Law No. 57 of the 15th March, 1857 (sic), the national money of the Ionian States consisted of pounds sterling, crowns, half-crowns, and other silver British coin, and that, according to the positive dispositions of the Ionian Civil Code still in vigour, deposits and loans made in pounds sterling, shillings, and pence must be repaid in the same coin."

1877

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 23.)

My Lord,

Temple, July 21, 1877.

Ionian bondholders.

Claim to be paid in pounds sterling.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the further correspondence which had taken place in the case of the "Ionian bondholders," and which was noted in the margin;* that on receipt of our Report of the 20th April last a copy of it, and of the printed Foreign Office memorandum therein referred to, were forwarded to Sir C. Sebright, Her Majesty's Consul in the Ionian Islands, whose attention was specially directed to the last paragraph of our Report, and that he was instructed to invite the bondholders to point out the enactments whereby, as they allege, deposits made in pounds sterling must be repaid in the same coin.

That in reply to that communication Sir C. Sebright had forwarded to your Lordship the following papers:—

1. Remarks on the monetary system of the late Ionian State.
2. Translation of a recent judgment of the Supreme Court of Appeal at Athens (the Areopagus) in the case of the Mont de Piété of Corfu against the Ionian Bank.
3. Report on the subject of the Ionian monetary law, and on the legal aspects of the claims of the Ionian bondholders.
4. Report on the claims of the Ionian bondholders (No. 47 of the 19th June).

That after a careful examination of the first and third documents above mentioned your Lordship had come to the conclusion that they entirely fail to establish the contention of the bondholders that the national money of the Ionian State consisted of pounds sterling as well as of the British silver coins mentioned in the currency laws of the islands. That in support of the statement of the bondholders that "by the positive dispositions of the Ionian Civil Code still in vigour deposits and loans made in pounds sterling, shillings, and pence must be repaid in the same coin," Sir C. Sebright set out in the third document above mentioned (No. 44 of the 12th June) articles 1767, 1768, 1776, and 1779 of the Ionian Civil Code (a copy of which was transmitted therewith),† and referred to other articles of the same law. That he relied also on the judgment of the Areopagus contained in the second document above mentioned (Inclosure 2 in No. 43 of the 5th June).

Judgment of the Areopagus does not apply.

That on this point it appeared to your Lordship that whatever might be the legal effect of the provisions of the Civil Code on monetary transactions between private individuals, they cannot apply to monetary transactions between private individuals and the Public Treasury, which were regulated by special legislation and therefore that the judgment of the Areopagus in the case of the Mont de Piété of Corfu against the Ionian Bank cannot affect the rights claimed by the Greek Government under the Ionian Act No. 57 of the 15th March, 1827.

That your Lordship, however, requested that we would take the case once more into consideration and inform your Lordship whether we concur in the above views or whether the papers now transmitted modify in any way the previous conclusions arrived at by us, and communicated in our Report of the 20th April last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Agree with Foreign Office that they have no claim.

That we concur in the views on the rights of the Ionian bondholders expressed in the letter of Sir Julian Pauncefote's communicating your Lordship's directions to us.

No. 25.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 25.)

My Lord,

Temple, July 25, 1877.

Mrs. Maunder's claim.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 29th June ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed despatches from Her Majesty's Minister in Hayti,* reporting the result of his further efforts to induce the Haytian Government to settle the claims of Mrs. Maunder, whose case had on previous occasions been laid before us with reference to her nationality. That for the exact particulars of the claim he was to refer us to the following documents:—

1. A printed statement of case (Inclosure 2 in Mr. Stuart's No. 15 of the 10th May).
2. List of losses and claims (Inclosure 8 in Mr. Stuart's No. 14 of the 7th May.)
3. Remarks and objections of Haytian Government (Inclosure 12 in ditto).
4. Rejoinder thereto of Mr. Stuart (Inclosure 15 in ditto).
5. Proposal of Haytian Government to refer matter to arbitration (Inclosure 16 in ditto).

That your Lordship doubted whether Mrs. Maunder's claim could be sustained to its full extent, but the case appeared to be one which, having regard to the nature of most of the items of claim, might properly be referred to arbitration as proposed by the Haytian Government. That your Lordship, however, having regard to the undisputed fact that the late Mr. Maunder advanced 22,000*l.* to the Company of Tortuga on the security of the timber illegally seized by General Salmane in 1868, was disposed to think that, as a condition of assenting to the arbitration, the Haytian Government should repay to Mrs. Maunder the above sum, with interest to date. That your Lordship would be glad to learn whether we concur in the above views, and if so, whether we are of opinion that the acceptance of the arbitration should be made subject to any other special conditions. That if it should be decided to refer the case to arbitration, Mrs. Maunder's consent would be of course necessary.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was further pleased to state that the previous papers relating to the case were returned therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have gone through the papers transmitted to us, and particularly the later correspondence between Mr. Stuart and the Haytian Government, and the claims put forward on behalf of Mrs. Maunder cannot, in our opinion, be supported by Her Majesty's Government to their full extent.

Entitled to partial support.

At the same time, Mrs. Maunder is, we think, fully entitled to the support of Her Majesty's Government to a certain extent.

Her advisers now say that she would be satisfied with the payment of the amount advanced by Mr. Maunder to the Company of Tortuga on the security illegally seized in 1868, and a reference to arbitration of the rest of her claim.

* Major Stuart, Nos. 14 and 15.

Arbitration may be accepted on payment of 22,000*l*. and interest.

We are of opinion that your Lordship may therefore accept the offer of the arbitration if Mrs. Maunder consents to that course. And as a condition of assent to the arbitration, your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly insist upon the immediate payment of 22,000*l*., with interest to the date of payment.

No Frenchman should arbitrate.

French interests have been so much mixed up in the transactions connected with the Maunder claim, that it may be desirable that no Frenchman be concerned in the reference.

My Lord, Temple, October 27, 1877.

Arrests of British subjects in Italy.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that the arrest of British subjects in Italy by the Carabinieri or armed police, on account of their being unprovided with passports or sufficient evidence of identity to satisfy the police, had given rise to a correspondence with the Italian Government, and to the issue of a notification in the "London Gazette" containing a warning to British subjects.

Warning published in "London Gazette."

That the Italian Government had taken exception to the publication of that notification, and your Lordship had caused a draft to be prepared of a letter to the Italian Ambassador in London justifying its issue, and recapitulating the various causes of arrest which led to it.

That Lord Tenterden was to transmit to us a selection of the correspondence more immediately relating to the issue of the notification,* together with some printed correspondence and a memorandum† bearing upon the general question of complaints of outrages on British subjects abroad and on foreigners in the British dominions, and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, together with the accompanying draft, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the same was right and proper to be sent, more especially with reference to that part of it which dealt with the proceedings of the Sicilian Courts in the case of Messrs. Rainford and Monckton.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our Report at our earliest convenience, as the Italian Ambassador is pressing for a reply to the last communication of his Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Concur in letter to Italian Ambassador.

That we have carefully read and considered the draft of the proposed letter to the Italian Ambassador, and we cannot suggest any alteration or amendment. That part of it which especially deals with the proceedings of the Sicilian Courts in the cases of Messrs. Rainford and Monckton, is in our opinion perfectly proper, and we entirely concur in the spirit and in the terms in which that part of the proposed letter is expressed.

Passports in Italy.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's communications of the 12th and 19th ultimo, with their various inclosures, referring to the cases of Messrs. Rainford and Monckton and the Rev. W. Giles, and the question of the notice regarding passports which Her Majesty's Government lately felt themselves under the necessity of publishing in the "London Gazette."

Notice in "London Gazette."

I have carefully considered the papers which your Excellency has done me the honour to transmit to me, and I now beg to invite your Excellency's attention to the following remarks:—

Arrests of British subjects.

Her Majesty's Government desire to remove the misapprehension which appears to exist as to the grounds on which they have issued the public notification referred to, and for this purpose it is important that the attention of the Italian Government should be recalled to the numerous cases which have occurred since the early part of the year 1875, in which unoffending British subjects have suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the Italian police in consequence of their not having carried passports, relying on the announcement of the Italian Government that this formality might thenceforth be dispensed with.

The details of these occurrences were fully discussed at the time; but I think it necessary to recapitulate them here as briefly as the circumstances permit, stating the facts from the narrative of the sufferers themselves, all of them persons of undoubted respectability, and from reliable information in the possession of this Department.

Case of Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill.

The first of these cases is that of Mr. T. J. Tourrier and Mr. J. G. O'Neill, the former a teacher of languages, and the second gentleman being at the time of his arrest engaged in studying painting in Florence.

It appears from their statement that on the 25th March, 1875, they left Florence on foot, intending to walk to Ravenna, for their pleasure.*

Between 4 and 5 o'clock on the afternoon of the 27th they arrived at Coccalia, close to Forli, on the road to Ravenna, and entered a café for refreshment.

They had scarcely entered when a Brigadier and two privates of the Reali Carabinieri also came in, and immediately demanded their passports.

They answered that being English no passports were required. On their insisting, however, Mr. Tourrier handed them his card and a receipt for the Ricchezza Mobile, dated the 25th March, 1875, with the Florence stamp.

The Brigadier pronounced these proofs of identity of no value. The two gentlemen were then searched, and their purses and papers taken from them.

They protested, declaring that, after the account they had given of themselves and the contents of their pockets, all evidencing that they were Englishmen on a pedestrian tour, there could be no reason for detaining them. In reply, they were told they must accompany the carabinieri to the guard-house. Hence, after a second examination, they were conveyed to Ravenna, previous to which they were locked up for the night in a cell, their beds being composed of planks, with a blanket to each.

They had no food except what they could purchase with a few pence left in their pockets by chance.

On Sunday morning, the 28th, Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill were peremptorily ordered to get up and go with the carabinieri.

They were then manacled, the right wrist of one being attached to the left of the other, and they were thus marched along the high road like two malefactors, and being ordered to walk more slowly with a threat of a bullet through the head if not obedient.

Arrived at Ravenna, Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill were taken to the prison of the Questura, followed by the mob. There, after a second minute search and interrogation, and other formalities, and having been deprived of the remaining articles in their possession, they were eventually permitted to see the Questore, who, having questioned them, immediately ordered their liberation, furnishing them with a safe-conduct against further molestation, and stating that the Brigadier at Coccalia should, in the first instance, have been satisfied with the proofs given him.

This case having been represented by Sir A. Paget to Signor Visconti Venosta, his Excellency, on his own behalf and on that of the Minister of the Interior, expressed regret at the occurrence; and, whilst it was maintained that the circumstances of the case and the exceptionally disturbed state of the district justified to a certain extent the arrest and detention of Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill, it was admitted that the carabinieri had acted with too much rigour, and orders were given that they should receive a severe admonition.

M. Visconti Venosta at the same time expressed the hope that the instructions then given by the Minister of the Interior would prevent the recurrence of any such cases.

Case of Rev. D. Kay.

Whilst Sir A. Paget was still in communication with the Italian Government on the above matter,* a further case of outrage by carabinieri was brought to his notice, the object of their violence in this instance being the Rev. David Kay, a Minister of the Church of Scotland, who, at the time of his arrest, was, it appears, returning from Carrara, whither he had gone to purchase a piece of marble for a monument to his late wife.

I take the following facts from his own statement placed in the hands of the British Vice-Consul at Leghorn:—

On the 9th May of the same year (1875), Mr. Kay was returning from the Marina to Carrara in a public conveyance, when, on passing through the village of Avenza, about three miles from Carrara, the driver asked leave to stop for a few minutes, as he hoped to get some more passengers. Mr. Kay thereupon alighted from the conveyance, and walked up and down the street, keeping it in view. He observed two carabinieri going in and out of a café close by, but they apparently took no notice of him, though he had passed them two or three times, till he was about to re-enter the conveyance, when the chief carabiniere accosted him with inquiries whether he had a passport, what was his name, residence, occupation, and nationality, &c.

These questions were all answered, Mr. Kay explaining that he had no passport.

The chief then said it was a very serious thing Mr. Kay travelling there without a passport, and that he was liable to be imprisoned; that the law was very strict; he must produce his passport or "arrange the matter." Mr. Kay explained that he understood Englishmen were not required to produce passports in Italy, instancing his previous travels through and about Italy without his ever having been asked for such a document. The carabiniere replied that that might be, but that "here" it was different, and Mr. Kay must produce a passport or go to prison; it was "a very serious matter indeed," and that he must "arrange" it.

Mr. Kay naturally conceived the idea that an attempt was being made to impose upon him, and he replied, "I have given my name twice over; will you be good enough to give me your name, when we may perhaps manage to arrange it?" Upon this, Mr. Kay affirms, the chief carabiniere sprang upon him and grappled him by the throat, whilst the other seized both his arms from behind, held and shook him violently.

In spite of Mr. Kay's remonstrances against the unwarrantable violence used towards him, he was dragged through the assembled crowd to the Police Office, and certain articles taken from him. Here Mr. Kay produced some of his hotel bills; tenders from well-known sculptors at Carrara for statuary, and, it is believed, certain papers in English. Then, in answer to Mr. Kay's demand as to what he had done, and what was the meaning of the violence used towards him, he was answered by invectives against the English generally, and a declaration that he, the chief carabiniere, would teach them that they could not go where they pleased without passports, and all attempts on Mr. Kay's part to obtain his release were met with insulting behaviour on that officer's part, and the assertion that he would "teach the English;"

and the same behaviour followed Mr. Kay's endeavours to get leave to telegraph to the British Consul at Leghorn, or to go by carriage, at his own expense, accompanied by carabinieri to Carrara for the purpose of being identified.

The endeavours of a fellow-traveller in the same conveyance with Mr. Kay, and of the driver, the former of whom was aware of his circumstances, proved fruitless to obtain his release, and he was also refused leave to communicate with the delegate in Carrara; being also unable to obtain the attendance of a medical man, Mr. Kay being out of health, he was shut up in a dirty cell for the night, with a hard board to lie on, under further circumstances of insult which I need not detail here.

Shortly before 2 the following morning the chief carabiniere entered Mr. Kay's cell in a very different frame of mind, apparently bent upon conciliation, begging Mr. Kay "not to think anything about this affair;" that it was "a matter of form," and would be "easily settled." He, at the same time, gave Mr. Kay to understand that there had been a suspicion, though not on his part, that he was a Prussian or Russian, and interrogated him on this and other matters, Mr. Kay indignantly repudiating the idea that such an outrage was to be so easily "arranged."

Between 4 and 5 in the morning Mr. Kay became so unwell that he succeeded, after vainly endeavouring to obtain it earlier, in securing the attendance of a doctor between 8 and 9 o'clock, who said that Mr. Kay must be removed immediately. Two hours later he was removed from the cell, and driven to Carrara in the custody of two carabinieri, the chief and another, and marched up to prison. Later in the day the delegate made his appearance, when Mr. Kay asked what was the accusation against him. He was answered, "You are charged with being an Englishman travelling in Italy without a passport; that is the charge, and we will soon settle it if you can refer me to any respectable person known to me." The charge was repeated on Mr. Kay's request, and, having given certain references to persons resident in Carrara, and after some further questions and answers in the presence of an interpreter, Mr. Kay was released at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, after an imprisonment of twenty hours, and without, as he affirms, any expression of regret on the delegate's part.

Sir A. Paget,* however, in his report of his personal communications with M. Visconti Venosta on this subject, states that his Excellency was evidently deeply concerned at this new occurrence, and had said that he had told the Minister of the Interior that unless he could devise some really effectual means for preventing the recurrence of such cases, it would be better that foreign Governments should be informed that the passport system was re-established in Italy.

Case of Messrs. Allies.

Within one month of Mr. Kay's arrest, the arrest of the Rev. W. B. Allies,† a Roman Catholic priest, and of his brother, Mr. Edward H. Allies, a surveyor in the employment of the Duke of Norfolk, took place under the following circumstances, and I may here explain that the facts which I would now place before your Excellency are corroborated by a most careful and exhaustive inquiry conducted by Mr. Colnaghi, Her Majesty's Consul at Florence, who bears testimony to the ready assistance rendered him by the Italian authorities at Aosta in his endeavours to elicit the truth.

The Messrs. Allies, who where on a walking tour together in Italy, were, in the afternoon of the 8th June, 1875, on the Italian frontier, about half-way on the road to St. Rhemy, when, having turned off the road a few paces and seated themselves on the grass for rest, they saw two carabinieri (Stefano Belmondo, Brigadier, and another) coming towards them. Although the place was quite open where these gentlemen were seated, the Brigadier and his colleague appeared to consider the circumstance suspicious, and advanced towards Messrs. Allies, who, startled by the unexpected address of the carabinieri, either did not reply for the moment or their answers were unheard, and after a subsequent interchange of words, in the course of which the Rev. Mr. Allies admits having called the Brigadier "un insolent," the Brigadier appeared to lose his temper, and proceeded to handcuff the Rev. Mr. Allies whilst on the ground. Mr. E. H. Allies meanwhile remained by his brother perfectly quiet, merely saying, in English, "Do not resist."

The Brigadier then asked for the Rev. Mr. Allies' papers. He was shown the Bishop's certificate, which he was, however, unable to understand, and his knapsack was ransacked, he having explained that he had no passport. Mr. E. H. Allies was told that he could go free, though he also had no passport; but he refused to leave his brother. The Rev. Mr. Allies was then marched of in custody of the carabinieri to Etroubles, about 6 miles distant, at which place the two brothers were placed in a filthy cell, the two being the next morning handcuffed together, conveyed to Aosta, and thrown into prison, when, by the exertions of private friends, they were, however, released on bail.

The charge of the Brigadier against the Rev. Mr. Allies appears to have been that of insolence, and of resisting him in the execution of his duty; the Brigadier affirming that Mr. Allies applied the term "charogne" to him, as well as that of "insolent," though, whilst the latter was admitted, the former was unequivocally denied by Mr. Allies.

This was followed by the trial of the Rev. Mr. Allies, on the 15th June, on the above charge, and the infliction upon him of a fine of 100 lire.

With the remonstrance by Her Majesty's Government to the Italian Government, through Her Majesty's Ambassador at Rome, on the subject, your Excellency is no doubt acquainted.

It appears from the correspondence in this case that the occurrence was the cause of much regret to the authorities at Aosta.

Case of Messrs. Rainford and Monckton.

I now come to the case of Messrs. Rainford and Monckton, which is, comparatively, so recent that I need not enter much into details.*

Mr. P. E. Rainford is a resident proprietor of Taormina, where he had lived many years, and, it need hardly be said, was perfectly well known to all the authorities. Mr. Claud Monckton was his friend, and a guest in his house. On the evening of Sunday, the 17th September, 1876, they were walking, in company, through the Fair of Madonna della Rocca, held a short distance above Taormina, when a Vice-Brigadier of carabinieri approached, and, in an insolent tone, asked Mr. Rainford who he was, much to the surprise of the latter, as, owing to previous communications between them in the matter of a robbery which had occurred a short time before, they were perfectly well known to each other. Mr. Rainford replied that he was an English gentleman. "Where do you come from?" the Vice-Brigadier asked.—"From England." "Where were you born?"—"In London." "What are you doing here—making a tour?" Mr. Rainford, in surprise, answered, "Why I have been living here for many years," and, in answer to further inquiries, replied that he lived in the house with the flagstaff, near the carriage road. "What are you doing here?" asked the carabiniere, in a most offensive manner. Mr. Rainford then perceived that the Vice-Brigadier sought to pick a quarrel if possible, so he answered, quietly, "I am seing the festa, and our servants and workmen are all here." Other questions about Mr. Rainford's family were also answered equally patiently. He then went away, when Mr. Rainford thought the affair was at an end; but he speedily returned, demanding to see Mr. Rainford's papers and passport. Mr. Rainford explained that he had not his passport with him, but that he had one at his house, though not obliged to be provided with it; and that every one present, the carabinieri included, knew him perfectly well. The Vice-Brigadier got more and more angry, and sent off for a carabiniere, who, however, gave his testimony to Mr. Rainford's identity. Mr. Rainford asked what more the officer wanted, when he rejoined, "Silence, or I will put you in irons." Mr. Rainford replied "that he dared not," and asked "what he had done." The Vice-Brigadier, turning to the carabiniere, ordered him to put the irons on Mr. Rainford, when the thumb-screws and chain were produced, and he then ordered that gentleman to "put his hands together." Mr. Rainford absolutely refused to submit to this indignity; and eventually the Vice-Brigadier said, "You are under arrest, and must come with me," when Mr. Rainford, unresisting, was marched off amidst a crowd of astonished spectators.

Some coversation then ensued about Mr. Monckton's papers, which the Vice-Brigadier was told he could see, with Mr. Rainford's, at the house of the latter; but he answered, "No matter, he is under arrest," and they were both marched off to the prison, after further insulting conduct on the part of the Vice-Brigadier, who refused to listen to any explanations.

The two gentlemen were then placed in a filthy cell, the loathsome state of which, as described by Mr. Rainford, I cannot detail to your Excellency, and where, as he states, "the bed consisted of one small sack of fœtid rotten straw and two coverlets reeking with filth and vermin." Herein they were locked, with further insult, and light or food being refused them for the night, though this refusal was somewhat relaxed on the earnest intercession of one of the citizens of Taormina. In the meantime the Sindaco of Taormina arrived, but having been closeted with the Vice-Brigadier some time, went away, without seeing the prisoners, saying he could do nothing. The Pretore then arrived, but in spite of their remonstrances, he also left, telling them they must content themselves till the morning, and that he could do nothing.

It is not necessary to quote the various insults and imprecations indulged in by the Vice-Brigadier, as detailed by Mr. Rainford, nor his own physical sufferings in consequence of his night's confinement in his filthy dungeon, which was shared by Mr. Monckton.

Suffice it to add that on the following morning they were liberated, without any examination or any accusation being brought against them, and the Syndic, the Pretore, and the Vice-Brigadier were all subjected to reproof and punishment.

The cause of the carabiniere's conduct on this occasion is traced by Mr. Rainford to an incident which occurred in the preceding year, when he called this officer to account, with others, for scaling his garden wall, and they affirmed that they were carabinieri, and could enter where they liked without his permission.

Case of Rev. W. Giles.

I must now refer to the case of the Rev. W. Giles, the Vice-Rector of the establishment styled "the English College at Rome," which occurred in the midst of the discussions arising out of the arrest of Messrs. Rainford and Monckton.

It appears that the Rev. Mr. Giles left Rome by train for Naples on the 4th July last. Leaving the train at Rocca Secca, he started in a public conveyance for Isola del Lire, where he found accommodation at an inn in that place. After visiting the waterfalls in the neighbourhood, he returned to the inn, supped, and retired to bed about 10 o'clock. About half-an-hour after midnight Mr. Giles was awakened by a loud knocking at his door. On opening it two carabinieri entered, who demanded to know who he was and all about him.

Thereupon Mr. Giles produced his Foreign Office passport dated in 1870, which the Brigadier, notwithstanding Mr. Giles' explanations to the contrary, contended was not in regola on account of the date, stating that he knew his business better than Mr. Giles did.

Mr. Giles then exhibited his "celebret" from the Cardinal Vicar of Rome, and on his proceeding to translate its purport, the Brigadier caught at the word "Cardinal" and maintained that Mr. Giles had stated himself to be a Cardinal, which he accordingly proceeded to insert in his report.

Mr. Giles was then desired to dress, when he was taken to the quarters of the carabinieri, his knapsack and his person being searched, and his money and other articles taken from him.

He was then locked up in a small and dirty cell, with no article of furniture but a wooden table, and was obliged to pass the night sitting upon the steps of his cell.

On the following afternoon Mr. Giles was taken to Sora in custody of two armed gendarmes, and was there delivered over to the gaoler of that place, by whom he was civilly treated, and where he was subsequently examined by the Delegato di Pubblica Sicurezza and another individual, who admitted that the passport was quite en règle.

Mr. Giles then returned to his prison, and shortly after was released.

The Delegato, it appears, had treated Mr. Giles with courtesy, though he maintained that the Brigadier of Isola was justified in what he had done.

I have not included in the above record the case of Mr. Mercer, which was the subject of a voluminous correspondence between the two Governments, as it did not arise out of any question of identity or of the carriage of passports; but I would refer to it as illustrating to what unnecessary violence and cruelty, especially in the use of thumbscrews, respectable travellers have been exposed at the hands of the Italian police.

Your Excellency will readily perceive from a perusal of the foregoing pages that Her Majesty's Government, when they issued the notification in the "Gazette" relating to passports, had not in view only the case of the Rev. Mr. Giles, as M. Melegari appears to infer in his despatch of the 28th August last, which accompanies your letter of the 12th September, but that this precautionary measure was forced upon them by the numerous acts of violence committed on British travellers since the abandonment of the passport system, and which are due to the inferior officers of police in Italy being permitted to arrest private persons whose identity is not at once established to their satisfaction.

* Consul Dennis, No. 25, September 22; Mr. Malet, No. 341, September 25, 1876.

As to judicial proceedings forming subject of diplomatic discussion.

M. Melegari, in his further despatch of the 28th August, also inclosed in your Excellency's note of the 12th ultimo, complains of Sir A. Paget's protest against the proceedings at the trial of Mr. Rainford, and contends that it is opposed to the principles of public law, as accepted both by England and Italy, that the proceedings of the judicial power should form the subject of diplomatic discussion.

On this point I would observe that, in the present case, Mr. Rainford complains of illegal treatment at the hands of a public officer of the Italian Government, who have punished the officer for his misconduct, but disclaim all responsibility in the matter, on the ground that the remedy is to be sought for in the Courts of Law. In the meanwhile, the local authorities have anticipated any such action on the part of Mr. Rainford by instituting proceedings against him, founded on charges brought by the offending officer, which raise the whole question, and put in issue all the facts of the case. It therefore becomes the duty of Her Majesty's Government to watch those proceedings in the interest of justice, and, although the Italian Government may have no power to interfere with the action of the local Tribunals, Her Majesty's Government cannot admit that this is a valid reason why they should abstain from expressing their sense of the proceedings of those Tribunals under the circumstances of such a case as that of Mr. Rainford. Nor can Her Majesty's Government see any reasonable ground for withholding their remonstrance when a public officer of the Italian Government, in his official capacity, uses language before those Tribunals in direct conflict with the statements made by the Italian Government to that of Her Majesty.

Count Tornielli, in his note to Sir A. Paget of the 10th December, 1876,* stated—

"The Minister of the Interior, attributing the arrest made by the Vice-Brigadier Resconi to an excess of zeal not sufficiently justified by the circumstances, and which was the cause of so much disturbance, gave orders that the Vice-Brigadier should be subjected to a suitable disciplinary punishment."

The Deputy Procuratore del Rè, acting as Public Prosecutor, stated to the Tribunal, as reported by Consul Dennis† (and the accuracy of the Report is not impugned), that "the Vice-Brigadier Resconi had been subjected to arrest for his too lenient treatment of these offenders; for having supplied them with mattrasses, and for having allowed them to have supper brought to them, and to speak to their friends while in prison. It was for granting them these indulgences that Luigi Resconi had been punished, and not for 'any excess of zeal' he had displayed in the arrest, as had erroneously been maintained by the defence."

The Deputy Procuratore also "denied that the Sindaco had been dismissed for his refusal or neglect to liberate Messrs. Rainford and Monckton on the evening of their arrest, which was quite beyond his power to effect. He had been dismissed solely for political reasons, entirely apart from the case before the Court."

Whereas Count Tornielli stated: "With reference to the Sindaco, as it resulted from the inquiry that he failed in his duty as an official of public security in not having made use of the power accorded to him by law of putting an end to the arrest, the Minister of the Interior has decreed his destitution from his office, and this notwithstanding his resignation, which he had already presented."

I regret to say that the impression created by these discrepancies has not been removed by the explanation given in M. Melegari's despatch of the 14th September, contained in your Excellency's memorandum of the 19th of that month.

M. Melegari declines to reply to the observations which have been addressed to him by Her Majesty's Ambassador on the subject of this trial, and does not attempt to question the allegations on which they are founded. I have, therefore, nothing to add to the expression of the views of Her Majesty's Government contained in my letter to your Excellency of the 27th August, in reply to your note of the 15th of that month; and I can only trust that all the facts of this unfortunate case will meet with the fullest publicity and investigation in the proceedings instituted before the Supreme Court of Appeal; and that Mr. Rainford will there obtain the measure of justice to which Her Majesty's Government believe he is entitled.

I have the honour to return to your Excellency the Report by Mr. Consul Dennis to Sir A. Paget, of the proceedings at the Messina trial, which accompanied the papers which your Excellency has done me the honour to communicate to me, and which has been received by M. Melegari from Her Majesty's Ambassador for his perusal.

Her Majesty's Government feel convinced that the mere statement of these cases is sufficient to show that the notification in the "Gazette" was not merely justified, but peremptorily called for as a warning to British subjects travelling or residing in Italy.

It is scarcely necessary for me to add that the notification in question was not issued in any unfriendly spirit towards the Italian Government, but in order to obviate complaints and grievances which both Governments cannot fail to have viewed with equal regret.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received July 11.)

My Lord, Temple, July 10, 1877.

Case of Elizabeth Searfield.

Crime committed by British subject on board American ship in Japanese waters.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was to transmit a despatch, and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan, reporting the case of Elizabeth Searfield, a British subject who had been tried in Her Majesty's Consular Court at Kanagawa on a charge of concealment of birth when employed on board an American ship, the "Annie R. Weston," as servant to the wife of the master of that vessel.

That Sir H. Parkes also asked for instructions as to the course which should be pursued if a British subject, serving on board a foreign ship as one of the crew, or being on board in any other capacity, were to commit a crime on board such ship, either on the high seas or in a port in Japan, and were to escape to the shore, where he could only be properly arrested under the warrant of the British Consul.

Trial by British Consular Court at Kanagawa.

That in the case of Elizabeth Searfield the offence was committed by a British subject on board an American ship in the territorial waters of Japan, and that it seemed clear that it was within the jurisdiction of the British Consular Court in Japan, and that it was probably within the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States if the offender had been brought to justice in America.

But the United States' Consular Courts in Japan had no jurisdiction to try any but American subjects.

The theory that an offender, when he formed part of the crew of an American ship, must be dealt with as an American subject under the Treaty, according to the opinions of the Law Officers of the Crown printed at pp. 8 and 13 of the correspondence transmitted therewith, could only at most apply to offences connected with the discipline or internal management of the ship as to which the foreign seamen, by signing the articles, might be considered to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the flag.

That in the case of Elizabeth Searfield, therefore, it appeared to your Lordship that the United States' Consular Court could not possibly exercise jurisdiction, and that General Van Buren very properly refrained from doing so.

That before expressing those views to Her Majesty's Representatives at Yedo and at Washington, your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we concurred in them.

That as regards Sir H. Parkes' inquiry whether Her Majesty's Consuls in China and Japan should claim jurisdiction over offences committed by British seamen belonging to foreign ships within the territorial waters of those countries, your Lordship presumed that it would be proper to state that such jurisdiction should be claimed in all cases other than offences against the discipline of the foreign ship to which the British seamen belonged; but, in case we should not concur in that view, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to what other instructions should be issued on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Within jurisdiction of British Consular Court in Japan.

That we are of opinion that the case of Elizabeth Searfield was within the jurisdiction of the British Consular Court in Japan.

Except offences against discipline of ship.

And we are also of opinion that Her Majesty's Consuls in China and Japan may claim jurisdiction over offences committed by British seamen belonging to foreign (private or merchant) ships within the territorial waters of those countries, except in those cases where the offence is against the discipline of the ship to which the British seamen may belong.

This not applicable to public ships.

Different considerations may apply to those cases where the ship on board of which the offence has been committed is a public ship, and we have therefore confined ourselves to the cases of private or merchant ships.

Publication of newspapers in Japan. (Mr. Black's case.)

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd August ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 2nd May and 5th July, 1876, on the subject of Mr. Black's claim on account of the suppression of his newspaper, which was printed in the Japanese language, Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Yedo,* asking for instructions as to the course he should pursue in case the Japanese Government should claim a right to interfere with the foreign press in Japan; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be addressed to Sir Harry Parkes in the matter.

That the previous papers on that subject were annexed for convenience of reference, together with a copy of the Treaty between Great Britain and Japan of the 26th August, 1858.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Interference with foreign press.

That, in answer to the general question what course Her Majesty's Minister at Yedo should pursue in case the Japanese Government should claim a right to interfere with the foreign press in Japan, we cannot show other or better rules for his guidance than those which are to be found in the reply of Mr. Fish to Mr. Bingham.

And in reference to the particular questions put by Sir Harry Parkes, we are of opinion—

Japan may prohibit publication.

1. That the Japanese Government is not by Treaty or long usage and forbearance disentitled to make a law prohibiting the publication by British subjects of newspapers which may have been long and uninterruptedly published, and the Japanese Government may make the publication of such newspapers subject to any restrictions which it may think right to impose.

The Japanese Government has the same power over newspapers, whether already established or hereafter started.

2. That the Japanese Government having prohibited and thus made unlawful the publication of a newspaper, may prohibit its own subjects, either by a general law or by a special order in any particular case, from serving British subjects in the printing of such newspaper or in the distributing it among Japanese or foreigners.

But may not prejudice rights of British subjects under Article XXIII of Treaty.

In the printing and publishing of newspapers in Japan, and in the distribution of newspapers, and the employment of Japanese subjects in relation to such newspapers, British subjects are entitled to the benefit of Article XXIII of the Treaty, and Her Majesty's Minister at Yedo may properly be instructed to see that no law on the subject in question be made which shall prejudice the rights of British subjects under that Article of the Treaty.

Robert Miers, resident in Bonin Islands.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th September ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Yedo (No. 98), to the concluding paragraph of which he was to invite our attention, relative to a declaration made by one Robert Miers, a British subject, resident in the Bonin Islands (which have recently passed under the sovereignty of Japan), renouncing British protection, and adopting Japanese nationality.

That it appeared from Sir Harry Parkes' despatch that there was no law in force at present in Japan under which foreigners might become naturalized; and, having regard to that fact and to the provisions of section 6 of the Naturalization Act, 1870, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it was competent to Robert Miers to throw off his allegiance to the British Crown by declaring himself a Japanese subject, or whether he must be deemed a British subject until he had become naturalized in a foreign State in pursuance of a local law empowering him so to do.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot divest himself of British nationality, there being no naturalization law in Japan.

That Robert Miers cannot avail himself of the provisions of the Naturalization Act, 1870, until he has first become naturalized in some foreign State. As there is no legal mode in Japan by which a British subject can become a Japanese subject, it is not competent for a British subject to divest himself of his British nationality and clothe himself by a mere personal declaration with a Japanese nationality.

That Mr. Consul Pakenham, in his despatch No. 3, Commercial, of the 24th January last, desired to be informed whether, under the Order in Council of the 4th February, 1869, he had power to entertain civil suits brought by foreigners against British subjects.

That Mr. Lister was to inclose copies of the Treaty between Great Britain and Madagascar of the 27th June, 1865, and of Her Majesty's Order in Council above referred to, regulating the exercise of civil and criminal jurisdiction by Her Majesty's Consul in that island.

That having regard to the terms of Article XI of the Treaty, and section 6 of the Order in Council, your Lordship proposed to instruct Her Majesty's Consul that he had no power to entertain suits of a civil nature arising between British subjects and the subjects of other foreign nations, but, before doing so, your Lordship desired to be informed whether we concurred in that view.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Miscellaneous.

No. 33.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received June 21.)

My Lord, Temple, June 20, 1877.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that the following question had been recently put in the House of Commons to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, viz.:—

Papers presented to Parliament of later date than that of their presentation.

"With reference to the Reports of Her Majesty's Secretaries of Embassy and Legation on the Manufactures, Commerce, &c., of the countries in which they reside (No. IV), how a Report from Mr. Hill, dated Munich, the 23rd August, 1876, and a paper from Mr. Walter Baring, dated Therapia, the 9th September, 1876, came to be included among the Reports presented by command to Parliament on the 9th day of August, 1876, and whether he considers that the publisher of papers thus inserted among papers presented to Parliament would, in case of need, be entitled to the benefit of the provisions of the Act 3 and 4 Vict., cap. 9, for the protection of persons concerned in the publication of papers by or under the authority of either House of Parliament."

As to protection of publisher under 3 & 4 Vict., cap. 9.

Practice founded on ground of public convenience.

That, as regards the first portion of that question, it was sufficient there to state that the practice followed in that Office of occasionally including in a Parliamentary Paper Reports received from Her Majesty's Secretaries of Legation and Consuls subsequent to the prorogation of Parliament was one that was founded upon grounds of public convenience.

* Consul Pakenham, No. 3, Commercial, January 15; Lord Lyons, No. 230, Commercial, June 12; to Consul Pakenham, No. 1, Commercial, 1874; Consul Pakenham, No. 2, Commercial, January 12; No. 3, Commercial, January 24; Lord Lyons, No. 193, Commercial, May 9, 1877.

That, with regard to the second portion of the question, it was to be observed that the Commercial Reports of Her Majesty's Secretaries and Consuls were printed and published "by command of Her Majesty."

Act does not refer to "command" papers.

That the privilege and protection conferred by the Act referred to applied, however, only to such of the Reports, Papers, Votes, or Proceedings of either House of Parliament "as such House of Parliament may deem fit or necessary to be published;" and that, in order that the printer and publisher should obtain the certificate mentioned in the Act, and which was a bar to legal proceedings, he must have been actually employed by or acting under the authority of the Houses of Parliament, or one of them, in the publication of such Report, &c.

Publisher not privileged.

That the Commercial Reports referred to in question being published by command of Her Majesty, and not in pursuance of the order of either House of Parliament, nor by any person acting under their authority, your Lordship presumed that the inquiry as to whether they were within the privilege conferred by the Act should be answered in the negative; your Lordship would, however, be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the reply which should be made on that point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Concur in above view.

That we concur with your Lordship, and are of opinion that the papers referred to are not within the privilege conferred by the 3 and 4 Vict., cap. 9.

Slave embarked on board British vessel and relanded in Morocco.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 21st March ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier* on the case of a slave who had been embarked on board a British vessel and subsequently relanded on Moorish territory, the vessel having put back from stress of weather.

That the facts of the case were shortly stated in Sir John Hay's despatch, and there appeared to be no ground for supposing that the slave was relanded against his will.

That having regard, therefore, to the judgments of Lord Stowell in the cases of the slave Grace and the slave Jack Martin referred to as the "Antigua Slave Cases" in the papers presented to the Royal Commission on Fugitive Slaves by Mr. H. C. Rothery and printed at p. 229 of the Report, and to the judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dred Scott case, it would seem that Her Majesty's Government would not be warranted by law in claiming the surrender or liberation of the slave in question on the ground that he had landed from a British vessel or on any other ground; but, before sending any instructions to Her Majesty's Minister at Tangier, your Lordship was desirous of being informed whether there were any circumstances in the case which, in our opinion, lead to a different conclusion; and your Lordship would be glad if we would favour you with any observations which might occur to us on a perusal of the papers transmitted.

* Sir J. Hay, No. 257.

1877

In obedience to your Lordships commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government not warranted by law in claiming surrender.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government will not be warranted by law in claiming the surrender or liberation of the slave, who, in the circumstances stated by Sir J. Hay, had embarked upon a British merchant-ship, and subsequently left that ship and returned to his own country, where slavery was part of the law of the country.

Reference to the slave Grace.

Slave returning to his country reverts to slavery.

With the exception of a doubt thrown on the case of the slave Grace by Sir R. Phillimore in his Commentaries on International Law in the following words, that the judgment in that case "was one of the most questionable judgments ever pronounced by Lord Stowell," we believe all the authorities, and these we state in the margin,[*] agree that a slave who has come to this country or been on board a British ship on the high seas, when he returns to the place where he has been a slave resumes on so doing his condition as a slave.

Extradition Treaty with Netherlands. As to application to Straits Settlements.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 14th December, 1876, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to inclose a letter from the Colonial Office, and to request our opinion on certain points raised by it as to the application to the Straits Settlements of the Extradition Treaty between England and Holland.

That the Treaty, of which a copy was inclosed, was concluded on the 19th June, 1874.

Was not intended to apply to the Colonies.

That, during the course of the negotiations which led to this Treaty, it was ascertained that the Constitution of Holland did not permit of the application of its provisions to her Colonies, and it was consequently agreed that it should apply to the mother-countries only. That it appeared to have been considered at that time sufficient for that purpose to omit the clause usually inserted in Extradition Treaties concluded by this country (of which an example would be found in Article XIV of the Treaty with Sweden and Norway, of which a copy was inclosed) by which the operation of the Treaty was expressly extended to the Colonies of the Contracting Parties.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to say that he was to observe, however, that the 1st Article of the Treaty with Holland provided "for the mutual surrender of any persons who, being accused of certain specified crimes committed within the jurisdiction of the requiring party shall be found within the territories of the other party," and that those words are similar to those of the extradition clause of the Ashburton Treaty, and of the French Treaty of 1843, and of other Treaties which have always been held to apply to the British Colonies, as is shown by the Acts passed to carry them into effect.

N.B.—These cases (save the last) are taken from Cockburn's papers in the Report, pp. 47-54.

That, by an Order in Council of the 6th August, 1874, the Extradition Act, 1870, was applied to the Treaty with Holland without any reservation whatever, and the first question upon which Lord Tenterden stated he was to request our opinion is whether, having regard to the language of section 17 of the Act, and to the general terms of the Treaty above cited, both the Act and the Treaty apply to and are legally in force in British Colonies, though contrary to the intention of the two Governments.

That the circumstances which have given rise to the inquiry were the following:—

That in the Colony of the Straits Settlements extradition had hitherto been carried on under the provisions of an Indian Act (No. 7 of 1854) which was in force at the time when the Settlements ceased to form part of the territories of the Government of India. That by this Act, a copy of which was inclosed, fugitives from justice accused of the crimes and offences therein mentioned may be surrendered on the requisition of any foreign State and on complying with certain formalities, without the necessity of any Convention, and without reference to reciprocity. That this large power of extradition is of great advantage to the Colony, as it is only separated from the adjoining territories by a narrow strait which can be crossed in an open boat, and is therefore liable, from its geographical conditions, to be inundated with fugitive offenders.

Is Indian Extradition Act abrogated by the Treaty?

That the Government of the Straits Settlements were, therefore, very desirous not to lose the benefit of the Indian Act, but they were in doubt whether it had not ceased to be in force by reason of the application of the Extradition Act, 1870, to the Treaty with Holland by the Order in Council of the 6th August, 1874, which, as before observed, contains no exception or reservation as to the Colonies or as to the continuance of the Indian Act in the manner provided by sections 17 and 18. That your Lordship therefore desired to be informed whether, in the event of our answer to the first question being in the affirmative (namely, that the Imperial Extradition Acts and the Treaty with Holland are legally in force in British Colonies), we are of opinion that the Indian Act No. 7 of 1854 has ceased to be in force in the Straits Settlements as regards extradition with Holland and her Colonies.

That if we should be of opinion that the legal effect of the Treaty and of the Order in Council applying the Extradition Act, 1870, thereto was to bring British Colonies under their operation, and to suspend in the Straits Settlements as regards Holland the operation of the Indian Act No. 7 of 1874, Lord Tenterden stated that he was to request that we would further advise your Lordship whether the difficulty can be met by issuing a new Order in Council which should repeal that of the 6th August, 1874, and apply the Extradition Act, 1870, to the Treaty with Holland excepting the Colonies of either nation; or whether any other course should, in our opinion, be adopted under the circumstances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Extradition Act does apply to Straits Settlements.

That, in our opinion, the Act of 1870 does, by the force of section 17 of that Act, and the general words of the Treaty of the 19th June, 1874, apply to and is in force in the Straits Settlements.

Indian Act may be kept in force by an Order in Council.

The difficulty, if any, may, however, in our opinion be removed, and the wishes of the Government of the Straits Settlements be met by an Order in Council, under section 18 of the "Extradition Act, 1870," directing that the Indian Act No. 7 of 1854 shall have effect in the Straits Settlements without modification or alteration.

And, looking to section 2 of the "Extradition Act, 1870," we do not think that it will be necessary to repeal the Order in Council of August 1874.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 11th January last, on the question raised by the Governor of the Straits Settlements as to the application to that Colony of the Imperial Extradition Acts as regards the Treaty between Great Britain and Holland, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further correspondence which had taken place between the Colonial Office and the Foreign Office, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the question whether fugitives from the Dutch Colonies might legally be surrendered by the Government of the Straits Settlements under the Imperial Extradition Acts and the Treaty with Holland, although, as explained in the previous correspondence, the Dutch Government had no power to include the Dutch Colonies in an Extradition Treaty, and it was not intended that they should be included in the Treaty of 1874. That we should observe that the matter was one of urgency, as it was stated in the telegram from the Governor of the Straits Settlements that a fugitive was at that moment in custody, with a view to his surrender to the Dutch authorities.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received June 13.)

My Lord, Temple, June 12, 1877.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request our opinion upon the following point:—

Sovereignty of Cocos Keeling Islands.

That in the autumn of 1856 the Naval Officer commanding in the East Indies was directed to take possession, in Her Majesty's name, of the Cocos Islands, the islands which he was intended to annex being a group of that name, situated in the Bay of Bengal, north-east of the Andaman Islands.

Occupied by Captain Fremantle under misapprehension.

That Captain Fremantle, the officer who received the instructions, acting, as he believed, in accordance with them, took possession in 1867* of a group known as the Keeling or Cocos Islands, lying in quite a different situation, 12° south of the Equator.

Mr. Ross appointed Superintendent. Deprived of right to trade under Netherlands flag.

That the islands, at the time of the occupation, were in possession of Mr. Ross, whose father had founded a Colony on them in 1824. That gentleman was appointed by Captain Fremantle Superintendent of the new possession of the Crown. In consequence of the British annexation of the islands, Mr. Ross was deprived by the Netherland authorities in the East of the right which he had therefore exercised of trading under the Netherland flag with the Netherland Colonies.

That Mr. Ross appeared to have suffered from the loss of his coasting trade, and to have made representations to that effect to Her Majesty's Government. It was in consequence at one time contemplated to inform the Netherland Government confidentially that the annexation of the islands was a mistake, and that no further step would be taken for the recognition of Captain Ross in the capacity of Lieutenant-Governor, or for the exercise of any act of authority in them, if he were permitted to resume his coasting trade. Upon consideration, however, that idea was abandoned, and matters remained in statu quo.

* Sic. Query 1857. See draft to Law Officers, June 4, 1877.

That in 1866 Mr. Ross was reported to be acting as Governor and Proprietor of the Settlement, and carrying on trade under the British flag with the neighbouring British and Netherland Settlements. No foreign Power appeared at any time to have claimed the islands.

That it had recently been pointed out that they might become valuable possessions, and under those circumstances the inquiry had been put to the Foreign Office by the Colonial Office whether any further action was required to establish Her Majesty's right to them.

That it appeared to your Lordship that the act of taking possession of them by Captain Fremantle being the result of a mistake in his conception of his instructions, it was therefore unauthorized, and that there was no subsequent ratification of it by the Crown. The inchoate title of the Crown was not perfected by a de facto occupation, and the appointment of Mr. Ross, conferred on him by Captain Fremantle, was not confirmed; your Lordship was consequently doubtful whether the title of Great Britain to those islands could be satisfactorily maintained against any nation which might impugn it, and before replying to the inquiry of the Colonial Office your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the point.

That papers bearing on the subject were inclosed therewith.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

British title doubtful unless occupation is ratified by Her Majesty's Government.

That so long as the occupation of these islands by British subjects, and the government of these islands under British authority and by British laws, is not ratified and confirmed by Her Majesty's Government, we are of opinion that the title of Great Britain to the islands is open to doubt, and therefore disputable or liable to be impugned by any foreign nation.

Clause 21 of the Order provides in effect that British subjects found in the Western Pacific Islands can be tried for offences committed on the high seas, according to the procedure prescribed for the trial of persons who have committed offences within the islands. We do not think Her Majesty could confer such a power. It is true the Pacific Islanders Protection Act authorized the establishment of a Court for the trial of persons accused of the perpetration of crimes within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, but we think it was not intended that the Court so to be established should be at liberty to adopt, in the trial of persons accused of crimes committed on the high seas, a course of procedure unknown to the laws of the realm.

Deportation without appeal, and interrogation of accused persons, arbitrary.

Subject to the above observations, the provisions of the Order in Council appear to be such as the Crown had power under the before-mentioned Acts to make. With reference to the question whether there is any objection to the provisions of the Order, we beg to remark that some of such provisions seem to us to be extremely arbitrary, and others appear to introduce novel principles of procedure repugnant to British law. We refer chiefly to the provisions for deportation of British subjects without appeal, and for the interrogation of persons accused of crime. We presume, however, that those by whom the Order in Council has been prepared are in possession of information respecting the condition of the Western Pacific which justifies the extraordinary character of these provisions.

Annex to No. 39.

The Earl of Derby to Major Wodehouse.

(No. 1. Commercial.)
Sir,
Foreign Office, January 29, 1877.

HER Majesty's Government have had under their consideration your despatch No. 1, Commercial, of the 4th ultimo, reporting as to the amount of duty levied upon British produce imported into the Sandwich Islands, and the probable effect upon British trade of the differential treatment to which such produce would be subjected under the provisions of the Reciprocity Treaty between the United States and the Sandwich Islands of the 30th January, 1875.

Her Majesty's Government gather from your despatch that a duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem is actually levied upon certain goods of British origin, and that by an Act of the Hawaiian Legislature, dated the 27th September, 1876, on and after the 9th October next the duty will in some cases be raised to 25 per cent., while similar goods, the produce of the United States, will be admitted into the Sandwich Islands free of duty.

While British Treaty lasts, Her Majesty's Government cannot allow differential treatment.

I have now to instruct you to give formal notice to the Hawaiian Government, that so long as Articles IV, V, and VI of the Treaty of the 10th July, 1851, continue in force, Her Majesty's Government cannot allow of British goods imported into the Sandwich Islands being subjected to treatment other than that which is accorded to similar goods of American origin.

I have to observe, for your own information, that Her Majesty's Government are aware that it is open to the Hawaiian Government, under Article XVII of the Treaty of 1851, by giving twelve months' notice, to terminate the operation of Articles IV, V, and VI of that Treaty, and thus free themselves from all Treaty obligations, so far as Great Britain is concerned, in regard to the imposition of customs duties.

Her Majesty's Government would, it is true, experience some difficulty in reconciling the adoption of such a course by the Hawaiian Government, at the present moment, with the spirit of the Article above quoted, which gives as a reason for allowing the abrogation of Articles IV, V, and VI, that "the two Contracting Parties may have the opportunity of treating and agreeing upon such other arrangements as may tend still further to the improvement of their mutual intercourse, and to the advancement of the interests of their respective subjects;" whereas the effect of now abrogating those Articles would be to place British produce at a grave disadvantage as compared with that of the United States.

Her Majesty's Government would, however, as has been already pointed out, not be prepared to deny that the Hawaiian Government, in so doing, were acting within their strict Treaty rights; but no notice has been given by the Hawaiian Government of their intention to terminate the Articles in question, and Her Majesty's Government must therefore expect, as they are entitled to do by Treaty, that all exemptions or privileges accorded to American produce imported into the Sandwich Islands shall be extended to the produce of Great Britain.

I am, &c.

Western Polynesia. Order in Council.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 3rd January last, on the draft Order in Council for regulating the exercise of Her Majesty's jurisdiction over British subjects in Western Polynesia, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letters from the Colonial Office,* together with the draft Order, containing some further alterations which had been suggested by Mr. Reilly; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, in view of the explanations offered by the Colonial Office in their letter of the 14th February, your Lordship may properly concur in the issue of the proposed Order in its present shape.

No. 41.

Dr. Tristram to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

My Lord, 1, King's Bench Walk, Temple, February 9, 1877.

Marriages in Persia and in heathen countries.

I HAVE carefully considered the question submitted to your Lordship by the Rev. Henry Wright, Honorary Secretary to the Church Missionary Society, viz., whether a marriage between parties, one or both of whom are British subjects, solemnized by an ordained Minister of the Church of England, at Ispahan or elsewhere in Persia, would be a good marriage in law, and I have now the honour to report to your Lordship my opinion thereon.

In English factories abroad.

It has been decided in the House of Lords in the "Queen v. Mills," 10 Clark and Finelly, p. 534, and reaffirmed by the House in "Beamish v. Beamish," 9 House of Lords Reports, p. 274, that at common law, to constitute a marriage celebrated in England valid it must, before the Reformation, have been celebrated by a priest, and after the Reformation, by a priest or deacon. It is further certain that the English Marriage Acts do not extend beyond this country, and it also appears by the cases that Englishmen, in a Mahommedan or heathen country, as well as in many other countries where the professing religion is essentially different from ours, carry with them a right to contract a marriage in such countries in the form prescribed by common law. Thus Lord Stowell, in "Ruding v. Smith," 2 Haggard's Consistory Reports, p. 385, after stating the marriages of British subjects in the English factories in Europe and in the East are regulated as to the form of the contracts of marriages by the law of England, proceeds :—

"Nobody can suppose that while the Mogul Empire existed an Englishman was bound to consult the Koran for the celebration of his marriage. Even where no foreign connection can be ascribed, a respect is shown to the opinions and practice of a distinct people. The validity of a Greek marriage in the extensive dominions of Turkey is left to depend, I presume, upon their own canons, without any reference to Mahommedan customs. There is a jus gentium upon this matter, a comity which treats with tenderness, or at least with toleration, the usages of a distinct people in this transaction of marriage."

At Madras by Roman Catholic priest.

In "Lantom v. Teesdale," 8 Toundron's Reports, p. 830 (a case precisely in point), Chief Justice Gibbs, in delivering the unanimous decision of the Court of Common Pleas, held that a marriage solemnized in Madras between parties who were English by a Roman Catholic priest (after the Governor of Madras had refused a licence for the marriage to be celebrated by the English Chaplain) was valid on the ground that in a Mahommedan or heathen country the parties had carried with them their common law right of being married by any person in holy orders.

Consular Marriage Act does not invalidate other marriages.

I am aware that a notion has been set abroad by certain Consular officers that inasmuch as the Consular Marriage Act (12 & 13 Vict., cap. 168) authorizes the marriage of a British subject to be celebrated before the Consuls, and as section . . . ("after reciting that marriages have been entered into abroad by British subjects under circumstances that may occasion doubts as to their validity"), "enacts that all marriages solemnized before the passing of the Act between subjects or a subject of this realm by an ordained minister of our Church or of the Church of Scotland ("as well as other marriages therein specified") "shall be deemed to be valid," marriages of English subjects abroad can now only be legally celebrated at the Embassy or Minister's residence, or before a Consul.

The construction of the Act is, in my view of the law, untenable. For—

1. The right of British subjects to be married in certain foreign countries by ordained ministers of our Church being established by the cases as existing up to the time of the passing of the Act, such right could only be taken away (if at all) by clear words of an Act of Parliament; on the contrary, section 21 provides "that the Act shall not be construed to confirm or impair, or in any wise affect, the validity in law of any marriage solemnized beyond the seas, otherwise than is therein provided."

General principle: marriage according to lex loci is good everywhere.

2. As in Russia, according to the decision of the Chancellor of Russia in the Riga case, and in some other foreign countries, and, as far as I am aware, in all Eastern countries, such marriages have always been recognized as valid, the insertion of a provision in the Act invalidating them, or prohibiting them, would be in violation of an established principle of international jurisprudence: "That a marriage valid according to the law of the place is good everywhere else." Ruding v. Smith, Ot. 391.

3. This construction is at variance with the object of the Act, which, according to the preamble, was passed "to afford greater facilities for the marriage of Her Majesty's subjects resident abroad." If the Consular construction is correct, the Act in many cases, instead of facilitating such marriages, will throw serious impediments in their way, there being many places, especially up-country, where there are missionaries but no Consuls.

Marriages by an ordained minister in Persia are valid.

I beg leave, therefore, to report to your Lordship that marriages solemnized by an ordained minister of our Church (whether priest or deacon) between parties, one or both of whom are British subjects, at Ispahan or elsewhere in Persia, are valid, and would, according to the case, be upheld by the Courts of this country.

At Tehran should be performed at house of Her Majesty's Minister.

I think it would be undesirable for a missionary to solemnize a marriage at Tehran elsewhere than at this (? Her Majesty's) Minister's residence, excepting under special circumstances.

Duplicate register.

It would be advisable that the Committee of the Church Missionary Society should instruct their missionaries to register all such marriages in duplicate, and to take care that the parties to the marriages and the witnesses sign each register or certificate, and that one of the duplicates be transmitted to the Registry of the Diocese of London.

I have, &c.

No. 42.

Sir J. Pauncefote to the Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane.[*]

Gentlemen, Foreign Office, May 31, 1877.

Administration of oath to a Persian by Her Majesty's Minister at Tehran.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister and Consul-General at Tehran,[†] reporting the circumstances under which he considered himself justified in declining, pending instructions from the Foreign Office, to take the affidavit of Dost Mahomet Khan, the son of the late Minister of Finance Dost Ali Khan, and also to certify to his signature to a power of attorney, which documents are intended to be used for the purpose of obtaining payment from the Bank of England of a sum of about 15,000*l.* invested by the late Minister of Finance in the 3 per cent. Consols.

With reference to the Act 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 42, Her Majesty's Diplomatic and Consular officers have, from time to time, been instructed that they should offer no obstacle or delay, as a general rule, in taking affidavits, and in certifying to documents intended to be used in any legal proceedings in this country, and that they are not called upon to read such documents, as they only act ministerially in these matters.

In the present case, however, the proposed affidavit contains an allegation that the late Minister of Finance died intestate, whereas it appears that his widow, since deceased, transmitted to the British Legation a copy of a will executed by her late husband, under which, as executrix, she was desirous to have the money deposited in the Bank of England transferred into her own name.

[*] The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be found when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain the original draft of the Report. The Law Officers, however, do not retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has, therefore, been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as the bare Report, without the usual preamble, would not be wholly intelligible.

[†] Mr. Taylour Thomson, No. 4, Consular, March 19, 1877.

Suspected fraudulent intention to suppress a will.

Mr. Taylour Thomson, therefore, apprehends that some deceit is about to be practised in this case, and further, he states that in Persia an oath to be legally binding must be taken before one of the High Priests, and for this reason he believes that an oath taken on the Koran before him by a Mahommedan native of Persia would not be binding on his conscience.

Lord Derby, however, apprehends that such a person could be sworn in a Court of Law in this country, according to the well-known rule laid down by Chief Justice Willes, in Omichund v. Barker, that belief in a God that can reward or punish is sufficient where a person swears in the form prescribed by his religion, and if you should concur, his Lordship proposes to instruct Mr. Taylour Thomson that he may administer an oath to Dost Mahomet Khan accordingly.

Notwithstanding Mr. Taylour Thomson's apprehension that some deception may be practised through the instrumentality of Her Majesty's Legation on the Court of Probate in this country, the object in view being apparently to suppress the will and to obtain letters of administration, it appears to Lord Derby that Her Majesty's Minister would not be justified in refusing to take the affidavit of Dost Mahomet Khan, or to certify to his signature to the power of attorney, as he would by so doing constitute himself, as it were, the judge of the validity of the will; and if you should concur in that view, his Lordship would be glad to be informed whether, in your opinion, there is any objection to the fact of the deposit of a will in Her Majesty's Legation by the widow of the deceased being recorded on the affidavit as suggested by Mr. Taylour Thomson, and if so, what other precautions should be taken under the circumstances.

I am to request that you will favour Lord Derby, at your earliest convenience, with your views on all the points above-mentioned, in order that instructions may be forwarded without delay to Mr. Taylour Thomson in reply to his despatch.

I have, &c.
(Signed) JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE.

Report.

Need not administer oaths to other than British subjects.

That in March 1875 the Law Officers reported that it was competent to, but not obligatory upon, British Consular officers to administer oaths, or to take the affidavits of persons other than British subjects, or to do notarial acts at the instance of such persons.

And that, as a general rule, and with the view of avoiding possible inconvenient complications, it was desirable that British Consular officers should, as far as possible, abstain from discharging the duties above named, except in relation to British subjects, or in matters in which British interests are involved.

The case submitted to your Lordship by Mr. Taylour Thomson is, in our opinion, an instance of the inconvenient complication which may be occasioned by the act of the British Consular authority.

Refuse oath, but may certify to signature.

In this state of things we are, therefore, of opinion that Mr. Taylour Thomson may properly be instructed not to administer the oath, but he may certify to the signature of Dost Mahomed Khan to the power of attorney.

Peruvian ship "Huascar." Engagement with Her Majesty's ship "Shah."

My Lord,

Temple, July 21, 1877.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 17th July instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to lay before us the papers noted in the margin relating to the naval engagement which had taken place between Her Majesty's ships "Shah" and "Amethyst" and the Peruvian iron-clad "Huascar" while in the possession of rebels.

That the facts of the case, and the grounds upon which Admiral de Horsey considered his action justified under the circumstances, were so fully and clearly set out in his despatch of the 3rd June that it was only necessary to draw our attention to the Decree of the President of the Republic of Peru inclosed in Mr. Graham's despatch No. 22 of the 12th May last, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proceedings of Admiral de Horsey reported by him in his despatch above referred to were open to any objection in point of law.

That the attention of Parliament had been drawn to that case; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to report upon it at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

"Huascar," under no national flag, and repudiated by Peruvian Government, stopped British vessels on high seas.

That the papers transmitted to us show that the "Huascar" had been taken out of the hands of her lawful officers, that the Peruvian Government had disavowed any liability for the acts of the "Huascar," and that vessel was consequently sailing under no national flag, and no redress could be had for any acts which she might commit.

The papers further show that the "Huascar," whilst so sailing and officered, and after the Peruvian Government had disavowed all liability for the acts of the "Huascar," stopped two British mail steamers on the high seas and demanded their mails; took by force a passenger from a ship under British colours, and a quantity of coals out of another British vessel; and lastly, that a British subject was forced to act as engineer on board the "Huascar," and was by violence prevented from communicating with the British authorities.

British Admiral justified in engaging her.

In this state of things, we are of opinion that Admiral de Horsey was bound to act decisively for the protection of British subjects and British property, and that the proceedings resorted to by him were in law justifiable.

That the papers relating to Mr. Vines' case had already been to the Law Officers and reported on by them on the 2nd August, 1874.

Subpœna for Secretary of State.

That with reference to the subpœna contained in Mr. Swann's letter of the 10th August, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether your Lordship would be justified, on grounds of public policy, in declining to give evidence of the circumstances under which Mr. Vines' resignation was accepted, and if so, what steps we would suggest should be taken to inform the Court, and to relieve your Lordship from the necessity of appearing in pursuance of the subpœna.

Reply to Mr. Swann Vines not dismissed.

That no reply had been sent to Mr. Swann's letter, but your Lordship proposed to inform him, if we should concur in the propriety of that course, that no order was at any time issued for the dismissal of Mr. Vines, and it was therefore presumed that Mr. Swann, whose object was to prove the contrary, did not desire to trouble your Lordship any further in the matter.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 21st July last, upon the subject of the late naval action in the Pacific between Her Majesty's ships "Shah" and "Amethyst" and the rebel Peruvian iron-clad "Huascar," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima, inclosing documents relating to the claim of Messrs. Anthony and Tate for payment from the Peruvian Government for certain coals and sacks forcibly taken from the British barque "Imucina" by the "Huascar," at Agua, on the 12th, 13th, and 14th May.

Peruvian Decree disclaims "Huascar's" acts.

That it appeared to your Lordship that in view of the Decree issued by the Peruvian Government on the 8th May (see p. 2 of accompanying print), disclaiming responsibility for the acts of the "Huascar," and in view also of the fact that Her Majesty's Government relied mainly on that Decree in justification of the attack made upon the "Huascar" by Her Majesty's ships, it was impossible for them to present the claim of Messrs. Anthony and Tate to the Peruvian Government; but that, before writing to Mr Graham in that sense, your Lordship would be glad to know whether we concurred in the view which your Lordship took of the question.

Her Majesty's Government cannot support claim.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, considering the Decree of the Peruvian Government on the 8th May, and the views which Her Majesty's Government have taken throughout of the status of the "Huascar," no claim can properly be made by Her Majesty's Government upon the Peruvian Government for the loss sustained by Messrs. Anthony and Tate through the depredations of the "Huascar."

Swann v. Vines. Papers required respecting dismissal of Vines, &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 19th September respecting matters connected with the forthcoming action of "Swann v. Vines," he was to transmit, for our consideration, two further letters, both dated the 9th ultimo, which had been addressed to your Lordship by Mr. Swann, requesting that further information might be supplied to him from the archives of the Foreign Office for the purpose of his action against Mr. Vines.

That, on receipt of our Report of the 19th September, Mr. Swann was informed that no order was at any time issued for the dismissal of Mr. Vines, and that as the object of Mr. Swann appeared to be to prove the contrary, it was presumed that he would not have occasion to trouble your Lordship further in the matter.

Decline further information to Swann.

That, in reply to the two further letters from Mr. Swann then transmitted to us, your Lordship proposed, with our concurrence, to cause him to be informed that your Lordship must decline to furnish him with any further particulars on the subject of his inquiry than were contained in the letters already addressed to him from the Foreign Office, as it was contrary to the usages of the Foreign Office, founded on the grounds of public policy, to supply such information.

As to production of papers by Mr. Hertslet, &c.

That Mr. Lister was further to acquaint us that Mr. Hertslet, the Librarian to that Department, had been called upon to produce papers connected with that case at the forthcoming trial, which was set down for hearing on the 2nd November, but that your Lordship proposed to instruct that gentleman to decline to produce the documents called for, or to answer any questions connected therewith or with the circumstances attending the resignation of Mr. Vines, on the ground of its being inconvenient and detrimental to the public service to do so.

That Mr. Lister was to request us to be so good as to inform your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, whether we concurred in the propriety of the course which your Lordship proposed to adopt.

That Mr. Lister also transmitted a letter addressed to your Lordship by Mr. Vines, the defendant in the action, and was to request that we would advise your Lordship as to the reply which it would be proper to return to his application.

We are also honoured with a letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 27th ultimo, transmitting a letter which had been received from Mr. A. P. Michael, requesting to be furnished with information respecting matters connected with the forthcoming action of "Swann v. Vines," and also a copy of the reply which your Lordship had caused to be returned to Mr. Michael.

We have also the honour to acknowledge the receipt of a further letter from Mr. Lister, dated the 30th ultimo, transmitting a letter which had been received from Mr. A. D. Michael, renewing his application for the production of certain documents at the forthcoming action of "Swann v. Vines." The documents referred to in Mr. Michael's letter would be found in the accompanying volume.

That Mr. Lister was to request us to take Mr. Michael's letter into our consideration, in connection with the other papers which had been submitted to us, and to cause your Lordship to be informed, with as little delay as possible, as to the course which, in our opinion, should be followed with respect to that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the answer which your Lordship proposes to send to Mr. Swann in reply to to his two letters dated the 9th ultimo is, in our opinion, right and proper.

Certain papers may be returned to Vines.

With reference to the copy of the Peruvian law proceedings under the seal of the Court, the statutory declarations of Mr. Vines and Mr. Patrick Gibson, and the documents sent therewith, we are of opinion that these are, in strictness, the property of Mr. Vines, and may be returned to him, to make such use of as he may be advised.

But no other documents or papers than these should be sent or communicated, in any way, to Mr. Vines.

Conveyance of Peruvian troops in British vessel "Limena" for suppression of rebellion.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 3rd July last,[*] stating that he was to transmit to us a letter from the Lords of the Admiralty forwarding a despatch from the Commander-in-chief on the Pacific Station, in which Admiral de Horsey applied for instructions as to the course he should pursue in the case of British ships hired by a foreign State for the conveyance of troops dispatched to suppress a rebellion, and reporting the case of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steam-ship "Limena," which was recently chartered for that purpose by the Peruvian Government at Callao.

Bearing of Foreign Enlistment Act.

That it would seem that Admiral de Horsey took a right view of his duties in abstaining from any interference with that vessel, as the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act relating to the dispatch of vessels "in the military or naval service of a foreign State at war with a friendly State," even if they should apply to such a transaction as that referred to, were limited to acts committed within Her Majesty's dominions.

That as regards the question whether the dispatch of a vessel from a British Colony in the service of a foreign State for the purpose of suppressing a rebellion was an offence against the Act, the reply would seem to depend on the construction of the words "a foreign State at war with any friendly State."

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to inclose our Report of the 10th October, 1876, on a question which arose at the Bahamas with reference to the rebellion in Cuba, and in which we advised that, having regard to the interpretation clause of the Act, the Cuban rebels came within the definition given "of a foreign State at war with a foreign State at peace with Her Majesty," and that the dispatch of a vessel from the Bahamas in the service of the Cuban insurgents, for the purpose of committing hostilities against the Spanish Government, would be a violation of the Act.

That the converse case now presented itself for consideration, and your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion as to whether, on the right construction of the Act, where a rebellion occurs in a foreign State at peace with Her Majesty, and the rebels assume to exercise the powers of government over part of a province or people, the rebels must be considered as "a foreign State at peace with Her Majesty," or as a "friendly State" (which expressions are declared synonymous by section 4), so as to render illegal the dispatch of a British ship from Her Majesty's dominions to be employed in the military or naval service of the foreign State for the purpose of suppressing the rebellion.

That that would appear to be the effect of the definition of "foreign State" in the interpretation clause, "if not inconsistent with the context."

That Sir J. Pauncefote was also to request that we would be good enough to advise your Lordship as to the reply which should be given to the inquiry made by the Lords of the Admiralty both as regards the case of the "Limena" and the general question raised.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Foreign Enlistment Act forbids engagement in military service of foreign State at war with friendly State.

That the granting the use of a ship to convey troops is clearly an accepting of an engagement (see section 4 of the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870") in the military or naval service (see section 30 of the same Act for the meaning of these words).

This section 4 provides that if any person, being a British subject, within or without Her Majesty's dominions, accepts an engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign State at war with a foreign State at peace with Her Majesty, he shall be guilty of an offence against the Act, although the engagement was made and carried out not within Her Majesty's dominions.

Definition of "foreign State."

Then, referring to the definition of a "foreign State," in section 30, that term includes "part of any province or people, or any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, Colony, province, or part of any province or people."

Rebels come within.

The use of a ship to convey troops belonging to a friendly Power to act against rebels to the foreign Power would, under sections 4 and 30, be, in our opinion, an offence against the "Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870."

"Limena" could be detained on high seas for breach of neutrality, but not in Peruvian waters.

In reference to the conduct of Admiral de Horsey in the particular case, and the reply which should be given to the Lords of the Admiralty, their Lordships may, in our opinion, properly be informed that, as long as the "Limena" was in Peruvian waters, he was quite right in not detaining her, and in confining himself to the caution which he gave to the master and crew of that vessel.

We think, however, that, as the master and crew of the "Limena" were engaged in the commission of a breach of neutrality, Admiral de Horsey would, on the high seas, have been justified in stopping the vessel and preventing her proceeding on her voyage whilst the Peruvian troops remained on board.

Commercial negotiations. India and Portugal.

Anglo-Portuguese Treaty of 1842: whether infringed by Indian Tariff.

My Lord, Temple, April 26, 1877.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 6th March ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers noted in the margin* relative to a question which had arisen in connection with commercial negotiations now pending between the Indian Government and that of Portugal, as to whether the Indian Tariff on foreign wines constitutes an infraction of the Anglo-Portuguese Treaty of the 3rd July, 1842 (see State Papers, vol. XXX, p. 373); and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the papers transmitted to us.

Mr. March and Mr. Lister have, in our opinion, met the reasoning of Mr. Morier in a satisfactory manner.

Portuguese complaint against Tariff for French wines.

It may be doubtful whether the provision at the end of the IVth Article of the Treaty, and the change made in the Government of India by the Act of 1858, and by the title of Her Majesty in India, might not give some ground, though possibly none in strict construction, for complaint on the part of the Portuguese Government against the Tariff for French still wines. We presume that the territories of British India would not have been excepted from the Portuguese Treaty, had not the commercial legislation of those territories at the time of the Treaty been entrusted by Charter to the East Indian Company.

Portuguese request for modification of Tariff is fair.

The reason for the exception has now ceased, and we respectfully submit for your Lordship's consideration that the Portuguese Government may fairly now ask for a modification of the Tariff.

My Lord, Temple, April 27, 1877.

WITH reference to our Report of yesterday's date on the subject of the application of the Anglo-Portuguese Treaty of 1842 to India, we have the honour to acknowledge a further letter from Mr. Lister, inclosing a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken Mr. Lister's letter, with its inclosures, into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

Atrocities by British subject, Scott, and by Spanish and Dutch subjects on their slaves in River Congo.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Loanda, with their inclosures, relating to atrocities committed in the River Congo by white men, subjects of England, the Netherlands, and Spain, on Africans held by them as slaves.

Evidence not forthcoming in England.

That one of the parties implicated in those crimes was a British subject named Scott, but your Lordship feared that there were no practicable means of bringing him to trial. The Courts of this country would, your Lordship apprehended, have jurisdiction to try him under section 9 of the Criminal Law Consolidation Act, relating to injuries against the person (24 & 25 Vict., cap. 100), but that it would be very difficult to procure the attendance of witnesses, and even if they should consent to come to this country, Her Majesty's Government were not in a position to judge whether their evidence would be sufficient to insure a conviction.

That no Court in any of our West African Colonies had jurisdiction in the case, for the Congo River was far beyond the limits of the extra-territorial jurisdiction conferred on them by the Act 34 Vict., cap. 8, nor was there any Order in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts which would meet the difficulty.

Great Britain has no jurisdiction, and denies claim of Portugal to the territory.

That the territory on which those outrages had been committed was claimed by the Portuguese Government, and that we should observe that in the correspondence between Her Majesty's Consul and the Portuguese authorities at Loanda, the latter seemed inclined to put forward their claim to the territory in question, and more especially in the letter from the Secretary-General to Mr. Hopkins of the 5th June, inclosed in Mr. Hopkins' No. 28, Confidential, of the 12th June.

That Her Majesty's Government had, however, always contested and opposed that claim, and could not admit the jurisdiction of Portuguese Tribunals to deal with the case of Scott.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any steps can legally be taken to bring that criminal to justice.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No means of bringing Scott to justice.

That since Her Majesty's Government cannot properly allow the Portuguese to try Scott if his arrest should be in any way effected by them, and evidence to insure his conviction in this country would not be forthcoming, if he were captured by British authorities, or handed over to them by the Portuguese, and no other Tribunals exist before whom Scott could be put on his trial, we are of opinion that no steps can be taken to bring Scott to justice.

That a copy of that notice would be forthwith published in the "London Gazette."

That Lord Tenterden was to add that your Lordship proposed to approve the letter which Mr. Stanley addressed to the Governor of Odessa upon receipt of the notification.

Messrs. Watts and Milburn. Destrucion of their lighters on the Danube by Turkish authorities.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us four letters from Messrs. Watts and Milburn, complaining of the seizure and destruction of some lighters belonging to them by the Turkish naval and military authorities on the Danube, near Galatz; and that he was to request us to take those letters into our consideration with reference to the instructions issued by the Porte to the Turkish Commander-in-chief on the Danube, which were sent to us in Lord Tenterden's other letter of that day, and to report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course that should be taken with regard to Messrs. Watts and Milburn's representations.

That Lord Tenterden was to add that your Lordship purposed to instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople to urge the Turkish Government to instruct their authorities to permit tugs and lighters belonging to British subjects, now in the Turkish waters of the Danube, to pass up into Austrian waters without molestation from Turkish forts or gun-boats.

That a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Galatz relative to the detention at Rustchuk of barges under neutral flag was annexed for our further information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Demand reparation for injuries to British property and affronts to British flag.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople may properly be instructed to communicate to the Turkish Government that Her Majesty's Government expects that no injury will be done to British property and no affront offered to the British flag, and will insist on full reparation in all cases, in the event of either contingency happening.

British vessels should be allowed to go into Austrian waters.

And that in order to avoid all risk of any injury being done to or received by Her Majesty's subjects or their property, all tugs and lighters with any cargo, which the owners of the cargo or their agents may wish to take belonging to British subjects, and now in the Turkish waters of the Danube, should, without delay, be allowed to Intestate estate of Richard Kimens.

Placed at disposal of British Consul-General at Odessa.

That we would observe that the Court of Olgopol, "considering that in accordance with the Convention relative to inheritances, concluded between the Russian and English Governments, the property remaining after the death of British subjects in Russia should be remitted to the Consular authority of the deceased, on whom devolves the further measures for the disposal of the property in the interest of the heirs," made a Decree (a copy of which forms the second inclosure in Consul-General Stanley's despatch) whereby the personal property of the deceased was placed at the disposal of the British Consulate at Odessa.

That in a letter from the Foreign Office to the Treasury of the 8th March, 1877, it was suggested, as a convenient course under the circumstances, that the assets should be transmitted by the British Consul-General to the Treasury with a view to the money being eventually paid to the legal personal representative in this country of the late Mr. Kimens.

Treasury refuse to receive money.

That the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, however, in their reply, dated the 31st March, declined to receive the money, but requested that instructions might be sent to Consul-General Stanley in conformity with the recommendations contained in the Report of their Solicitor, a copy of which they inclosed.

That those recommendations were to the effect that the Consul-General might administer the estate of the deceased if he was willing to do so, but that if he does so "he would be acting rather as an agent of the widow than as a Representative of Her Majesty's Government: in other words, rather in a private than a public capacity."

Consul-General not to give up assets except on production of letters of administration.

That it appeared to your Lordship that Consul-General Stanley had no power to administer the estate, or, as he suggested in his despatch, "take upon himself the duties of the Court of Probate and appoint an administrator," and that he should be instructed not to part with the assets except on production of letters of administration granted by the Court of Probate of the domicile of the deceased to the widow or other person therein named, and on receipt of a proper discharge from such legal representative.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we concur in that view, and, if not, what other instructions should, in our opinion, be sent to Consul-General Stanley in reply to his despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

Concur in this view.

That we entirely concur in the view taken of this case by your Lordship, and are of opinion that the proposed instructions may properly be sent to Consul-General Stanley.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent at Bucharest relative to a complaint made to him by the agents of the Danubian Tug and Lighter Company at Turno-Mogurelli, of the detention by the Roumanian Prefect of that town of a tug and lighters owned by them.

That Lord Tenterden was to request us to take that despatch into our consideration, and to report to your Lordship our opinion as to the action of the Roumanian authorities in the case.

That he was to add that, with our concurrence, your Lordship proposed to approve Colonel Mansfield's proceedings.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot say whether seizure was justified.

That, from the facts submitted to us, we are unable to say whether the Roumanian authorities were or were not justified in stopping the tug and lighters.

Approve Colonel Mansfield.

We, however, concur with your Lordship in the opinion that the proceedings of Colonel Mansfield may properly be approved.

We presume, however, that the word "nous" in the copy of the telegram should be, and in the original was, "vous," for otherwise it might hereafter be said that Her Majesty's Consul-General had taken the responsibility upon himself in saying, as to the mooring and safety of these vessels, "Cela nous regarde."

Messrs. Watts and Milburn. Sinking and seizure of their lighters.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 29th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 18th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Watts and Milburn, forwarding a copy of a protest made in the British Consulate at Galatz against the Ottoman Government for sinking their lighter No. 7, and requesting your Lordship to take the necessary steps to make good their claim when the proper time arrived.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to take that protest into our consideration, and to report to your Lordship our opinion as to whether it sets out such a primâ facie case for compensation as would justify a formal claim by Her Majesty's Government on behalf of the applicants.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Confusion in claim.

That there is much confusion in the papers sent in this case to your Lordship, for whilst the letter of Messrs. Watts complains only of the loss of a lighter No. 7, by sinking, the protest, noticing, indeed, the sinking of the lighter by the guns of the Turks on the 6th May, complains mainly of the damage done by fire to the frame of a lighter, and the carrying off the lighter and cargo to Rahova.

Sinking may be a necessity of war. Wilful damage and seizure of cargo gives ground for indemnity

The former act might possibly be justified or excused by the necessities of war, and no primâ facie case, or at least no case which could be insisted upon by Her Majesty's Government, could be brought forward against the Turkish Government. In the latter case, if the lighter were wilfully damaged, and the cargo carried off and used by the Turks, a good ground for full indemnification would be laid.

We are, in this uncertain state of the facts, unable to advise your Lordship whether the protest, which we cannot consider alone and apart from the letter, sets out such a primâ facie case for compensation as would justify a formal claim by Her Majesty's Government on behalf of Messrs. Watts.

Facts too vague.

We would suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that Messrs. Watts may properly be told that the facts are too vaguely stated, and that your Lordship cannot therefore give them any definite assurance of your support. And that, at all events, they (Messrs. 1. For the sinking, by order of the Russian military authorities, of the iron steamship "Annette" at the Wallachian loading port of Hamnida.

Messrs. Watts should bring claim before Turkish Government.

2. For the sinking by the Russian military authorities themselves at Carabia of two iron lighters (Nos. 5 and 11) which were owned by the same Company.

Annex to No. 59.

Pro-Memoriâ.

Contraband of war. Neutrals not bound to prevent export, but enemy may capture.

The practice of Great Britain as a neutral State with respect to articles which may be deemed to be contraband of war is governed by the general law of nations. Her Majesty's Government have always maintained that by the law of nations the neutral shipper of goods which may be deemed to be contraband of war commits no offence against his own Sovereign; and that a neutral State is not bound to restrain or punish its subjects who seek to carry such goods across the seas to a belligerent, the only penalty for so doing being the seizure and condemnation of the goods if intercepted by the enemy during their transport.

The powers vested in the Executive by the Foreign Enlistment Act, passed in 1870 after much careful consideration, are, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, amply sufficient for the enforcement of all the duties and obligations of neutrality which the law of nations can require.

Her Majesty's Government cannot further restrict trade.

The existence of war inflicts sufficiently onerous burdens on neutral commerce, and Her Majesty's Government have no intention of adding to them by the imposition of restrictions on the trade of this country in excess of the recognized practice of neutral States.

That they are stated to have killed the captain, helmsman, and a steward who attempted resistance, and to have wounded at least one other of the crew.

That we should see by the inclosure in the Admiralty letter of the 25th January that the Commander-in-chief of Her Majesty's naval forces on the North American and West Indian Station had directed the Commodore at Jamaica to issue orders to Her Majesty's ships on his division of the station to capture the "Montezuma," should she be fallen in with by them, flying the Cuban flag, either on the high seas or in British waters, and to take her into a British port for trial.

Piracy.

Sir Julian Pauncefote also further stated that it would appear from the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of the "Attorney-General of Hong Kong v. Kwok Asing" (5 L. Rep. P. C. 179), and from that of the Court of Queen's Bench in the case of "Reg. v. Terman" (33 L. J. M. Sulu. Seizure of the "Sultana" by Spanish war vessels.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th September last, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 13th June, 1876, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a complete printed copy of the correspondence relating to the seizure by Spanish war vessels of the steam-yacht "Sultana," which had been chartered by the Sultan of Brunei to the Victoria Trading Company of Labuan, and to request that we would have the goodness to take these papers into our consideration, and report to your Lordship whether, in our opinion, there existed sufficient proof of injury to British interests to justify Her Majesty's Government in calling upon the Spanish Government to indemnify the Company for the loss they have suffered in consequence of the illegal capture of the "Sultana."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Compensation may be claimed.

That, in our opinion, the further papers show a sufficient proof of injury to British interests to justify Her Majesty's Government in calling upon the Spanish Government to indemnify the Company for the loss which they have suffered in consequence of the illegal capture of the "Sultana."

But we think that the whole losses stated in the petition inclosed in Mr. Ussher's despatch (No. 23, Consular) cannot be made the ground of claim.

With deductions.

The first two items for uncollected debts are too remote, and the deductions of these will diminish the claim down 7,022 dollars.

The compensation to the Sultan of Brunei for the loss of his steamer cannot form any part of the claim made by Her Majesty's Government, but the amount may properly be claimed as money paid by the Company under the charter to the Sultan for the loss of the steamer. The amount, therefore, will be 22,022 dollars, deducting the 7,022 dollars, and to this may not improperly be added 630 dollars:—for the loss of captain's personal effects, 400 dollars; mate's, 200 dollars; crew, 30 dollars; a loss stated in the memorandum, Inclosure 2 in Mr. Low's despatch (No. 21, Consular).

"Octavia" seized by Spanish ship of war on high seas. Claims arising out of.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to lay before us the inclosed correspondence relating to the capture and detention by the Spanish authorities of the British steamer "Octavia."

History of the Case.

That the "Octavia" was seized by the Spanish ship of war "Hernan Cortes" on the 13th March, 1876, on the high seas, about 30 miles off the coast of St. Thomas, laden with arms and ammunition.

That she was taken to Porto Rico and her crew thrust into prison, from whence they were released fifteen days' later on the arrival of Her Majesty's ship "Eclipse."

That there could be no doubt as to the character of the vessel before her transfer in Jamaica to M. Altamond de Cordova.

That she belonged to the Cuban Junta, and was armed, equipped, and used for no other purposes but those of the revolutionary forces.

That M. de Cordova was undoubtedly a British subject; and, although no actual proof could be obtained that her transfer to him was colourable, and that he was a mere agent of the Junta, and that the beneficial interest in the vessel still remained vested in foreigners, there was the strongest presumption that such was the fact.

That when the transfer to M. de Cordova was effected, he was the agent of the nominal owners who were themselves the agents of the Junta. That at the time of the supposed sale to him the vessel was under arrest at Kingston on suspicion of a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

That she had recently changed her name, and was then called the "Uruguay," and carried the Uruguayan flag, but that, knowing the character of the vessel, that Government refused to permit her to carry its flag.

That at the instance of M. de Cordova, who represented himself as the bonâ fide purchaser, and made the declaration of ownership required by section 56 of the Merchant Shipping Act, the Governor of Jamaica consented to release the vessel from arrest, on condition that he should enter into a bond to secure that she should be taken direct to New York. That the bond was duly executed, and the vessel, which then resumed her original name of "Octavia," was allowed to leave Port Royal. But that instead of proceeding direct to New York, she put in, ostensibly for repairs, first at Morant Bay in Jamaica; secondly at Jacmel, where it was suspected that she was intended to land arms for the use of the party in insurrection against the Haïtian Government; thirdly at St. Thomas, and it was not until she had left the last-named place that she shaped her course for New York, when she was immediately chased by a Spanish ship of war and captured on the high seas.

That the proceedings of the "Octavia," after leaving Port Royal, led the Governor of Jamaica to the conviction that M. de Cordova had wilfully and deliberately broken his engagements that she should proceed direct to New York. And his Excellency accordingly ordered proceedings to be taken against him on the bond, but it appeared that judgment had not yet been delivered.

That the "Octavia," being a British vessel, sailing at the time of her capture on the high seas under the British flag, and having her papers in perfect order, Her Majesty's Government lost no time in demanding her restitution by the Spanish Government.

That, after a protracted correspondence, the vessel was handed over to Her Majesty's Consul at Porto Rico on the 1st July last.

That the national honour having been, so far, vindicated by the restoration of the vessel, it remained to be considered what steps should be taken to demand compensation from the Spanish Government in respect of the private interests affected by her illegal seizure and detention.

That there were various claims arising out of the case. First, the claim of the Board of Trade for maintenance of the crew (see Board of Trade letter of the 9th December, 1876). Second, the claim of the crew for damages for imprisonment (see Colonial Office letter of the 9th January, 1877). Third, the claim of the master of the vessel, and his wife, for damages in respect of imprisonment, and the seizure of their money and effects on board the vessel at the time of capture (see Colonial Office letter of the 9th October, 1876). Fourth, the claim of Cordova for damages in respect of the seizure, detention, and deterioration of his vessel and cargo, consisting of arms and ammunition (see Colonial Office letter of the 5th April, 1877).

That M. de Cordova had from the commencement evinced a great desire that the Spanish Government should take the vessel and cargo off his hands, and pay him an indemnity, which he assessed at no less than 50,000*l*., though, as appeared from the papers, the vessel was sold in New York, not very long ago, to a person named Bambridge for 25,000*l*.

That M. de Cordova now claimed the right to abandon her to the Spanish Government, on the plea that she had suffered such deterioration from her detention in port as to render her unserviceable (see Survey Report in Colonial Office letter of the 5th October, 1877), and he asked Her Majesty's Government to support him in that contention.

That your Lordship was not disposed to accede to the wishes of M. de Cordova in that respect, and, indeed, having regard to the very strong grounds which existed for believing that the vessel at the time of seizure was the property of foreigners, and that the object of her visit to Jacmel after leaving Port Royal was to land arms for the use of the Haïtian insurgents, in violation of M. de Cordova's engagement to the Governor of Jamaica, your Lordship felt some hesitation in presenting any claim for compensation to the Spanish Government without calling upon M. de Cordova, in the first instance, to explain, to the satisfaction of Her Majesty's Government, as to the bona fides of the transfer of the vessel to him as a purchaser.

That your Lordship, however, was inclined, on the whole, and subject to our opinion on the case, to present the four claims above enumerated to the Spanish Government, with an intimation that the vessel having now been restored, and reparation having, so far, been obtained for the violation committed on the British flag, Her Majesty's Government were now prepared, in accordance with the assurance previously given by them, to consider, in a spirit of fairness and moderation, the grounds which the Spanish Government desired to urge against the claims of the private individuals who had suffered from the illegal action of their officers.

That as regards the claim of M. de Cordova, it appeared to your Lordship that it should be limited to reasonable compensation for—

1. Deterioration of vessel and apparel.
2. Demurrage.
3. Damage to cargo.

That those items were, as well as those constituting the three other claims, matters of detail to be adjusted hereafter.

That in the meanwhile Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we concurred in the views above expressed, and in the course which your Lordship proposed to adopt, and, if not, to favour your Lordship with our views on the case, and as to the action which, in our opinion, should be taken by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Compensation to be claimed:—
Board of Trade claim for subsistence of crew.
Claim of crew and master, &c., for imprisonment, seizure of effects, &c.
Claim of Cordova, owner, for demurrage, deterioration, and damage to cargo.

That in our opinion the claim of the Board of Trade, the claim of the crew, and the claim of the master and his wife may properly be made the grounds of a demand for compensation on the Spanish Government.

With respect to the claim of Cordova, it might be satisfactory to have some explanations from him as to the nature of his connection with the "Octavia."

But since the release of the vessel was demanded, on the ground that she was a British ship with all regular papers on board, seized and detained on the high seas and carried in for adjudication by a Spanish man-of-war, and since she has now been released as illegally captured, we think Cordova's claim, but limited, as your Lordship proposes, to a claim for—

1. Deterioration of the vessel and apparel,
2. Demurrage,
3. Damage to cargo,

may be made.

We entirely concur with your Lordship, that the intimation suggested as fitting to be made on these several claims to the Spanish Government should be conveyed to that Government.

The further papers do not bring forward any facts which lead us to modify or alter the above Report.

We have, &c.

Navigation of the Danube. Collision cases. British Consul at Galatz. Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 10th February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch, and its inclosures, from Mr. Fawcett, the Acting Judge of the Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople, in which a question was raised as to whether the Consul at Galatz had power to exercise Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction over vessels navigating the Danube.

That he was also to inclose other documents which bore on that subject.

That we should observe that by the 3rd section of the Order in Council of the 9th April, 1866, British Consular officers within the Ottoman dominions possess, for the purposes of "The Public Act relative to the navigation of the mouths of the Danube" and its annexes, all the powers and jurisdiction which were, by the Order in Council of the 30th November, 1864, vested in the Judge of the Supreme Court of Constantinople.

That by the 41st section of the last-mentioned Order the Supreme Court was constituted a Court of Vice-Admiralty within the Ottoman dominions, and the first question which arose was—

Whether the Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Constantinople became vested in the British Consul at Galatz, as Judge of the Provincial Court, or otherwise by virtue of the 3rd section of the Order in Council of the 9th April, 1866, so as to enable him to entertain suits in rem for damage by collision.

That, if our reply to that question should be in the negative, the next question was that which was raised by the British Consul in Galatz, namely, whether the Court over which he presided had not the power, in the exercise of a "customary jurisdiction," to arrest vessels in suits brought before him for damage by collision, in accordance with the practice of Vice-Admiralty Courts in suits in rem.

That on that point Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer to the section 7 of the Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, which repealed the Order of the 30th November, 1864, and now regulates the exercise of Her Majesty's jurisdiction in the Ottoman dominions.

That that section, which was similar to section 8 of the repealed Order, contained a saving clause with respect to any "reasonable custom," and it was stated in Mr. Consul Sanderson's letter to the Acting Judge, and in the printed Judgment inclosed in Mr. Fawcett's despatch, that the practice of the Consular Court at Galatz had been to arrest ships in cases of collision "in exercise of a customary jurisdiction."

That, on the other hand, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to point out that section 7 of the existing Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, as well as the corresponding section of the repealed Order of 1864, saved any reasonable custom, except where the Order "contains some express and specific provisions incompatible with the observance of such custom."

That by section 41 of the Order of 1864 the Supreme Court and every Provincial Consular Court held before a resident Legal Vice-Consul was constituted a Court of Vice-Admiralty.

That by section 5 of the repealing Order of 1873 it was declared that "all Her Majesty's jurisdiction exercisable in the Ottoman dominions for the judicial hearing and determination of matters in difference, and for the administration or control of property and persons," shall be exercised according to the Order, and not otherwise.

That by section 6 the law to be applied and the procedure to be followed is, so far as circumstances permit, and subject to the provisions of the Order, to be in conformity with the law and procedure for the time being in force in England.

That section 15 provided that every commissioned Consular officer should have and form a Court for his own district, referred to in the Order as a "Provincial Court."

That section 31 provided that all Her Majesty's jurisdiction not vested by the Order exclusively in the Supreme Court shall be vested in the Provincial Courts.

That section 88 provided that the Supreme Court should be a Court of Vice-Admiralty within the Ottoman dominions, and also that the Consular Court for Egypt should be a Court of Vice-Admiralty for its own district; but no Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction was expressly conferred on Provincial Courts.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take all the papers and documents referred to into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the British Consul at Galatz was entitled to exercise Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in cases of collision occurring in the navigation of the Danube, by virtue of the Order in Council of the 9th April, 1866; and, if not, whether he was entitled to exercise Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in the discharge of his general functions as Judge of the Provincial Court at Galatz, under the Order in Council of the 13th December, 1873, and that if our reply to this should be in the negative, whether he might lawfully continue to exercise the alleged custom of the Court of arresting vessels in suits brought for damage done to a ship by collision.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in cases of collision on the Danube.

1. That, in our opinion, the British Vice-Consul at Galatz is not entitled to exercise Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in cases of collision occurring in the navigation of the Danube by virtue of the Order in Council of the 9th April, 1866.

Provisions of the Order in Council.

That Order is not indeed repealed, as other Orders were, by the Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873. But we think that the 3rd section of the Order of the 9th April, 1866, confers upon the Consuls, &c., only the powers required for the purposes mentioned in the Public Act respecting the navigation of the Danube, and that the power to arrest a vessel is not required for these purposes.

2. That if the 3rd section of the Order of the 9th April, 1866, admits of a construction wider than we are inclined to give to it, a further limitation is put upon the jurisdiction of the Consul by section 5 of the Order of the 12th December, 1873, which provides that all Her Majesty's jurisdiction shall be exercised according to the provisions of the Order of 1873, and not otherwise.

This Order of 1873, by sections 9, 14, and 15, provides for the Supreme Court, the Court for Egypt, and the Provincial Courts, and by section 88 the Supreme Court and the Court for Egypt are respectively made Vice-Admiralty Courts; but the Order of 1873, whilst providing, by section 15, that every commissioned Consular officer shall, subject to the provisions of the Order, hold and form a Court, which shall be a Provincial Court, does not re-enact the 2nd paragraph of section 41 of the Order of 1864, that "every Provincial Court held before a resident Legal Vice-Consul shall be a Court of Vice-Admiralty."

3. Section 7 of the Order of 1873, though placed under the head of general provisions respecting Her Majesty's jurisdiction, is, we think, not sufficient to preserve a customary jurisdiction in Vice-Admiralty matters, since the Order apparently intended to confer that jurisdiction only upon the Supreme Court and the Court for Egypt.

Section 31 of the Order of 1873, directing that all Her Majesty's jurisdiction, civil and criminal, not under the Order vested exclusively in the Supreme Court, shall, to the extent and in the manner provided by the Order, be vested in the Court for Egypt and in the Provincial Courts, is explained, as we think, by sections 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, and 91.

Thus each of the Courts is to have jurisdiction in bankruptcy.

Special jurisdiction of Supreme and other Courts.

The Supreme Court and the Court for Egypt jurisdiction in Vice-Admiralty cases.

The Supreme Court jurisdiction in lunacy and in matrimonial causes.

The Supreme Court a full, and the Court for Egypt and the Provincial Courts a limited, jurisdiction in probate matters.

These sections, 86 to 91, come under the head of civil authority and procedure, and the saving of the Consular customary jurisdiction in Vice-Admiralty matters is, we think, excluded by the words of section 88.

Vice-Consul at Galatz has no Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction, and cannot arrest vessels in cases of collision.

We are, therefore, further of opinion that the British Vice-Consul at Galatz is not entitled to exercise Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction in the discharge of his general functions as Judge of the Provincial Court at Galatz under the Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873. And that he cannot legally continue to exercise the alleged custom of the Court, of arresting vessels in suits brought for damage done to a ship by reason of collision.

Turkish Regulations. Treatment of Russian subjects and vessels, and right of search in the Bosphorus.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 26th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us telegrams from Mr. Layard reporting that the Turkish Government was about to issue certain Regulations, with regard to the treatment of Russian subjects and vessels, and the exercise of search and visit of neutral merchant vessels proceeding through the Bosphorus to Russian ports, or to places in the occupation of Russia.

That Mr. Layard desired to be furnished, with as little delay as possible, with the views of Her Majesty's Government on the proposed Regulations, and that Lord Tenterden was to request that he would favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to any instructions which should be sent to Mr. Layard, in reply, and with any observations which might occur to us on the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No objection to.

That, in our opinion, the proposed Regulations of the Turkish Government transmitted by Mr. Layard are such as that Government has the right to impose.

In obedience to your Lordship's request, we suggest that Mr. Layard might be instructed to suggest to the Turkish Government that—Measures for protection of neutral vessels requisite; also notice of blockades.

1. Immediate and proper measures should be taken for the protection and safety of all neutral vessels navigating the waters, and entering or leaving ports and roadsteads where torpedoes have been laid.

2. Due notice of blockades should be given, and a proper warning given to vessels on their way to blockaded ports, and due time allowed to vessels within and wishing to leave blockaded ports.

Neutral navigation of Suez Canal.

Porte should surrender belligerent rights, reserving rights against belligerent.

3. The proposed Regulations for the navigation of neutral vessels through the Suez Canal are, as we have said, within the rights of the Turkish Government. But Mr. Layard may be instructed, if a fit opportunity occurs, or he can make the opportunity, to suggest to the Turkish Government that it would be expedient, prudent, and wise for that Government at once to declare that it surrenders, in the Canal and its approaches, the exercise of the usual rights which a belligerent, in reference to neutrals, may exercise in his own territory and waters, reserving all rights against the other belligerent and his allies.

Very little danger or inconvenience will be suffered by Turkey should she so far neutralize and keep open the navigation of the Canal, whilst the moral, political, and military advantages which she will acquire by such a course should induce her Government readily to withdraw the Regulations now proposed for the Canal, and substitute a declaration to the effect suggested.

WITH reference to the Report furnished by the Board of Customs this day, and of which a copy has been sent to the Foreign Office, respecting the case of the iron-clad in the Victoria Docks built for the Turkish Government, I am directed by the Earl of Derby to request that you will state to the Commissioners of Customs that his Lordship is consulting the Law Officers as to the proper steps to be taken with regard to this vessel, and that he is of opinion that in the meanwhile she should not be allowed to leave, and that in the event of any attempt being made to dispatch her, the officers of customs should exercise all the powers vested in them by the Foreign Enlistment Act for her detention.

Contraband of war. Coal in neutral vessel for use of British ship of war in Turkish port.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that a question had arisen as to the liability to seizure and condemnation, as contraband of war, of coal carried in a neutral merchant-vessel and destined for the use of a British ship of war lying in a Turkish port.

That Lord Tenterden was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour you with our opinion as to whether, in the case suggested, the coal would, by the law of nations, be liable to seizure on the high seas, and to condemnation in a Russian Prize Court, by reason of the vessel's destination being a belligerent port, notwithstanding that it were clearly proved that the coal was intended for delivery on board a British ship of war lying in such port for the use of such ship, in pursuance of a contract with Her Majesty's Government.

That the above question assumed that coal suitable for steaming purposes, if carried to a belligerent port, would, under the present condition of maritime warfare, properly come within the category of contraband of war.

That if we should be of opinion that proof of the coals being destined solely for delivery on board a British ship of war for the purposes and under the circumstances mentioned would relieve the cargo from liability to condemnation, Lord Tenterden was further to request that he would inform your Lordship whether we could suggest any measures whereby the neutral merchant-vessel carrying such cargo could be protected from capture and detention pending the adjudication of a Prize Court.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Such coal is not contraband of war.

That coal carried in a neutral vessel, and destined for the supply of Her Majesty's ships of war is not contraband of war.

No doubt a belligerent cruizer has a right to require some evidence of the destination and intended use of coal found on board a neutral vessel bound for an enemy's port, and if there exists any reasonable grounds for suspicion that the coal is destined for the use of the enemy, the cruizer will have the right to detain the vessel until a Prize Court adjudicates upon the cargo.

Should arrange with Russian Government as to exempting it from capture.

We suggest that it will be advisable for Her Majesty's Government to communicate with the Russian Government in order to ascertain whether an arrangement cannot be made that the possession by the master of the neutral vessel of some official document, to be agreed upon between the two Governments, shall be considered satisfactory proof that the coal cargo is destined for the use of Her Majesty's ships of war.

In the meanwhile, the only safe course will be to send a commissioned officer on board the neutral vessel in charge of the cargo.

My Lord,

Foreign ships of war building in England. Receipt of Report.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from your Lordship, dated the 3rd instant, stating that your Lordship was to transmit to the Attorney- and Solicitor-General and myself, by direction of the Earl of Derby, a letter from the Treasury, forwarding a Report from the Board of Customs, giving particulars as to the men-of-war now building in the ports of the United Kingdom on account of foreign Governments.

My Lord,

Neutrality. Supplementary instructions to Her Majesty's fleet.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 27th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letter from the Admiralty,* calling attention to certain supplementary instructions on questions of neutrality which were issued during the Franco-Prussian war, and inquiring whether your Lordship wished similar instructions to be now issued to Her Majesty's fleet; and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take this question into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the aforesaid regulations should be confirmed in the case of the present war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Confirming those issued during Franco-German war.

That, in our opinion, the instruction conveyed in the letter of the 18th July, 1870,† may properly be confirmed.

Secrecy as to movements of belligerents.

The instruction dated the 4th August, 1870, and relative to British pilots, may also, in our opinion, properly be confirmed, but we suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that some words should be added defining the nature of the danger out of which ships of war may be piloted, and on that suggestion we submit that the instruction might be worded as follows:—

Piloting of belligerent ships in distress.

"But ships of war in distress may always be piloted out of danger other than the danger of immediate or imminent capture."

The instructions of the 23rd August, 1870,* and 18th November, 1870,† may also, in our opinion, properly be confirmed.

With reference to the instruction of the 1st January, 1871, we suggest that in the present circumstances it should be altered by embodying the letter of the Foreign Office of the 19th July.

The instructions might, therefore, be framed by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty in this form:—

Coaling and provisioning of belligerents in British ports.

"I am commanded by my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you that no ship of war of either belligerent shall hereafter be permitted while in any port, roadstead, or waters subject to the territorial jurisdiction of Her Majesty, to take in any supplies, except provisions and such other things as may be requisite for the subsistence of her crew, and except so much coal only as may be sufficient to carry such vessel to the nearest port of her own country, or to some nearer destination, and no coal shall again be supplied to any such ship of war in the same or any other port, roadstead, or waters subject to the territorial jurisdiction of Her Majesty, without special permission, until after the expiration of three months from the time when such coal may have been last supplied to her within British waters as aforesaid.

"When such a supply of coals as mentioned above can be procured in the ordinary way of commerce, it would not be proper for the officers of Her Majesty's Government to furnish the coal."

"When no sufficient supply can be procured from private stores, Her Majesty's officers may properly supply the coals, if they do so consistently with due provision for the wants of Her Majesty's service, in the same way as they might properly supply a spar or an anchor, if it could not otherwise be procured by the belligerent vessel."

Subject to this alteration in form, we are of opinion that this instruction may also properly be confirmed.

Iron-clads building for Turkish Government by Messrs. Samuda.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Samuda Brothers, bringing to the notice of Her Majesty's Government the fact that they had two iron-clad vessels building, under contract, for the Turkish Government, and that he was to request us to report to your Lordship our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should pursue in regard to those vessels.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Search and inquiry under Foreign Enlistment Act.

Security for their non-removal before conclusion of war.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government may properly inform Messrs. Mr. Fell's railway for the seat of war.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from Mr. Fell, C.E., inquiring whether it would be illegal to supply the Governments of Russia or Turkey with the materials for the construction of railways, it being well understood that such railways might be used for the transport of military stores; and also whether it would be illegal for British subjects to assist in the construction of railways under such circumstances; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and inform your Lordship as to the nature of the reply which should be returned to Mr. Fell, both as regards the supply of railway materials, and further, the sending out of artizans to construct the line.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we gather from Mr. Fell's letter to your Lordship that the railway to which he refers is one more immediately adapted to military rather than to ordinary civil and commercial purposes, and that he intends to transport such railway to the seat of war, where also the engineers and artizans who are to aid in laying down the rails and putting into use the materials supplied will be sent.

Materials liable to capture and condemnation by Prize Court. Engineers, &c., punishable under Foreign Enlistment Act.

If we are right in taking this view of the intention of Mr. Fell, and the nature of his railroad, we are of opinion that the rails and other materials supplied will be open, if captured, to be condemned by a Prize Court, and that the engineers and artizans who are sent out to aid in laying down the rails, &c., and the person sending these men out, may be punishable under the provisions of section 5 of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from Mr. Daniel Carigan,* drawing attention to the loss occasioned to him by the circumstances under which his steamer "City of Waterford" was forced to leave Galatz at a few hours' notice, in consequence of orders issued by the Russian military Commander, and asking for the advice of Her Majesty's Government; and he was to request that we would take this letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Carigan's application.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Military necessity probable excuse. May represent case to Russian Government.

That Mr. Carigan's case may and will probably be explained by the absolute necessity of the case and military reasons; but it is a hard case, and one which, in our opinion, your Lordship may properly bring to the notice of the Russian Government with a view of inducing that Government to take a favourable view of the matter, and make Mr. Carigan some compensation.

My Lord,

Turkish blockade of Black Sea ports.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th May instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a note from the Turkish Ambassador,* forwarding the official notification of the blockade of the ports in the Black Sea issued by the Turkish Government, and to request us to take the same into our consideration, and report to your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, our opinion thereupon.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to add that a translation of the notification, as telegraphed home by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, and published in an Extraordinary "London Gazette" of that day, was also inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If maintained, and confined to enemy's coasts, it is right.

That if the notified blockade can, notwithstanding its extent, be effectually maintained, and includes no port or coast not belonging to or in possession of the enemy, we are of opinion that the notification is right.

Foreign Office, May 7, 1877.

Gentlemen,

Treatment of neutrals. Turkish instructions.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you a copy of a telegram from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, stating the instructions issued by the Porte to the Turkish Commander-in-chief on the Danube with regard to the treatment of neutral vessels on that river; and I am to request you to report to Lord Derby your opinion thereupon.

I am specially to call your attention to the passage which states that contraband of war, and the vessels carrying it, when duly determined by the Court, are liable to "seizure." It is presumed that the word "seizure" means or implies "confiscation." If so, the Porte proposes to apply the obsolete rule under which the carriage of contraband of war entailed a forfeiture of the ship, and Lord Derby would wish to be informed whether you think it desirable that Mr. Layard should be instructed to call the attention of the Turkish Government to this point.

I have, &c.
(Signed) TENTERDEN.

---

Report.

Her Majesty's Government may require indemnity for loss.

That, in our opinion, the instructions issued by the Porte to the Turkish Commander-in-chief may be justified by military reasons, but Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople may properly be instructed to inform the authorities at Constantinople that Her Majesty's Government will require the fullest indemnity for every loss or damage which any of Her Majesty's subjects may actually sustain in consequence of those instructions being put into execution.

Contraband of war may be seized, but vessel carrying it released.

The general rule applicable to vessels captured with contraband of war on board is that the contraband part of the cargo alone is liable to capture, the other goods and the ship being released.

Exceptions.

To this general rule, however, there are exceptions. Thus, the ship will be liable to condemnation where the same person owns both ship and contraband goods. So, also, where the ship carries false papers, or any fraud is proved against the ship.

Remonstrance should be made, &c.

The modern rule and the authorities are stated and referred to in Calvo's "Droit International," tom. ii, p. 482. On this point Her Majesty's Ambassador may properly be instructed to call the attention of the Porte to that part of the instructions which says, "En tout cas la contrebande de guerre est saisissable, et entraîne la confiscation du navire et de toute la cargaison;" and to inform the Turkish Government that Her Majesty's Government cannot allow the condemnation of ships and their whole cargo, the property of British subjects, to be in all cases the consequence of the ships having on board some contraband articles; and the modern rule of international law on this matter should be, at the same time, brought to the notice of the Turkish Government.

My Lord,

Danube Commissioners and Her Majesty's ship "Cockatrice" detained at Sulina by Russians.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence in regard to the detention of the Danube Commissioners and of Her Majesty's ship "Cockatrice" at Sulina, in consequence of the suspension of the navigation of the Danube by order of the Russian Commander-in-chief; and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request us to take into our consideration the question of the interference with the rights of the Commission, as guaranteed by Treaty, resulting from the proceedings of the Russians, and to report our opinion as to the course it would be proper to pursue in the matter.

Rights of Commission under Treaty.

That he was at the same time desired to draw our special attention to the accompanying letter from the Board of Trade, offering some general observations on the question of the free navigation of the Danube, and to—

1. The Act of Congress of Vienna, Article CIX (Hertslet's Map of Europe by Treaty, vol. i, p. 270);
2. Treaty of Paris, 30th March, 1856 (Ibid., vol. ii, p. 1257, Article XV);
3. Treaty of 13th March, 1871, Article VII (Ibid., vol. iii, p. 1921).

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Danube is neutral, but stoppage of navigation by torpedoes, &c., is justified by necessities of war.

That no doubt can, in our opinion, be even raised on the question whether the Danube be a neutral river or the navigation of the Danube free.

But the question at issue is of a totally different kind, and is whether the Russians (and Turks) being at war, and carrying on military operations on the banks of the Danube, are shut out from impeding, for military purposes, by torpedoes and other obstructions, the use of the river.

The case is exceptional, and the stoppage of navigation can be justified only by the necessities of the war. But these necessities may, and in our opinion do, justify the stoppage of navigation.

Considering, then, that the Russians may stop the navigation of the Danube, we think no exception can be made in favour of Her Majesty's gun-boat or the Commissioners.

Commissioners must get a pass. Her Majesty's gun-boat cannot go up.

In this state of things, in our opinion the proper course will be to obtain a pass, if possible, from the Russian Commander, and perhaps also from the Turkish Commander.

And if that pass cannot be obtained, the Commissioners may avail themselves of the safe-conduct by land offered by the Russian Commander, and Her Majesty's gun-boat must not endeavour to proceed up the river.

† The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be found when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain the original draft of the Report. The Law Officers, however, do not retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has, therefore, been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as the bare Report, without the usual preamble, would not be wholly intelligible.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Course adopted is justified.

That, in our opinion, the reasons given by the Russian Consul at Galatz, in his letter of the $\frac{\text{22nd April}}{\text{4th May}}$, 1877, justify the suspension of the navigation of the Danube in the manner and to the extent notified.

My Lord,

Navigation of Danube stopped by the Turks.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 7th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Rustchuk,† inclosing translation of a notice issued by the Turkish Commander-in-chief prohibiting the navigation of the Danube; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to offer upon this notice.

Lord Tenterden was to call our special attention to the passage in the 3rd paragraph which stated that the captains would be considered and treated as spies.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not justified except as regards that portion of the river actually commanded by Turkish forces.

That, in our opinion, Abdul Kerim has, in the notice which he issued on the 30th April, exceeded his instructions and the powers accorded to him by international law, inasmuch as he has made the restrictions and regulations imposed and laid down by him applicable to the whole of the Danube "surrounding the territory of the Ottoman Empire," and not merely to that part of the river of which the Turkish forces shall have for the time being the actual command for war purposes.

British captains cannot be treated as spies unless proved to be such.

With regard to that part of the notice which declares that the captains of vessels will be treated as spies, we think if this course were pursued the Turkish Commander-in-chief would be guilty of a gross breach of international right. In our view, no neutral can be treated as a spy unless facts exist which establish that he is one. We therefore advise that the Turkish Government be informed that Her Majesty's Government will hold the Porte responsible if the threat of treating British captains or subjects as spies be put into execution.

We certainly did not understand that the instructions of the $\frac{17}{29}$th April, which state "et au besoin en leur appliquant les règles relatives à l'espionnage," were intended to warrant a general declaration that all captains of vessels infringing the regulations which should be imposed should be considered and treated as spies.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Justified: but on grounds of military necessity; not out of regard to safety of neutral vessels.

That the Commander-in-chief of the Russian army may have a right to suspend the navigation of that part of the Danube which is occupied by the Russian forces. His justification for doing this, however, must be the exigency of military operations, and not his regard for the safety of neutral merchant vessels.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two official notifications which had been received from the Turkish Ambassador, the first relating to the measures to be observed during the war at the entrance of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, the second containing the decision of the Porte respecting the Russian vessels which were in Ottoman ports at the time of the declaration of war, and the commerce of neutrals; and that Lord Tenterden was to request us to take those documents into our consideration and to report to your Lordship our opinion thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Justified by exigencies of war.

That the closing of the entrances of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles by night may, we think, be justified by the necessity of providing means for keeping out enemy's ships, which might pass in the dark on to Constantinople, and the prohibition in respect to firing guns in foggy weather may also be justified by the necessities of war.

My Lord,

Coal for use of Her Majesty's ships of war in belligerent ports.

As to form of certificate of destination, &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 21st instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 3rd instant, suggesting that, in order to secure from capture coal shipped on board a neutral vessel, and destined for the use of one of Her Majesty's ships of war lying in a belligerent port, an arrangement should be proposed to the Russian and Turkish Governments whereby the possession by the master of the neutral vessel of some official document, to be agreed upon between the two Governments, should be considered satisfactory proof that the coal cargo was destined for the use of Her Majesty's ships of war, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration and opinion, the accompanying correspondence on the subject which had passed between the Foreign Office and the Admiralty.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to take into our consideration the draft certificate inclosed in the Admiralty letter of the 16th instant, and to report to your Lordship whether we concurred in the form of it, and considered that it might properly be proposed to the Russian and Turkish Governments.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Agree, if belligerents will accept it.

That the certificate in the form suggested by the Admiralty, but with the changes in date, and official character of the person signing the certificate, as the circumstances of the case may require, will, in our opinion, be sufficient if the belligerent Governments will consent to accept it.

Query as to security of belligerents that the certificate is genuine.

The difficulty which occurs to us is, that the belligerent Governments may object that they will have little or no security that the certificate is genuine, and really signed by the person whose name appears upon it.

We are not aware whether forms of certificate bearing the description of the ship carrying the coals, the quantity of coals carried, and the destination in blank, signed by the Secretary of the Admiralty, and authenticated by the Russian and Turkish Ambassadors in London, could be issued to Her Majesty's naval officers abroad, to be used by them when coal is to be procured for Her Majesty's ships.

But, if such forms could be issued without practical inconvenience, and the belligerent Governments would consent to accept such certificates when properly filled up, we suggest the adoption of that course.

My Lord,

Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 18th instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 17th instant, reporting our opinion that a warrant, under the 23rd section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, should be issued for the seizure and detention of the Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft warrant which had been prepared in the form agreed upon between the Foreign Office and the Treasury in 1871, and approved by the then Law Officers in a letter dated the 4th September of that year; and that he was to request us to take that draft into our consideration, and to report to your Lordship our opinion as to whether it was right and proper to be issued.

That the previous papers relating to the case were inclosed for convenience of reference.

That he was to add that a letter had been sent to the Board of Customs, requesting them to communicate the name and official description of the officer to whom the warrant should be directed.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would state, in our reply, whether the warrant should be under seal.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the preceding day, forwarding for our concurrence a draft of warrant for the seizure of the Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié," he was to request that we would report to your Lordship our opinion whether the warrant in question should be actually executed or should only be issued to the officer of the Customs to be used in case of need.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approve warrant for seizure.
No seal required.

That, in our opinion, the form and wording of the warrant are sufficient and proper, and the warrant need not be under seal.

Should only be used in case of need.

But, referring to the engagement voluntarily given by Messrs. Watson, we suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that the warrant should only be issued to the officer of the Customs to be used in case of need, and should not be actually executed till the necessity arises.

Security should be given.

And Messrs. Watson may properly be asked to give such security as your Lordship may prescribe, under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, section 2, sub-section 2.*

Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié" handed over to Turkish Government before Declaration of Neutrality.

Name changed to "Hamadieh."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 25th instant and previous correspondence in regard to the Turkish iron-clad "Mendoukié," he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter and inclosures from the Board of Customs, from which it appeared that the vessel in question was the property of the Turkish Government, and was handed over to them nine days before the issue of the Queen's Proclamation of Neutrality; and, further, that her name had been changed to the "Hamadieh."

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take the letter into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the steps that should be taken in the matter.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to call our attention to the fact that war was formally declared by Russia on the 24th April, and that Her Majesty's Proclamation of Neutrality was issued on the 30th April.

* On the original Report there is the following note: "Query § 8. Proviso (1) (2)."

1877

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not satisfied that she was completely handed over.

That the information supplied by the Customs does not satisfy us that the ship in the Victoria Docks became, before the declaration of war, a Turkish man-of-war, or was completely delivered over to the Turkish Government, and still less that no addition of any equipment of war has not been made to her since the declaration of war; and we therefore advise that the ship should be immediately arrested and detained till further information has been received.

Should be arrested, and warning given against infringement of Foreign Enlistment Act.

We also advise that Mr. Hayward, the manager of the Victoria Docks, and all other persons who may have access or be concerned with this vessel, should be cautioned that they do not incur the penalties provided against those who may infringe the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870.

My Lord,

Mr. Fell's railways.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 18th May, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 17th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a further letter from Mr. Fell, stating that he held patents for a system of constructing cheap local railways; that before the war he had been in treaty with the Governments of Russia and Turkey; and that probably the two Governments would be disposed to use the system for supplementing existing railways at the seat of war.

That Mr. Fell added that it was now decided that he was to take no part in carrying them out for military purposes, and concluded by inquiring whether it would be lawful for him to furnish the belligerent Governments with information of a purely civil engineering character.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to request that we would take that letter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to Mr. Fell's inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this letter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

Cannot answer as to supply of engineering information to belligerents.

Must not connect himself with any military operation.

That Mr. Fell may properly be answered that your Lordship cannot undertake to reply to the general question whether it would or would not be lawful to furnish to either of the belligerents information of a purely engineering character. Much would depend upon the stipulations with regard to the terms upon which the information should be furnished. Mr. Fell will, however, be guilty of an offence against the law if he accepts, or agrees to accept, any engagement in or in connection with any military operation.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Board of Admiralty,[*] inquiring who were to be considered the "authorities" for enforcing the regulations with regard to belligerent ships of war laid down in your Lordship's letter to the Admiralty of the 30th April.

That Lord Tenterden was at the same time to inclose for our consideration a draft of the answer which your Lordship proposed to return to the above letter; and that he was to request us to inform your Lordship, at our early convenience, whether we concurred in the terms of that draft, or would suggest any additions or modifications.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That at page 2, line 5 from the foot, we think the word "and" might, for greater precaution's sake, be substituted for the words "or if not." And page 3, line 5 from the end, the words "or actual" should be inserted between the words "intended" and "infraction." Temple, June 13, 1877.

My Lord,

Warrant to search ships, &c., under Foreign Enlistment Act. WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st June instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a draft of warrant which had been prepared by the Solicitor to the Board of Customs, and which it was proposed should be issued to the Commissioners by your Lordship, in order to enable them legally to exercise their powers of search, &c., under the provisions of the 25th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870; and to request us to take that draft into our consideration and report to your Lordship our opinion whether it was right and proper to be issued, and as to any instructions which we might think it advisable that the Commissioners should receive with regard to the manner in which the warrants should me made use of.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the 25th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, provides that the person empowered may enter any dockyard or other place within Her Majesty's dominions.

As to limits of a port. The warrant refers only to a ship within a "port."

We do not know if all the shores in Her Majesty's dominions are or are not within the limits of a "port."

The Board of Customs will probably know how this is. But if any of the places under the 25th section are not within a "port," the warrant should be altered to meet the case of a ship in a place within Her Majesty's dominions, yet not within the limits of any port.

The warrant follows the words of the Statute, using the term "friendly State." We are of opinion that the words Turkey or Russia, as the circumstances of each case require, should be substituted, and the warrant altered in the way noted in the margin.

The section (25) enacts that the person employed may "inquire as to the destination of the ship," and may "search such ship."

Instructions for using warrant. In our opinion, the instructions which the Commissioners of Customs may properly receive with regard to the manner in which the warrant should be made use of are:—

1. That whilst all watchfulness is used to prevent any ship intended to be employed in the naval or military service of Russia or Turkey from leaving Her Majesty's dominions, the warrant should not be resorted to vexatiously or unnecessarily.

2. That the person employed to "inquire" and search be a careful and intelligent man, well acquainted with the specific objects of his "inquiry" and "search," and capable by his knowledge and experience of discharging properly the duties of "inquiry" and "search."

British vessels with coal for Port Saïd. Russian Consular certificate of protection against seizure. WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Russian Ambassador,* stating that in consequence of representations which Lord A. Loftus had, by desire of Her Majesty's Government, addressed to the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, the Russian Government had authorized their Consular officers at British ports to grant, on certain conditions, certificates of protection against seizure by Russian cruizers to owners and masters of vessels bound for Port Saïd with cargoes of coal destined for commercial use.

Notice for "Gazette" That a draft notice to that effect had been drawn up for insertion in the "London Gazette," and was therewith inclosed, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was at the same time to inquire whether, in our opinion, it was desirable that Her Majesty's Government should state to the Russian Government that Port Saïd being a commercial port, and not a port of naval equipment, they did not wish it to be assumed from that arrangement that in their opinion coal would properly be condemned as contraband of war on the sole ground of its being shipped to that port, but they had learnt with satisfaction that the Russian Government had acceded to it, as it would have a beneficial effect in relieving the apprehensions of shipowners and others engaged in the coal trade with Egypt.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the notice may properly be inserted in the "London Gazette."

Not necessary to raise question of coal being contraband, or Port Saïd being a commercial port. But it does not seem to us desirable to raise any question with the Russian Government on the character of coal as an article of contraband, or the nature of Port Saïd as a commercial port, and not a port of naval equipment.

The coal conveyed to and landed at Port Saïd may at any time be taken for the use of Turkish men-of-war, or transports carrying Turkish troops, or troops of the allies of Turkey. Some such contingency the Russian Government probably has in

And the application to the Russian Government for, and the insertion in the "Gazette" of, the permission to take coals to Port Saïd are scarcely consistent with the suggested doubt whether coal would be properly taken as an article not contraband of war to Port Saïd, a mere commercial port.

My Lord,

Case of the "Hermes." British insurers of French cargo on Greek vessel seized by Turks.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was to transmit to us papers relative to the case of the British insurers of a French cargo laden on board the Greek vessel "Hermes," who claimed the assistance of Her Majesty's Government to obtain compensation for the loss sustained by them in consequence of the alleged illegal seizure and detention of that vessel by the Turkish military authorities.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether your Lordship would be justified in interfering diplomatically on behalf of the British underwriters.

That it was stated that the assured gave notice of abandonment, and that the underwriters had paid for a total loss. The cargo was insured in the Archangel Marine Insurance Company (a British Company) for 1,300*l.*, and for a like sum "with various underwriters at Lloyd's." That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into consideration with reference, not only to the case of the "Hermes," but also to the general question as to the right of Her Majesty's Government to interfere diplomatically on behalf of British underwriters claiming in respect of losses illegally inflicted by a belligerent on foreign ships and cargoes insured by them, a proceeding which appeared to your Lordship to involve a serious and novel responsibility.

That the point was discussed in the Report of the Committee of the Board of Trade on the "Alabama" claims (Appendix to British Case, Vol. vii, p. 5), and was raised in the cases of the "Dashing Wave," p. 114, and the "Circassian," pp. 124 and 133 of the Report of the Awards of the Mixed Commission on British and American Claims, sent therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Insurers have legal claim to compensation. Her Majesty's Government may support.

That the cargo of the "Hermes" became, after the seizure of that vessel by the Turkish Government, the property of the insurers, British subjects, by reason of the abandonment by the assured; and if that cargo has been subsequently detained or destroyed by the Turkish Government, the insurers have a legal right to compensation from that Government, and such right may properly be supported diplomatically by Her Majesty's Government.

With regard to the general question, we are of opinion that the mere act of seizure of an insured ship or cargo would not confer upon the insurers such a right to compensation as may be made the subject of diplomatic interference by their own Government.

Cargo abandoned by owners becomes property of insurers.

If, however, the subject of the insurance is* seized and afterwards remains in esse, and becomes, in consequence of abandonment, the property of the insurers, the detention or destruction of their property by the belligerent would inflict an injury upon them for which their Government might properly require the belligerent to pay compensation.

The Lord Chancellor to Lord Tenterden.

Glentruim, Newtonmore, N.B., August 18, 1877.

Lord Chancellor's opinion. British Government cannot complain of seizure of a foreign ship by the Turks.

I have not here any means of referring to any authorities or precedents there may be on this subject; but upon principle, convenience, and good sense, my own opinion is strongly against the right of the English underwriters to call on Her Majesty's Government to make any diplomatic demand in support of their claim. When the ship was seized, she was a foreign ship, with a foreign-owned cargo, and if she had been then sent to the bottom, the seizure and destruction, if a wrong, would have been a wrong done to foreigners, and one of the risks which the English underwriters undertook. Having been thus seized, wrongfully (as I will assume), the owners abandon the ship to the English underwriters, as (between the owners and the underwriters) the owners are entitled to do. The underwriters thus have thrown on their hands, as a natural consequence of their insurance, a foreign ship which has been wrongfully seized, but of the seizure of which the English Government cannot complain. I don't see on what principle the underwriters can say to Her Majesty's Government, "You must make a complaint that at a certain punctum temporis, namely, the moment when the abandonment was complete, the retainer of the cargo and ship became a wrong done to a British subject." I think the English underwriter who insures a foreign ship and cargo takes the risk of having it in such a case abandoned and thrown on his hands as property which has got into the power of a belligerent under circumstances which give the British Government no right to interfere.

British underwriters insuring a foreign ship run the risk of loss. British Government no right to interfere.

(Private.) Glentruim, Newtonmore, N.B., September 3, 1877.

My dear Tenterden,

I return the draft despatch ("Hermes") with some suggested alterations.

I still am strongly of the opinion expressed in my memorandum, but I observe Sir J. Pauncefote, in his memorandum (which I don't think I saw before), refers to some cases (the "Dashing Wave," &c.) as if they were in point, and bore in an opposite direction. I cannot think the circumstances were the same; but if they are, and if they are precedents binding on us, we ought to be careful not to appear to set them at defiance.

Ever yours,
(Signed) CAIRNS.

The Lord Chancellor to Lord Tenterden.

Glentruim, Newtonmore, N.B., September 11, 1877.

I don't think the "Dashing Wave" or "Circassian" cases apply to the "Hermes" case.

In those cases the ship captured was British, and the British Government might well interfere diplomatically to complain of the capture as a wrong done to the English flag, for the benefit of all whom it might concern.

Moreover, there was in those cases an absolute contract in the Washington Treaty by the United States' Government to adjudicate on all claims arising out of acts "against the property of subjects of Her Britannic Majesty," and the detention or sale of property abandoned to British underwriters was clearly an act against the property of subjects of Her Britannic Majesty.

In the "Hermes" case the abandonment is equivalent to an assignment of the property in hoc statu by the assured to the underwriters. It is assigned with all its incidents and risks, and, inter alia, with the risk arising out of the fact of its being within the clutches of a foreign belligerent Power, who have seized it while on board a foreign ship.

My Lord,

Black Sea blockade. Licence granted to Messrs. Valiano to pass through.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, stating that the firm of Valiano and Co. had recently obtained from the Turkish Minister of Marine a pass through the blockading squadron in the Black Sea for one of their ships, and that some of Mr. Layard's colleagues were disposed to make that transaction the grounds of a protest against the blockade. That, according to the principle laid down in the case of the "Franciska" (Dr. Deane's "Law of Blockade," pp. 114, 115), it would seem to your Lordship that the grant of the pass or licence to Valiano and Co. on the peculiar and special occasion mentioned would not affect the validity of the blockade, but as a contrary opinion appeared to prevail among some of the foreign Representatives at Constantinople, Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Layard on that question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Licences allowable in certain cases.

That we are not prepared to say that occasions may not arise in which a belligerent may properly grant a licence to a particular ship to pass into, or out of, a blockaded port; but we think no such occasion has arisen in the case in question.

Special privileges to individuals to break blockade cannot be recognized.

We are therefore of opinion that Mr. Layard should be instructed to inform the Porte that a blockade, during the maintenance of which licences are issued to individuals to carry on that trade which is interdicted to the world at large, is a blockade which is not authorized by the law of nations, and which will not be recognized by Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord,

Coal for Port Saïd. Russian Consular certificate for protection from capture.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 17th instant, stating that, with reference to the last paragraph of our Report of the 6th instant, respecting the proposed notification in the "Gazette" in relation to the shipment of coal to Port Saïd, he was directed by your Lordship to inform us that no application was made to the Russian Government for permission to take coals to Port Saïd, but that in order to obviate any interruption in the supply of coal for the use of steamers navigating the Suez Canal, they were requested to authorize their Consuls in this country, on production of shipping documents of coals destined for Port Saïd, showing that the cargo was destined for commercial purposes, to issue certificates which would protect the vessel from interference by Russian cruizers on suspicion of the cargo being destined for the use of the Turkish naval forces.

That a similar arrangement had been entered into with our concurrence in regard to coal shipped for the use of Her Majesty's ships of war lying in Turkish ports, with this modification, that in such cases the certificate was to be granted by the Lords of the Admiralty, or the Senior Naval Officer on the station, in cases where a floating cargo might be purchased abroad.

That your Lordship had no reason to believe that the Russian Government considered that coal might be treated as contraband of war from the mere fact of its being shipped to an enemy's port.

Russian Ukase. Sulphur not contraband of war unless for enemy's use, &c.

That on that point Lord Tenterden was to inclose a despatch from Sir A. Paget, forwarding an extract from the Italian "Gazette" to the effect that by a recent Ukase of the Russian Government it was declared that sulphur should not be deemed contraband of war unless it was shipped to an enemy's port, and was destined for military or naval uses.

That your Lordship, however, desired to be informed whether in the last paragraph of our Report we intended to convey the opinion that the proposed arrangement with respect to coal shipped to Port Saïd implied an admission on the part of Her Majesty's Government that in the absence of a certificate from the Russian Consul the cargo would be liable to condemnation as contraband of war from the mere fact of it having been shipped to an enemy's port, and if so, whether, after the above explanation as to the real nature and object of the arrangement, we were still of opinion that the proposed notice in the "Gazette" might be inserted without further communication on the subject with the Russian Government.

Lord Tenterden was also pleased to request that we would also favour Lordship with our opinion as to whether steps should be taken for the publication in the "London Gazette" of the declaration made by the Russian Government as regards sulphur, reported in the despatch of Sir A. Paget.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Coal is always liable to seizure.

That coal being an article ancipitis usus, the ship carrying coal will always be liable to seizure and detention, and to being carried in for adjudication.

Use of Russian Consular certificate does not imply admission that coal is otherwise liable to condemnation.

The Consular and naval certificates will save ships furnished with those documents from the inconvenience of seizure, and the proposed arrangement with respect to coals shipped to Port Saïd does not, in our opinion, do more than provide for the free navigation of certificated ships, and does not imply an admission on the part of Her Majesty's Government that in the absence of the certificate coal will be liable to condemnation as contraband of war from the mere fact of its having been shipped to the port of a belligerent, and we think the proposed notice may be inserted in the "Gazette" without further communication on the subject with the Russian Government.

Sulphur notice not to be published without further information.

The slip forwarded by Sir A. Paget contains only an extract of some communication between the Italian and Russian Governments, and should not, in our opinion, be published in the "London Gazette" without further information, and also without communication with the Russian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Efficiency not impaired by navigation of small vessels under protection of Russian shore guns.

That the communication with Russian ports, and especially that between Odessa and Nicolaieff, is apparently confined to small vessels which are enabled to run along the coast in shallow water and under the protection of Russian guns on the shore, and probably within a line of torpedoes.

Black Sea blockade.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 17th August ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 6th August respecting the efficiency of Black Sea blockade, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for any observations we might have to offer thereon, a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople,‡ forwarding the reply of the Porte to his inquiries on the subject.

Permission for Greek vessels to pass through.

That the fact which is admitted in the reply of the Porte, namely, that one or two vessels under the Greek flag have received permission to pass through the line of blockade, is open to grave question. The Porte suggests that, as a belligerent Power which has instituted a blockade de facto of the ports of the other belligerent, she has, by the same right which gives her the power of raising the blockade altogether, "la faculté dans certaines circonstances de permettre à des navires, destinés à des services spéciaux, de franchir la ligne du blocus à titre exceptionnel."

No right to make exceptions in favour of one neutral.

Exceptions in cases of disabled vessels.

Blockade must be equal for all.

This claim, in our judgment, cannot properly be entertained. In a case of blockade the rights and obligations of neutrals are equal, and a blockading Power has not the right to grant liberty to vessels of one or more particular neutral Powers to pass the blockading line and communicate freely with the ports of the belligerent which are subject to blockade, whilst she withholds such liberty from the vessels of all other neutral Powers. There is an exception to this general rule, namely, that the vessels of a neutral Power which are in a sinking or disabled state may be permitted to pass into a blockaded port in order to save life and property. This, however, is not the exception which the Porte by her reply suggests to have been the cause for which the "permission de communiquer librement avec des ports Russes" was granted to the vessels sailing under a Greek flag, and we would suggest to your Lordship that the Porte should be informed that the permission in question was given in breach of the rights of neutrals, and that the blockade, so long as it exists, should be a blockade

My Lord,

Porte's proposal to allow vessels to leave blockaded ports on condition of selling their grain cargoes at Constantinople.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 27th October instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the accompanying decypher of a telegram which had been received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople,* stating that he had reason to believe that the Porte would permit foreign ships detained on account of the blockade of the Russian ports in the Black Sea and Sea of Azoff to leave, on condition that the cargoes consisting of grain should be sold at Constantinople, no duty being levied upon them; and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that proposal into our immediate consideration, and favour your Lordship with an early opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government could properly be a party to such an arrangement.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Contrary to law of blockade.

Neutrals might then treat blockade as at an end.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government cannot properly be a party to the proposed arrangement, which is opposed to the principles of the law of blockade. Blockade has been defined to be a uniform universal exclusion of all vessels not privileged by law. If some vessels are allowed to pass, others will have a right to infer that the blockade is raised. In blockade there are no conditions, the veto is absolute, and must either be existing or non-existing. If, therefore, the Porte act upon the principle suggested in Mr. Layard's telegram, the blockade is, by law, at an end, and neutral vessels will be justified in treating it as at an end.

Seizure of Turkish iron-clad under Foreign Enlistment Act.

Turkish protest against. It was Turkish property before war began.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 28th August, 1877, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 25th May last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a note from the Turkish Ambassador at that Court protesting against the seizure of the iron-clad frigate "Hamidieh" (or "Mendoukieh") on the ground of her having been the property of the Turkish Government since the 21st April last, when the last payments were made to the builders.†

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was, at the same time, to transmit a letter from the Board of Customs,‡ containing copies of Reports on the subject from the Controller of the Outdoor Department of Customs in the port of London, by whom the "Hamidieh" was detained under your Lordship's warrant of the 2nd June last, from the Assistant Surveyor of Customs at the Victoria Docks, and from Mr. Hamel, the Solicitor to the Customs; and he was to request us to take those papers into our consideration, and to acquaint your Lordship with our opinion on that matter at our earliest convenience.

That the previous papers relating to the detention of the vessel were inclosed for convenience of reference.

We were also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated 10th September, 1877, transmitting to us the accompanying further letter which had

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

We are of opinion that the suggestion made to your Lordship by Mr. Hamel in his letter of the 25th August last is one which may properly be adopted, and that the proper course will be, in replying to the Turkish Ambassador's letter, to direct his attention to the concluding paragraphs of the 23rd section of the Foreign Enlistment Act as providing a satisfactory mode of disposing of the question.†

Five Greek vessels loading at Nicolaieff.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 2nd instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 30th ultimo, he was to transmit a despatch from Mr. Consul-General Stanley, forwarding a despatch from Mr. Vice-Consul Wagstaff, detailing the circumstances under which five Greek vessels had loaded cargoes of wheat at Nicolaieff; and that Sir Julian was also to transmit a letter from the Secretary to Lloyd's, stating that, to the best of his knowledge, there were no British ships remaining in any of the Russian ports of the Black Sea and Sea of Azoff; and that he was to request our opinion as to whether, in the event of the five Greek vessels mentioned in Mr. Wagstaff's despatch being allowed to proceed on the intended voyages, either with passes or without, Her Majesty's Government would be justified in declaring to the Turkish Government that they no longer considered the blockade valid quoad Nicolaieff, and whether an intimation to that effect might properly be given at once to the Turkish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If permitted to leave, Her Majesty's Government may declare Nicolaieff blockade no longer valid.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government will be justified in declaring and at once intimating to the Turkish Government that, if the five Greek vessels named in Mr. Wagstaff's despatch are allowed (with or without passes, and whatever their destination may be) to proceed on their voyages, Her Majesty's Government will no longer consider the blockade valid quoad Nicolaieff.

My Lord,

Danube Public Act. Surplus funds.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 17th September last, stating that he was to transmit papers relative to a question which had arisen regarding the interpretations to be placed upon Article 14 of the Danube Public Act, so far as concerned the application of the reserve fund to the payment of current expenses in the event of a deficit of income arising in any year.

That Mr. Lister was to request our opinion as to whether, on the right construction of the Public Act, it was competent to the Commissioners to apply the whole or any part of the surplus in hand for the time being, whether invested or not, and whether carried or not to a reserve account, to making up any deficit of income which might occur in any year subject to the priorities declared in Article 14, or whether the surplus of any one year, from the time when it had been invested or carried to the reserve account, or otherwise set apart and declared to be surplus, was applicable only to the purposes specified in that Article in respect of any surplus, and could not be applied from time to time in satisfaction of the preferential charges.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in the Act which says that there shall be a yearly appropriation of the whole balance as surplus, and in our opinion the word "surplus" in Article 14 means a declared surplus as distinguished from the whole balance which, at the end of any year, may be found in the hands of the Commissioners.

Surplus carried to reserve fund cannot be used to make up deficit of income.

In our opinion, when once a surplus has been declared and carried to the reserve account, such surplus must be considered as part of the fund held in reserve for the purposes specified in the Act, and it is not competent to the Commissioners to draw upon that fund and apply the proceeds to the making up of any deficit of income which may have occurred.

But any balance not so carried may be applied for the purpose.

But, if there remains in the hands of the Commissioners, after paying the priorities named in Article 14, any balance which has not been declared surplus, and carried into the reserve fund, we think that such balance may be applied to make up any deficit of income.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from M. Petrocochino, temporary Chairman of the Black Sea Blockade Committee,† calling attention to the alleged inefficiency of the Turkish blockade of the Russian ports in the Black Sea and Sea of Azoff, and urging that Her Majesty's Government should take some action in the matter.

If vessels are allowed to pass, Her Majesty's Government will no longer recognize blockade.

That your Lordship proposed to inform the Committee, in reply to that communication, that if the numerous vessels then reported to be loading in certain ports of the Black Sea should be permitted to proceed to Constantinople or elsewhere through the line of blockade, your Lordship was of opinion that Her Majesty's Government would be justified in declaring to the Turkish Government that they were unable any longer to recognize the blockade of those ports as effective within the meaning of the Declaration of Paris.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we concurred in the terms of the proposed reply, or would suggest any addition or modification therein.

Iron-clad building for Turkish Government.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Messrs. Samuda Brothers, requesting to be relieved from the obligations of a bond which they entered into in the month of July last in respect of an iron screw corvette which they were building under contract for the Ottoman Government at the time that war was declared between Russia and Turkey, and which had since been assigned to Messrs. Gadban and Watson, with a view to the delivery of the said vessel, which was now completed, to the owners, Messrs. Gadban and Watson, and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would advise your Lordship what steps should be taken to relieve Messrs. Samuda from the difficulty in which they were placed.

Proposal to release Messrs. Samuda from bond entered into, and to obtain bond from Messrs. Gadban, to whom she will be transferred.

That it appeared to your Lordship that, under the circumstances, some arrangement might be proposed whereby either Messrs. Gadban and Watson should agree to enter into a bond (on taking delivery of the vessels) similar to, and in substitution of, the bond executed by the builders, and engage to "permit to be taken such other measures, if any, as the Secretary of State may prescribe for insuring that such ship shall not be dispatched, delivered, or removed without the licence of Her Majesty until the termination of the war," as provided by section 8 of the Foreign Enlistment Act. And that in case they should decline to agree to that course a warrant should issue for the seizure and detention of the vessel when delivered to Messrs. Gadban and Watson, with a view to such proceedings as they might be advised to take in the High Court of Admiralty for her release under section 23 of the Act.

That Mr. Gadban was Turkish Consul-General in London, and the vessel in question was a very powerful one, and of the value of about 280,000*l*.

That some of the former correspondence was annexed for convenience of reference; and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we concurred in the course above suggested, and if not, that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be made to the application of Messrs. Samuda.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approve, but vessel must be watched.

That we concur with your Lordship in the course which you propose to take in releasing Messrs. Samuda, and requiring a bond and security from Messrs. Gadban.

We would, however, suggest to your Lordship that the Board of Customs should be specially directed to watch the movements of the ship, and report any change which may be made, or attempted to be made, in or upon her, or in her position.

My Lord,

Turkish blockade of coast of Albania.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenderden's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us two telegrams from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, reporting that the Turkish Government had sent a Circular to the Foreign Representatives declaring the coast in the Vilayet of Scutari in Albania, between Spezzia and Dulcigno, in a state of blockade, and that a sufficient number of ships would maintain it, and inquiring whether he should make any representation on the subject to the Porte.

Reference to case in 1861.

That a question was raised in 1861 as to the right of the Porte to blockade the coast of Albania, and on that occasion Her Majesty's Government were advised that, before recognizing the blockade, they should be satisfied that "such a state of armed insurrection or revolt against the Turkish Government existed throughout the coasts blockaded as to render the imposition of the blockade by the Turkish Government justifiable by the law of nations;" and that before inserting a notification in the "Gazette," Her Majesty's Government should obtain more precise information as to dates, &c., but might in the meanwhile communicate to Lloyd's the note from the Turkish Ambassador in which the intention to establish the blockade was made known.

Propose to inform Lloyd's, but wait for dates before sending to "Gazette."

That your Lordship proposed to pursue a similar course on the present occasion, and that Lord Tenterden was to request us to report to your Lordship whether we concurred in your doing so, in which case the substance of the two telegrams from Mr. Layard would be communicated to the Chairman of Lloyd's, but no notice of the blockade would be inserted in the "Gazette" until the Turkish Circular had been received, and Mr. Layard had reported whether the whole line of Albanian coast intended to be blockaded was in a state of insurrection or hostility to the Porte.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with an answer to that letter at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Concur.

That your Lordship may, in our opinion, properly, before inserting any notification in the "Gazette," obtain more precise information as to the dates, &c., of the blockade, and in the meanwhile communicate to Lloyd's the first of Mr. Layard's telegrams.

Blockade of insurrectionary coasts is legal by law of nations.

With reference to the second of Mr. Layard's telegrams, we think that should not be communicated to Lloyd's, since the blockade by the Turkish Government of the Turkish ports and coasts in possession of an insurrectionary force is legal by the law of nations; and the doubts of Mr. Layard upon the validity of such a blockade may, if published, lead to difficulties and mischief.

Subject to the suggestion in reference to the second telegram, we concur with your Lordship in the course you propose to take.

My Lord,

Breach of blockade: seizure of Greek vessels (chartered by Italians) in Bosphorus for.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying telegram received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople,* referring to the seizure in the Bosphorus, for alleged breach of blockade, of two Greek vessels chartered by Italians, and the release of which it was reported that the Italian Government had demanded for the reasons stated in the telegram.

That the accompanying letter from M. Petrocochino contained further particulars respecting that case.

That Lord Tenterden was further to transmit to us the draft of a memorandum which your Lordship proposed to communicate unofficially to the Italian Ambassador at this Court, as your Lordship thought it might be desirable that the Italian Government should be informed of the views of Her Majesty's Government on the case.

That before, however, communicating that memorandum to General Menabrea, your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we concurred in the statements as to the law of blockade therein contained, and to be favoured with any observations we might desire to offer on the subject of the proposed communication.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approving memorandum for Italian Ambassador.

That the statements in the memorandum as to the law of blockade are, in our opinion, accurate.

But we suggest for your Lordship's consideration that the passage in the memorandum on p. 3 beginning with the words "as to which the neutral Powers," and ending on p. 4 with the words "this important question," might conveniently be modified as follows:—

"Hitherto the Porte has been pressed by the foreign Representatives to take such measures as would increase the efficiency of the blockade which was thus recognized as existing, and Her Majesty's Government is not, with the information at present before it, prepared to say that the fact that the two Greek vessels in question got out of a port said to be blockaded is a sufficient proof of the inefficiency, and therefore justifies Her Majesty's Government in impugning the validity of the blockade."

Annex to No. 111.

Memorandum.

Memorandum. Views of British Government.

It has been reported to Her Majesty's Government from Constantinople that amongst the vessels lately seized in the Bosphorus for alleged breach of the blockade are two Greek vessels chartered by Italians, which, it is understood, will be condemned by the Prize Court. It is represented that the Italian Government have demanded the release of these vessels, on the following grounds:—

1st. That there has not been an effective blockading squadron; and

2nd. That the vessels in question were seized after they had passed through the line of blockade.

Her Majesty's Government have also learnt from an unofficial source that a further objection has been raised to the confiscation of the vessels on the ground that they were captured when driven through stress of weather into the Turkish port of Baltshick.

---

* November 25, 1877.

Blockade recognized as existing.

As regards the efficiency of the blockade, this is a question of fact. Hitherto the Porte has been pressed by the foreign Representatives to take such measures as would increase the efficiency of the blockade, which was thus recognized as existing; and Her Majesty's Government is not, with the information at present before it, prepared to say that the fact that the two Greek vessels in question got out of a port said to be blockaded is a sufficient proof of the inefficiency, and therefore justifies Her Majesty's Government in impugning the validity of the blockade.

As regards the other objections raised, Her Majesty's Government, founding themselves on the decisions of the maritime Tribunals of this country and of the United States, conceive that they are not sustainable in law.

Ship breaking blockade may be captured even during return voyage, and after touching at a port when driven by stress of weather.

It has been laid down by British and American Judges and jurists that if a ship which has broken a blockade is taken in any part of the same voyage, she is taken in delicto, and is subject to confiscation, and this liability even continues to the end of the return voyage; and it has further been laid down that a vessel which has committed a breach of blockade by egress shall not have her offence purged by being driven by stress of weather into a port which is not her port of destination.

Blockade of coast of Albania.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 7th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, inclosing a copy of the opinion of the Law Advisers of the Turkish Government, upon which the Circular of the Porte notifying the blockade of the Albanian coast from Spizza to Dulcigno was issued; and that Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take that despatch into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to offer thereon.

That the former papers bearing on the subject were annexed for convenience of reference, and that Lord Tenterden was to call our special attention to your Lordship's telegram of the 8th December to Mr. Layard, inquiring whether the whole line of coast blockaded was in possession of insurrectionary or hostile force. That he was also to transmit a telegram which had just been received from Mr. Layard in answer to your Lordship's telegram of the 8th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Disagree with Turkish lawyers.

That we are not able to agree with the opinion of the Legal Advisers of the Turkish Government.

(Reference to American blockades: Southerners became belligerents.)

The establishment of a blockade is an act of war, and in the case of the United States referred to by the Turkish Legal Advisers the Governments of France and Great Britain considered that by the blockade of the Confederate ports the Southern States became belligerents.

Blockade is an act of war. Must be confined to coasts in enemy's possession.

The blockade, being an act of war, must be confined to those ports and parts of the coast which are in the possession of the enemy, in the present case in the possession of the Montenegrins.

Breach of blockade: seizure of vessels with British cargoes in Bosphorus for.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, forwarding a memorandum having reference to the seizure in the Bosphorus of certain vessels containing cargoes belonging to British subjects, for breaking the blockade in the Black Sea.

Owners' protest on grounds of—

That that memorandum Mr. Layard believes to have been drawn up by the legal advisers of the owners of the cargoes in question.

That the memorandum raised three objections to the legality of the seizure of those vessels:—

1. Inefficiency.

1. That the blockade was not efficient within the meaning of the Declaration of Paris.

2. Terms of notification.

2. That the terms of the notification of the blockade were insufficient to justify the seizure of vessels, except by the blockading squadron.

3. Treaty rights.

3. That the vessels were seized in Turkish waters by the local authorities, contrary to the Treaty rights of foreigners.

That as regards the first objection, it turned upon a question of fact.

That the existence of a legal blockade had been recognized by the neutral Powers, and it appeared to your Lordship that one neutral Power ought not to disregard the opinions and attitude of the other neutral Powers in determining that difficult question. That Sir J. Pauncefote was to draw our attention on that point to the opinion of our predecessors in 1862.

That as regards the second objection, the blockade was notified in the usual form, and the power to seize vessels which had broken the blockade, until the end of the voyage, flows from the general law of blockade, as interpreted by the principal maritime nations, and not from the terms of the notification, and unless the seizure must be made by a vessel of the blockading squadron in order to be valid, your Lordship apprehended that there was no force in that objection.

As to the third objection, the seizure was made under a belligerent right, and it was conceived that the vessel seized could not claim the benefit of any Treaty of Ex-territoriality which would alter the general law of blockade inter gentes in favour of any particular nationality.

That we should perceive that the memorandum concluded by suggesting that the Porte should release the vessels and commence the blockade de novo with a fresh notification, and declare its intention of adhering to the English rule as to the right of seizure at any part of the voyage.

That, as at present advised, your Lordship was of opinion that that vacillating policy would be unwise, and that the Turkish Government should adopt one rule or the other and adhere to it.

That they insisted that the blockade had been and was effective, and to adopt the course proposed would be to admit that everything done under it was illegal.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take the above-mentioned despatch and memorandum into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the legality of the seizure of the vessels in question could be disputed on any of the points raised in the memorandum, and advise your Lordship as to the course which we considered that Mr. Layard should be instructed to recommend the Porte to pursue in that matter.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was further directed to inclose two despatches from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, relating to the seizure for breach of blockade of two vessels chartered by Italians, and reporting the action of the Italian Legation in that matter, as well as the proceedings of the Turkish Prize Court; and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take those despatches also into consideration and report thereon.

That the Italian Ambassador in this country had more than once called your Lordship's attention to the subject, and we should observe that Mr. Layard requested that the views of Her Majesty's Government might be communicated to him by telegraph, and that Sir J. Pauncefote was consequently to request that we would favour your Lordship with a Report upon the questions submitted to us at our earliest convenience.

We are also honoured with a further letter from the Foreign Office, bearing date the 17th instant, inclosing further papers on the above subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Doubtful efficiency, when many vessels pass blockading force.

That we have no evidence before us which enables us to say whether or no the blockade was, as a fact, efficient. We entirely agree with the Report of the Law Officers of the 25th January, 1862.* But we desire to point out that great doubt may be thrown upon the practical efficiency of a blockade, where a large number of ships pass the blockading force.

British, French, and American practice. Vessels may be captured during voyage.

The practice in France ("Ortolan," Règles Internationales 2, 324) we believe to be the same with that in Great Britain and the United States, and that a ship which has broken a blockade is liable to capture during the voyage by any ship in the service of the blockading belligerent.

---

* See Confidential Paper 1301, No. 10, p. 14.

1877

Not protected while in Bosphorus.

And a neutral ship which has broken the blockade is not protected from capture whilst in the Bosphorus.

The Porte cannot, we think, properly be asked to commence again everything in reference to the blockade, and so to nullify all which has been hitherto done in that matter.

Legality of seizure is undoubted.

The legality of seizure of the vessels in question, assuming, as we do, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that they got out from the blockaded port without the permission of the blockading force, cannot, in our opinion, be disputed.

Porte should be urged to keep blockade efficient and grant no more licences, &c.

We think, however, considering the number of vessels which apparently have reached the Bosphorus coming from blockaded ports, and the system in some instances adopted of granting licences, that Mr. Layard may properly be instructed to call the attention of the Turkish Government strongly to the need of keeping up a really efficient blockade, to the necessity of granting no more licences, and to the urgency of clear, sound, and consistent decisions in the Prize Court.

Case of Italian vessels seized is similar.

The case of the Italian vessels comes within the observations which we have had the honour of placing before your Lordship already in this Report, and we therefore consider that it would be useless to add anything in relation to the particular case of those two vessels.

We have, &c.

My Lord,

Marriage at Smyrna of British subject with deceased wife's sister. Valid by lex loci.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th December instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letter from the Rev. James Dombrain, British Chaplain at Smyrna, who requested to be informed whether the marriage of a British subject in that city with his deceased wife's sister would be held valid by the Courts of Law in this country, the husband being at the time of the marriage "legally domiciled" in Turkey, and such marriages being valid according to the lex loci.

That Mr. Dombrain stated that the Registrar-General had given his opinion in favour of the validity of such a marriage.

That your Lordship proposed, in reply, to transmit a copy of the inclosed Circular (July 1, 1857) to Mr. Dombrain, and to inform him that British subjects who desired to be "married" abroad according to the laws of the foreign country in which they resided must be guided by the opinion of their legal advisers as to whether the marriage would be recognized as valid by British Courts of Justice under the circumstances of each particular case.

As to question of domicile in Turkey.

That your Lordship would, however, be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether, having regard to the ex-territorial jurisdiction exercised by Her Majesty in the Levant, it was competent to a British subject, while retaining his nationality of origin, to abandon his British domicile and acquire a domicile in Turkey in the technical sense, so as to bring him within the class of cases referred to by some of the Judges in the case of "Brook v. Brook" (3 S. and G., 493), as not coming within the decision in that particular suit that the marriage of a British subject with his deceased wife's sister, both being English-born subjects and domiciled at the time in England, was void though the marriage was celebrated in a foreign country, by the law of which such marriages were legal.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

British subject retaining nationality of origin cannot abandon British domicile.

That, in our opinion, it is not competent to a British subject, while retaining his nationality of origin, to abandon his British domicile and acquire a domicile in Turkey, so that the validity or invalidity of his marriage in Turkey with his deceased wife's sister should not be governed by the decisions in "Brook v. Brook," 3 Sm. and G., 493, G. The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received February 6.)

Temple, February 5, 1877.

My Lord,

Fisheries. Halifax Commission under Treaty of Washington.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th October last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a copy of the Treaty of Washington of the 8th May, 1871, and that he was to call our especial attention to Articles XVIII, XIX, XX, XXI, XXII, XXIII, XXIV, XXV, XXXII, and XXXIII, by which we should perceive that provision was made for the establishment of a Commission to meet at Halifax, Nova Scotia, to determine, having regard to the privileges accorded by the United States to the subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, as stated in Articles XIX and XXI of the Treaty, the amount of any compensation which ought to be paid by the Government of the United States to the Government of Her Britannic Majesty in return for the privileges accorded to the citizens of the United States under Article XVIII of the Treaty.

Case of Her Majesty's Government.

That Lord Tenterden was further to inclose a volume of printed correspondence, showing the steps which had been taken by Mr. Ford, Her Majesty's Agent to the Commission, in conjunction with the Governments of Canada and of Newfoundland, for drawing up the Case of Her Majesty's Government for presentation to the Commission on behalf of both Colonies; and that, in transmitting to us a copy of the "Case" thus prepared, he was to request that we would take it carefully into our consideration, in connection with the correspondence on the subject, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it was drawn up in such a manner as to meet with the requirements of the case.

That Lord Tenterden was to add that your Lordship would also be glad to be furnished with our opinion on the following points which might arise on the meeting of the Commission at Halifax:—

1. The construction of Article XXIV of the Treaty as regards the unanimity of the three Commissioners in giving their award, of which mention is made in Mr. Ford's despatches No. 6 of September 1875, and No. 15, Confidential, of the 24th November of the same year.

2. The position to be adopted by Her Majesty's Agent before the Commission, in the event of the Headland question being unavoidably introduced into the discussions from the United States' side. That, with regard to that point, Lord Tenterden was to inclose a memorandum by Dr. Deane, and to refer us to Mr. Ford's despatch No. 7 of the 17th September, 1875, and also to his despatch No. 15, Confidential, of the 24th November of that year.

3. The question of the valuation of the customs remissions on either side, as an offset to the value of the fisheries, and especially whether, in our opinion, the offers made by the United States' Commissioners during the negotiations which preceded the conclusion of the Treaty of Washington would be admissible as evidence before the Commission of the value placed by the United States themselves on the privilege of admission to the British North American fisheries.

That, with reference to that point, which was especially important, Lord Tenterden was to inclose a volume of the proceedings of the Joint High Commission at Washington, and to refer us to the latter portion of Mr. Ford's despatch No. 15, Confidential, of the 24th November, 1875, bearing in mind that the "Case," as now submitted for our opinion, had been framed on the principle of "non-committal," as explained in Mr. Ford's despatch No. 6, Confidential, of the 6th August 1876, and in the memorandum inclosed therein, from which we should perceive the alterations which had been made in the "Case" as at first drawn.

That, in connection with that point, your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion as to the interpretation of Article XXII of the Treaty, mentioned in the memorandum inclosed in Mr. Ford's despatch No. 15, Confidential, of the 24th November, 1875.

That those were the points which occurred to your Lordship as those on which our opinion was especially required; but that Lord Tenterden was to say that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with any general observations which might suggest themselves to us with regard to the arguments which might be used in support of the "Case" of Her Majesty's Government, or to the general conduct of the proceedings before the Commission.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That your Lordship desires our opinion upon five points connected with the Fishery Commission under the Treaty of Washington of May 1871.

First, whether the "Case" prepared on behalf of Her Majesty's Government is drawn up in such a manner as to meet with the requirements of the case.*

Case.

In our opinion the "Case" is ably and carefully drawn, and is a fair and full statement of the grounds upon which a claim for compensation is based, and a right and proper estimate of the amount of compensation in respect of the Dominion fisheries and the Newfoundland fisheries. We suggest, however, the omission of the passage beginning with the words "in addition," on p. 34, and ending with the word "Treaty," on p. 36, as suggesting topics which can hardly be considered appropriate upon a question of pecuniary compensation.

Suggest certain omissions.

This opinion we come to considering that an opportunity will be offered for meeting and answering the "Case," prepared on behalf of the United States, and that Her Majesty's Government is not required to set out, in the first instance, those matters which may evidently be raised on the part of the United States.

Thus, in pp. 4 and 5 of the "Case," the Ist Article of the Convention of 1818 is set out in full; but in the argument upon that Article no notice is taken of the fact that, whilst that Article gave no rights or privileges at all to Her Majesty's subjects, the XIXth and XXIst Articles of the Treaty of Washington give British subjects certain rights on the shores of, and the admission of certain fish and fish-oil free of duty into, the United States.

French rights lessen United States' benefits.

The rights claimed by the French to fish on the west coast of Newfoundland are not in any way noticed in the second part of the "Case" relating to Newfoundland, and yet it is obvious that if the French claims are good for anything, the benefit to, and the right of, the United States' fishermen on the west coast must be to some extent lessened.

The amount of compensation claimed both for the Dominion Fisheries and the Newfoundland fisheries seemed to us, when we first read the Case, very large, indeed beyond all proportion, either to any loss which may be sustained by British subjects or to any benefit which may be conferred on United States' citizens.

And this view, which we were inclined to take, was confirmed by the speeches at Ottawa in May 1872 (p. 211 of the Correspondence), in April 1873 (p. 216 of the Correspondence).

Agree to amount of compensation claimed.

We have, however, again carefully considered the calculations upon which the amounts of compensation are respectively based, and, so far as we are able to form an opinion, we now think the figures justify the result reached; yet the speeches above referred to may place great difficulties in the way of Her Majesty's Agent, who should be able to lay before the Commissioners the clearest and most convincing evidence of the real relative values accorded to either party under Articles XVIII, XIX, and XXI of the Treaty of Washington.

2. The construction of Article XXIV of the Treaty as regards the unanimity of the Commissioners in giving their award.

Commissioners' award must be unanimous.

Articles II, X, and XIII of the Treaty expressly state that a majority of the arbitrators or assessors shall be sufficient, and the silence, accidental or designed, in Article XXIV upon the decision of the majority, leads, in our opinion, directly to the conclusion that the unanimity of the Commissioners is necessary to the giving their award.

Headland question must be strongly supported.

3. We are of opinion that, in the event of the Headland question being introduced into the discussion from the United States' side, Her Majesty's Agent should be prepared to adopt the strongest ground, and support it by the fullest reasons which the subject affords.

Customs remission as an offset.

4. The question of the valuation of the customs remission on either side as an offset to the value of the fisheries cannot, in our opinion, be shut out from consideration if introduced from the United States, since it appears that a large market will, by such remission, be in the United States opened to British subjects, which is a clear advantage to the British subject, and may, therefore, fairly be put forward on behalf of the United States.

Question must not be raised by British Government.

But as the Case has been framed, and we think rightly, upon the principle of "non-committal," the question should not be raised on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, though Her Majesty's Agent should be prepared to give evidence and bring forward arguments in support of the advantages to the citizens of the United States by the remission of the duties.

We have on this head carefully considered the letter from Mr. Ford (No. 6, Confidential, p. 192), and the two inclosures, and we entirely agree with the opinions stated in those documents.

Further, we think that the offers made by the United States' Commissioners during the negotiations which preceded the conclusion of the Treaty of Washington, if admissible in evidence, which we doubt, cannot properly or prudently be used as evidence of the value placed by the United States themselves on the privilege of admission to the British North American fisheries, because among those offers we find one was to purchase in perpetuity for 1,000,000 dollars, or 400,000*l.*, the rights for which, during twelve years only, Her Majesty's Government in the Case now claim for 22,880,000 dollars.

Values to be assessed only on privileges under Article XVIII compared with Articles XIX and XXI.

Lastly. In our opinion, the strict construction of Article XXII requires the Commissioners to compare and assess the relative values only of those privileges which are accorded to the citizens of the United States under Article XVIII, compared with the privileges accorded to British subjects under Articles XIX and XXI.

Article XXI, in words, grants apparently equal or equivalent privileges to the two countries; but it may well be that owing to the small value of the United States' fisheries, as limited by the Convention of 1818, and the distance of those fisheries from a market in the Dominion or in Newfoundland, and from other circumstances, that the framers of the Treaty left out, in Article XXII, as valueless, the privilege of the admission into the Dominion and Newfoundland, free of duty, of fish-oil and certain fish, the produce of the United States' fisheries.

However, the words of Article XXII confine the Commissioners to assess merely the privileges accorded to the citizens of the United States under Article XVIII, and do not permit any set-off by reason of the value of the privilege of admission, free of duty, of fish-oil and certain fish into the Dominion of Canada.

Temple, February 21, 1877.

My Lord,

Lacepède Islands: right of Great Britain to sovereignty over.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 30th ultimo, sating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us correspondence relative to a question which had been raised as to the title of the Colony of Western Australia to the Lacepede Islands. That those islands, which had been lately found to contain deposits of guano, were first discovered and surveyed in 1822, by Captain King, of His Majesty's ship "Endeavour," and that, on the formation of the Colony of Western Australia in 1829, they were included within its limits by the terms of the Governor's Commission. That they were situated at a distance of about 15 miles only from the coast, and no formal possession appeared to have been taken of them on behalf of the Sovereign: but that in 1875 the Colonial Government granted a licence to a colonist to occupy them, which licence he forfeited through the non-fulfilment of its conditions. That in the following year, however, a Mr. Geddes was licensed by the Colonial Government to remove guano from the islands, with full powers to proceed against trespassers. That he had, however, been but eight days in possession of the islands under that licence, when a Mr. Roberts arrived for the purpose of hoisting the American flag, and removing guano from the islands, as agent for a Mr. Lord, who claimed to have taken possession of the islands on behalf and in the name of the United States' Government, through his agent Mr. Roberts, and by virtue of a warrant

Mr. Geddes licensed to occupy by Governor of Australia.
Mr. Roberts subsequently hoisted United States' flag, as agent for Mr. Lord, who claimed on behalf of United States.

granted by the United States' Consul-General at Melbourne, under an Act of Congress of 1856, authorizing United States' citizens to take possession of guano islands on behalf of their Government.

That Mr. Lord claimed to have taken possession of the Lacepede Islands under that Act, on the 26th June, 1876, which was eight days after Mr. Geddes had taken possession of them under his licence from the Colonial Government, and he insists that the title of Her Majesty to the islands is invalid by reason of the omission on the part of the Colonial Government to take formal possession of them in the name of the Queen.

That, having placed before us the foregoing brief statement of facts, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the papers, then sent, into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the specific questions raised by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, as well as on the general questions whether the claim of the United States' Government to the Lacepede Islands, which had been set up on their behalf by their Consular authorities in Australia, could be supported by international law.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have considered the 10 Geo. IV, cap. 22, which provided for the government of unoccupied lands on the western coast of New Holland, and the islands adjacent, those settlements being known as Western Australia.

We have also considered the terms of the Commissions of the 4th March, 1830, and 10th July, 1873, granted to the Governors of Western Australia, and defining the boundaries of the Colony, which include the Lacepede Islands.

Governor of Australia had the right to grant licence for occupation if not previously occupied, &c., by another country.

And we are of opinion that the Governor of Western Australia had, by the law of this country, and by international law, the right and the power to direct and license the occupation of, and exercise jurisdiction on, the Lacepede Islands, if, at the time when the occupation was taken and the jurisdiction was first claimed, those islands were still neither occupied by the citizens or subjects of any other Government, and not within the jurisdiction of any other Government.

From the facts stated in the papers transmitted to us, it appears that in 1875 the Colonial Government granted a licence to a colonist to occupy the islands, and that in 1876 Mr. Geddes was also licensed by the Colonial Government to remove guano, with full powers to proceed against trespassers.

Mr. Geddes was in this occupation of the islands, and had been so for ten days, when on the 26th June, 1876, Mr. Roberts, acting as the agent of Mr. Lord, an American citizen, came to the islands for the purpose of removing guano, and Mr. Roberts then ran up the flag and claimed possession in the name of the United States.

It is not said when Mr. Lord discovered the guano.

The Act of Congress (18th August, 1856), under which Mr. Lord claims is as follows:—

"When any citizen of the United States discovers a deposit of guano on any island, rock, or key, not within the lawful jurisdiction of any other Government, and not occupied by the citizens of any other Government, and shall take peaceable possession thereof, and occupy the same, such island, rock, or key may, at the discretion of the President of the United States, be considered as appertaining to the United States, and the land and naval forces may be employed by the President to protect the rights of such discoverers, or their assigns."

Act of Congress does not justify Mr. Roberts' action.

In our opinion the islands were, on the 26th June, the date of Mr. Lord's agent taking possession, within the lawful jurisdiction of, and occupied by a subject of, Great Britain; and neither the warrant granted by the United States' Consul-General at Melbourne, nor the Act of Congress, could oust the jurisdiction, nor dispossess the subject of Great Britain.

We are not aware of any formalities which should have been gone through by the Colonial Government in order to make the possession and occupation of the islands absolute and indefeasible.

The issuing of the licences and the fact of occupation were, in our opinion, within the authority given to the Governor by his Commission, and the islands were, in the words of the Act of Congress, within the lawful jurisdiction of the British Government, and occupied by a subject (that is a citizen) of the British Government.

United States' Government have no claim.

The claim of the United States' Government to the Lacepede Islands cannot, therefore, in our opinion, be supported by international law.

In answer to the specific questions raised by the Secretary of State for the Colonies:—

Royal Commission to a Governor is not questionable by Powers who have not claimed the territory previously.
Actual possession to be taken.

1. A Royal Commission expressly authorizing a Governor to govern a territory in the name of and as belonging to the Crown of England is not questionable by any Power which has not, previously to the issue of such Commission, asserted any claim to such territory.

We assume, in thus answering the question—

a. That the territory is res nullius.

b. That actual possession and occupation are taken of the territory.

Power of a Consul in a Colony. Governed by Colonial law.

2. The power of a Consul residing in a Colony is governed within the Colony by the law of the Colony.

In the present case, however, Mr. Lord contends that the act done by him was done outside the Colony, where the law of the Colony did not consequently reach.

The Act of Congress, under which the whole of the proceedings of Mr. Lord are alleged to be justified provides that any American citizen may do that which Mr. Lord has done on behalf of the United States; and no question seems to us to be properly raised as to the extent of a Consul's authority.

Her Majesty's Government might withdraw Mr. Lord's exequatur.

3. But we think the acts committed and attempted to be justified by the United States' citizen Mr. Lord against the jurisdiction of the Government justify that Government in withdrawing his exequatur as Consul.

In concluding this Report we submit to your Lordship, for your consideration, the general principle on which (as appears from Mr. Herbert's letter of the 16th January last)—

General principles.

"Her Majesty's Government has hitherto proceeded in annexing to a Colony, by the Queen's Letters Patent, such islands adjacent to it, at greater or less distances, as it may be found necessary to treat as British possessions."

And we refer also to the instance given by Mr. Herbert, that—

"All islands within 60 miles of the coast of Queensland were thus annexed to that Colony."

And that—

"It had not been supposed necessary to take formal possesion of each island in the name of the Crown."

Validity of a declaration to annex is doubtful.
Actual possession, or evidence of ownership, necessary.
Also visits from ships of war.

Since, in our opinion, the validity of a mere declaration to annex the territory is, in the present state of international law, extremely doubtful, and we respectfully suggest that in all cases, past and future, actual possession should be taken, that if possible the place annexed should be occupied, and if occupation be impracticable, that evidence by inscription or in some other way should be left of possession being taken, and that the unoccupied islands should be visited as frequently as possible by Her Majesty's ships.

We have, &c.

No. 117.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received June 4.)

Temple, June 2, 1877.

My Lord,

Case of Peter Martin, conveyed in custody down the Stickine River.

Question of right of navigation of rivers of Alaska.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th May, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin, relative to the case of Peter Martin, a prisoner who was conveyed in custody from Laketown to Victoria, in British Columbia, by the Stickine River, a portion of the journey being effected through Alaska. That the party landed on the bank of the river for the purpose of cooking food, and the prisoner there attempted to escape, but was overpowered and conveyed to Victoria, where he was tried for that offence, and sentenced to imprisonment. That Peter Martin alleged that he was an American citizen, and the Government of the United States claimed his liberation, not only in respect of the above sentence, but of previous sentences under which he was then undergoing imprisonment at Victoria, on the ground that the place where the party landed on the bank of the river was American territory, and that in any case his conveyance by the Stickine through Alaska was illegal.

That the point was one of considerable importance, involving, as it did, among other matters the question of the right to the free navigation of the Stickine through Alaska, which was conceded to British subjects by a Convention entered into between Great Britain and Russia in 1825.

Lord Tenterden was further pleased to transmit to us a memorandum which had been drawn up at the Foreign Office containing a précis of the facts; and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the several points submitted for consideration at pp. 8 and 9, and advise your Lordship generally as to the course which we would recommend in relation to the case.

Lord Tenterden was pleased to add that maps of the locality referred to were attached to the Report of the Committee of the Privy Council of Canada, which formed the first inclosure in the letter of the Colonial Office to the Foreign Office of the 22nd March, 1877.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in advising your Lordship upon the seven questions raised in the memorandum of Sir Julian Pauncefote, and submitted for our consideration, we will deal in the first place with the last five questions:—

Privileges of Great Britain under Treaty with Russia in 1825.

1. Whether Great Britain, on the sale of Alaska by Russia to the United States in 1867, lost her rights to the free and unrestricted navigation of the rivers flowing through that territory to the sea, secured to her by the Convention with Russia of 1825, depends upon the construction of the VIth clause of the Convention of 1825.

That clause gives to British subjects the right of free navigation upon the rivers in question in perpetuity, and Russia could not, in our opinion, voluntarily and without the consent of Great Britain withdraw this permission.

Revoked by Treaty between Russia and United States of 1867;

By clause VI, however, of the Treaty of the 30th March, 1867, between Russia and the United States, Russia declared the cession of the territory and dominion to be free and unincumbered by any reservation, &c., and, therefore, did virtually revoke the permission she had granted, and by so doing gave Great Britain ground for serious complaint.

and forfeited by conduct of British Government in negotiating Treaty of Washington.

2. Whatever may have been the nature of the right conferred upon Great Britain by the Convention of 1825, we are of opinion that by the subsequent conduct of her Government, especially by the negotiations which led to the Treaty of Washington, and by that Treaty itself, she has lost that right. It may be suggested that the XXVIth clause of the Treaty of Washington was merely declaratory, but we cannot take this view. We consider that, fairly construed, the stipulations in that clause give new rights, and amount to that extent, and in that sense, to an admission that any former rights were abrogated.

Right to convey a prisoner doubtful in any case;

3. If the rights of free navigation under the Convention of 1825 still existed, we should doubt very much whether the conveying a prisoner through American waters, and still more the landing him in custody upon American territory, would be within the terms of the Convention.

and unlawful under navigation clauses of Treaty of Washington.

4. And being of opinion that the rights of free navigation now depend upon the XXVIth Article of the Treaty of Washington, which expressly states the navigation to be open for the purposes of commerce, we think a prisoner cannot lawfully be conveyed through Alaska by the Stickine River.

Peter Martin must be given up to United States.

5. The demand of the United States for the release of Peter Martin cannot, in our opinion, properly be rejected. His surrender should be conceded on the ground that he was as a prisoner conveyed through United States' territory, and no reference need be made to the doubtful point whether the attempted escape and recapture were made within the boundary of the States or of the Dominion.

6. For the unauthorized conveyance of a prisoner through the territories of a foreign Power is an infraction of the rights of sovereignty of such Power, and entitles that Power to demand the liberation of the prisoner even after he has left those territories in which he was detained, and from which he has been taken without the authority and in violation of the law of the country.

7. And this right to demand the liberation of a prisoner conveyed without authority through the territory of a foreign Power is not affected by the fact that the prisoner is a subject of the foreign Power.

My Lord,

Halifax Fishery Commission.

Mr. Ford's answer to United States, and views on the Headland question.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to the letters of the 2nd instant and 21st ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Mr. Ford, Her Majesty's Agent at the Halifax Fishery Commission, inclosing a copy of the reply to the Answer of the United States which he had delivered to the Secretary of the Commission, and reporting his views with regard to the Brief on the Headlands question which he was drawing up, and which he was anxious to lay before the Commissioners as soon as possible.

That he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, with those relating to that subject which are already before us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereupon at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we had to some extent considered and prepared a Report upon the papers transmitted to us by Lord Tenterden.

Approving.

The subsequent despatch to your Lordship from Mr. Ford, No. 19, and the reply on behalf of Her Britannic Majesty's Government to the Answer of the United States of America, inclosed with that despatch of Mr. Ford, so entirely agree with the opinion which we should have submitted to your Lordship in answer to the questions proposed to us, that we need merely say that we are of opinion that the reply may properly be approved of throughout.*

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 17.)

Temple, November 16, 1877.

My Lord,

Canadian Extradition Act.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 7th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office, inclosing copy of an Act recently passed by the Legislature of Canada to make provision for the extradition of fugitive criminals from the Dominion, and that he was to request our opinion whether the Canadian Act sufficiently provided for the execution of existing Treaties [Query, "or for any future Treaties"] which Great Britain might conclude with foreign Powers in virtue of the Extradition Act of 1870.

That your Lordship apprehended that so long as the Imperial Act of 1870 was neither repealed nor amended, any new Treaty which Great Britain might conclude must be in accordance with the provisions of that Act, and must therefore contain a stipulation in conformity with Section III, sub-section 2, of that Act, which was as follows:—

"A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered to a foreign State unless provision is made by the law of that State or by arrangement that the fugitive criminal shall not, until he has been restored, or had an opportunity of returning to Her Majesty's dominions, be detained or tried in that foreign State for any offence committed prior to his surrender other than the extradition crime proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded."

No stipulation as to trial for other than the extradition crime.

That the Canadian Act, as we should observe, contained no restriction to the surrender of a fugitive criminal similar to that contained in the section of the Act of 1870 above recited.

But Canadian Minister may refuse extradition, &c.

That Section IV, sub-section 2, of the Canadian Act provided, however, that: For the avoidance of doubts, "any provisions of this Act which may be deemed to be inconsistent with any term of the arrangement shall not have effect to contravene the arrangement; and this Act shall be so read and construed as to provide for the execution of the arrangement." And by Section XVI (3) of the same Act, the Canadian Minister of Justice was empowered to refuse the surrender of a fugitive criminal if he thought that for any reason he should not be surrendered.

1877

That your Lordship therefore apprehended that the Canadian Act did sufficiently provide for the execution of existing Treaties, or for any future Treaties which Great Britain might conclude with the United States or any foreign Power under the existing Imperial Act.

That your Lordship would, however, be glad to be informed, at our earliest convenience, whether, in our opinion, that view was correct, and if so, whether we were aware of any legal objection to the issue of an Order in Council under Section XVIII of the Act of 1870, suspending the operation of that Statute within the Dominion of Canada so long as the new Canadian Act remained in force.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state, for our information, that at that time extradition from Canada to the United States under the Ashburton Treaty was carried on under the Imperial Act of 1870, and a local Act No. 94 of 1868, which was applied conjointly therewith by virtue of section 27 of the Imperial Act.

That the local Act was passed to carry out the extradition clause of the Ashburton Treaty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Act is sufficient for execution of Treaties under Extradition Act of 1870.

That the Canadian Act does sufficiently provide for the execution of existing Treaties, and of any further Treaties (the stipulations contained in which shall be consistent with the provisions of the Imperial Act of 1870), which Great Britain may conclude with any foreign Powers.

Latter may be suspended in Canada while Canadian Act remains in force; but power conferred on Canadian Minister is very extensive.

We are not aware of any strictly legal objection to the issue of an Order in Council under Section XVIII of the Act of 1870, suspending the operation of that Statute within the Dominion of Canada so long as the new Canadian Act remains in force; but we beg to point out that the power conferred upon the Minister of Justice by section 26 of the Canadian Act, sub-section 3, is very extensive, and that the exercise of such power would in most cases constitute a breach of Treaty obligations.

No. 120.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 6.)

Temple, November 5, 1877.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence noted in the margin, and to request that we would be good enough to advise your Lordship on the following question:—

Seizure of the "Jane Francis" for putting in at port of Tucácas, for which she was cleared by Venezuelan Consul at Demerara.

That in the month of May last year the British vessel "Jane Francis" left Demerara for the port of Tucácas, in Venezuela, having previously obtained the necessary documents from the Venezuelan Consul, as required in the case of vessels bound for a port in that State. On arrival at Tucácas she was seized, on the ground that she should not have proceeded to that port without having previously entered at Puerto Cabello. (Mr. Middleton, No. 70 of the 29th July, 1876.)

That the vessel was ultimately released, through the exertions of Her Majesty's Minister, it being admitted that the master had no intention of infringing the law, and had been involuntarily led into doing so by an inadvertence of the Consul of the Republic in Demerara, who had in consequence been dismissed from his post.

Compensation paid for losses.

That the owners of the "Jane Francis" had in the meantime incurred losses and expenses, to the amount of 260*l*., on account of demurrage and law costs; and an application was made on their behalf by Her Majesty's Government for the payment of compensation by the Venezuelan Government, who, while denying the right to demand any such compensation, agreed to pay the amount claimed, out of deference towards Her Majesty's Government, and subject to the sanction of Congress. (Mr. Middleton, No. 22 of the 4th February, 1877.)

Decree issued denying compensation for breaches of law caused by improper acts of Venezuelan Consuls.

That immediately afterwards the President of the Republic issued a Resolution to the effect that no captain of a foreign vessel arriving in an unqualified port of Venezuela, for which he was furnished with a clearance from a Venezuelan Consul, could claim indemnity on account of the measures taken against him for having infringed the law. (Mr. Middleton, No. 30 of the 23rd February, 1877.)

That thereupon Her Majesty's Minister was instructed to inform the President of the Republic that, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, the Municipal Enactment in question could not relieve the Venezuelan Government from the liability which, under the circumstances contemplated, might attach to them by the law of nations to make compensation for the injuries improperly caused to foreigners by officers and agents of Venezuela in discharge of their public functions. (To Mr. Middleton, No. 22 of the 10th April, 1877.)

That Her Majesty's Minister had now forwarded to your Lordship a copy of a note which he had received from the Venezuelan Minister for Foreign Affairs, Dr. Andueza Palacio, stating, in reply to Mr. Middleton's communication, that the Venezuelan Government could not, for the reasons contained therein, participate in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government on the subject of that Enactment. (Mr. Middleton, No. 66 of the 26th June, 1877.)

That your Lordship requested that we would take those papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, notwithstanding the Enactment referred to, compensation might be claimed under the law of nations in the circumstances contemplated therein.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Municipal law will not relieve Venezuela from responsibility for acts of its Consular officers attaching to her by international law.

That, in our opinion, a municipal law will not relieve the Government of Venezuela from making compensation for injuries caused to foreigners by the officers and agents of Venezuela in discharge of their public functions.

It does not follow, as Dr Palacio reasons, that because a Government is liable for the acts of certain agents, military or diplomatic, that the Government is not also liable for the acts of its agents who may have other duties to perform in relation to the subjects of another country.

One of the duties thrown upon a Consul being to give clearances for foreign vessels sailing for the ports of Venezuela, the Consul, in giving such clearances, is the agent of the Government, and acting within the scope of his authority, and for any mistake of this agent, causing loss or injury, the Government who appointed him is responsible by international law.

No. 121.

Sir J. Pauncefote to the Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane.[*]

Foreign Office, May 17, 1877.

Gentlemen,

Legal Vice-Consul Powers.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to state to you that, in consequence of the great increase in the judicial work in the Consular Court at Zanzibar, it has been found necessary to provide an assistant to Her Majesty's Consul-General there, and it is proposed, therefore, to appoint a Legal Vice-Consul to assist Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in carrying out his judicial duties.

On referring, however, to the Order in Council of 1866, under which the Consular Court at Zanzibar is established, it will be seen that the Order in question makes no provision for the appointment of a Vice-Consul or Vice-Consuls, but makes mention of a Consul only in the singular number, except in the 1st and 17th Articles, in which the word Consuls in the plural number is used. The 34th Article, however, provides that, in the construction of the Order, words importing the singular number shall, if, necessary, be understood to include several persons, matters, or things.

I am to request that you will favour Lord Derby with your opinion as to whether it is clear that more than one Consul may exercise the judicial and other powers conferred on Her Majesty's Consul by the Order, and if so, whether such powers may be legally exercised by a Vice-Consul without a supplemental Order in Council making special provision on that behalf.

I have, &c.
(Signed) JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE.

Report.

Order in Council confers powers on Consuls, not on Vice-Consuls. Supplemental Order requisite.

That, in our opinion, more than one Consul may exercise the judicial and other powers conferred by the Order in Council of the 7th August, 1866.

But we think those powers may not be legally exercised by a Vice-Consul without a supplemental Order in Council providing for the appointment of such a Consular authority and giving the required powers.

No. 122.

Sir J. Pauncefote to the Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane.[*]

Foreign Office, June 26, 1877.

Gentlemen,

Suits between British subjects and subjects of Zanzibar.

I AM directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you a despatch (No. 73), with its inclosure, from Dr. Kirk, Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar, relative to a question which has recently been raised in the Consular Court at that place with reference to an appeal from a Decree made by the Vice-Consul, wherein a subject of the Sultan was the plaintiff, and a British subject the defendant.

[*] The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be found when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain the original draft of the Report. The Law Officers, however, do not retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has, therefore, been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as the bare Report, without the usual preamble, would not be wholly intelligible.

It appears to Lord Derby that the judgment pronounced in this case, which is fully stated in Dr. Kirk's despatch, is invalid on two grounds:—

1. Because the case was heard before the Vice-Consul, who has no judicial powers under the Order in Council.

2. Because the Order in Council does not provide for the carrying out of that part of the Treaty whereby it is agreed that suits by native subjects against British subjects shall be tried by the British Consul.

The latter is only empowered under the Order in Council to try suits arising between British subjects, and if, as it is presumed, the Consul derives his judicial powers from the Order in Council alone, and not from the Treaty, there would appear to have been a grave omission in the Order which should be remedied in the supplemental one about to be issued for the purpose of extending the judicial powers of the Consuls and Vice-Consuls.

Jurisdiction hitherto exercised by British Consul.

I am to state that Her Majesty's Consul has been in the habit of exercising the jurisdiction now questioned for a considerable period; and I am to request that you will take this matter into your consideration, and favour Lord Derby with your opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Consul has by so doing exceeded his powers, and, if so, whether you would advise the insertion of a clause in the supplemental Order validating his proceedings.

A copy of the Treaty and of the Order in Council are inclosed for your reference.[*]

I have, &c.
(Signed) JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE.

Report.

Consul has no jurisdiction. Order in Council must provide for case.

That we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Consul at Zanzibar has, by exercising civil jurisdiction in suits in which one of the parties is not a British subject, exceeded his powers; and we should advise the insertion of a clause in the supplemental Order validating his proceedings.

No. 123.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received November 28.)

Temple, November 27, 1877.

My Lord,

Scheme of British subjects to administer Sultan of Zanzibar's territory on mainland.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying printed correspondence respecting a scheme of certain gentlemen, British subjects, for taking over and administering, for a period of years, the possessions of the Sultan of Zanzibar on the mainland of Africa.

That the objects of that scheme were clearly stated in the above-mentioned correspondence, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it was competent to those gentlemen to carry out the scheme without the sanction of Her Majesty, and, if not, whether there were any Constitutional objections to a general sanction of that undertaking by Her Majesty's Government.

That a paper by Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar[†] on the bearing of the various Commercial Treaties with Zanzibar, and a copy of the Treaty which regulated the position of England towards that State, were therewith inclosed, for our information and for convenience of reference, together with certain other papers which bear upon the subject, as marked in the margin.[‡]

May be adopted without Her Majesty's consent, which might cause complications with other countries. Foreign Enlistment Act might be infringed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, it is competent to the intended Company to carry out the proposed scheme without the sanction of Her Majesty, but the members of the Company should bear in mind that the execution of the scheme will probably involve the commission of acts which the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, or some other law or statute, forbids to be done without the licence of Her Majesty.

We suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that if Her Majesty's Government should in any way give authority to this Company to carry out the proposed undertaking, Her Majesty's Government may on some future occasion be involved in serious difficulties with the Sultan of Zanzibar as well as with other foreign Powers.

We have, &c.

| 41* | Law Officers | Dec. 31, | Japanese Municipal Laws. British subjects are bound by them, except where inconsistent with Treaty rights. Reference to question of publication of newspapers, shooting regulations, &c. | 39A |

MISCELLANEOUS.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECTS. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 42 | Law Officers | Nov. 21, 1878 | Naval Courts. New Board of Trade instructions. Approving with slight alterations | 40 |

MONTE VIDEO.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 43 | Law Officers | Dec. 19, 1878 | Marriages. Uruguayan Decree. Rules to be observed respecting previous civil ceremony, &c. Penalties on foreign Consuls and clergymen for breach of. Her Majesty's Government cannot object | 40 |

NETHERLANDS.

| | | | | |
| 44 | Law Officers | Mar. 19, 1878 | Marriages between brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law. Illegal in United Kingdom. With deceased wife's sister legal in some Colonies. Attempts made to legalize in England | 41 |
| 45 | Law Officers | 28, | Operation of Extradition Act in Straits Settlements. Surrender of fugitives from Dutch Colonies. Fugitives from native States under Indian Act of 1854. Cannot issue Order in Council under Extradition Act when no arrangement with foreign country exists. May issue one under 29 and 30 Vict., cap. 115, as it is doubtful if Indian Act is still in force | 42 |

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 46 | Law Officers | Mar. 27, 1878 | Illegal execution at Apia of American named Cochrane for murder. As to punishment of British subjects implicated in. Consul has no authority. High Commissioners' Court has no jurisdiction over crimes committed before it came into operation. British subject may be justiciable under Acts of George III; otherwise can only be tried in United Kingdom | 43 |
| 47 | Law Officers | May 10, | Case of illegal execution at Apia; and Slave Trade atrocities by Mr. Scott on the Congo. As to offenders being justiciable under Acts of George III. Those Acts are still in force, and parties are justiciable under them | 44 |

PERSIA.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 48 | Law Officers | Aug. 9, 1878 | Foreign jurisdiction in Persia. Order in Council. Approving with alterations | 45 |

PERU.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 49 | Law Officers | Jan. 12, 1878 | Attack on British Vice-Consulate at Iquitos by the Mayor and others. Peruvian argument—that remedy lies in law courts. Precedent quoted in Calvo. Consuls are under protection of Government in whose territory they reside. Compensation due. Repudiate the "law court" argument | 45 |
| 50 | Law Officers | Mar. 5, | Attack on Peruvian iron-clad "Huascar" by Her Majesty's ship "Shah." Approving reply to Peruvian Minister, but object to word "reprisals." (Draft to Senor Galvez annexed.) "Huascar," a rebel ship, repudiated by Peru, and sailing under no flag. Outrages on British flag. British Admiral forced to protect British property. As to attack being made in Peruvian waters. Decree authorizing capture specified no limits. Peru admits "Huascar" to be a pirate. British Admiral committed no offence against dignity of Peru | 46 |

PORTUGAL.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 51 | Law Officers | May 11, 1878 | Exportation of negroes from Africa to Island of St. Thomé. Suspected Slave Trade. Portuguese law, by which slaves are purchased, then ransomed and exported free. Purchase of slaves for purpose of setting them free is no violation of Slave Trade Treaty | 49 |
| 52 | Law Officers | Nov. 23, | Extradition in India. Article XVIII of Treaty with Portugal. Cannot suspend Extradition Act. Indian Legislature must provide for execution of Treaty | 50 |
| 53 | Law Officers | Dec. 31, | Extradition between Hong Kong and Macao. Portuguese objection to capital punishment. As to undertaking to commute all sentences of death. Government has no power to stipulate that punishment ordained by law shall not be carried out. Sir T. Henry's opinion | 51 |

RUSSIA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 54 | Law Officers | Feb. 20, 1878 | Marriage at Taganrog (Hoyland-Smalianinoff). British and Russian subject previously married at Russian church. As to Consular district of Taganrog. Marriage may be performed at British Consulate, but unnecessary, having been already performed according to lex loci, which makes it good everywhere. (Commission annexed showing Consular district) | 52 |
| 55 | Law Officers | Aug. 10, | Claim of Messrs. Bailey and Leatham ("Elizabeth" collision case) for return of money paid by them into Russian Court of Law. Russia must repay money. Messrs. Bailey and Leatham not obliged to sue defalcating officer of Russian Court | 53 |
| 56 | Law Officers | 12, | Messrs. Brook's Trade Marks. Fraudulent imitation at Warsaw. Fraud proved. Violation of Trade Marks Declaration | 54 |
| 57 | Law Officers | Sept. 10, | Mr. Devereux's claim. Detention of "Industry" lighter in Danube by Russians in 1877–78. Detained on account of danger of navigation. Shortness of notice given to neutral vessels to leave. May represent case to Russian Government, but cannot make claim as of right | 54 |

SPAIN.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 58 | Law Officers | May 14, 1878 | Gibraltar. Smuggling, &c. Order in Council to regulate trade. Limits of port. Object to Governor having power to define. Difficulty as to three-mile limit. Fixed line of demarcation should be settled with Spain. Order in Council is objectionable, but if proceeded with verbal alterations are necessary | 55 |
| 59 | Law Officers | July 3, | Case of the "Lindsay." Quarantine at Cadiz. Spain refuses compensation. No further steps can be taken | 57 |
| 60 | Law Officers | 19, | Case of the "Octavia." Spanish reply to claim for indemnity. Claim was on account of illegal seizure and detention, and Her Majesty's Government cannot now withdraw it | 57 |
| 61 | Lord Chancellor | Aug. 8, | Case of the "Octavia." Ground of claim, seizure on high seas, and detention of crew, &c. Claims must be insisted on. As to owner's claim for ship. Spain cannot refuse on ground of breach of British law by a British ship, but British Government should not claim in such a case. Inquiry should be made as to breach of Foreign Enlistment Act, &c. | 58 |
| 62 | Law Officers | 8, | Spanish encroachments in Sulu Archipelago. Freedom of trade for Great Britain and Germany secured by Protocol, except places in actual possession of Spain. Compulsory cession of further territory to Spain. Her Majesty's Government cannot protest, but may make a Treaty giving them the right to object, &c. | 59 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 63 | Law Officers | Aug. 9, 1878 | Gibraltar water boundary. Proposed provisional Order in Council extending to anchorage and quarantine limits. Unnecessary; police have already the required powers. Might be construed into admission that British legislative power does not extend beyond. Spanish Mediterranean waters must not be interfered with | 60 |
| 64 | Lord Chancellor | Dec. 30, | "Octavia." Small compensation must be asked for Cordova, the owner. Though a scoundrel, he is recognized at Jamaica as entitled to British protection | 60 |

TUNIS.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 65 | Law Officers | May 13, 1878 | Consular Court cases at Tunis. Mode of procedure. Camilleri case. Order may be made notwithstanding absence of defendant. Petition must be served, &c. | 61 |

TURKEY.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 66 | Law Officers | Jan. 22, 1878 | G. V. M. Camillieri sentenced to imprisonment by Tunis Consular Court. Appeal to Constantinople on ground of illegality of sentence. Consular Judge at Tunis was not right in dispensing with consent of Attorney-General, but the person convicted cannot raise objection by writ of error on those grounds | 62 |
| 67 | Law Officers | 25, | British and Italian Consular Courts at Constantinople. Conflict of jurisdiction. Case of Perdecari and Cangellari. Italian Court has no jurisdiction | 63 |
| 68 | Law Officers | 25, | Danube Commission. Surplus funds. Nothing to add to Report of 5th November, 1877 (Confidential, No. 4216, p. 85) | 64 |
| 69 | Law Officers | Feb. 5, | Blockades. Suspension during armistice. Her Majesty's Government may use influence to prevent capture of vessels at Bosphorus. As general rule armistice suspends blockade. If exception is intended it should be notified | 64 |
| 70 | Law Officers | 18, | Blockade of Albanian coast abandoned, but coast interdicted to neutral vessels. Contraband of war to be seized; vessels released. Course open to objection. Closing of ports an unfriendly act. Seizure of goods at will of Turkish Commander is contrary to practice of nations | 64 |
| 71 | Attorney-General | 25, | British subjects in service of the Porte. Breach of Foreign Enlistment Act. Liability to trial in British Consular Courts. Consular Courts have jurisdiction, but cannot compel such persons to appear and take their trial | 65 |
| 72 | Solicitor-General and Dr. Deane | 27, | British subjects in service of the Porte. Breaches of Foreign Enlistment Act. Liability to trial in British Consular Courts. Such persons are under protection of territorial Sovereign. Consular Courts have no jurisdiction, and should not exercise it if they had | 66 |
| 73 | Law Officers | Mar. 14, | Nil. See No. 29 under the heading of Egypt | 67 |
| 74 | Law Officers | May 13, | British and Italian Consular Courts at Constantinople. Conflict of jurisdiction "Perdicari v. Cangellari." Italian Government cannot annul their Consular Court decision, but suggest appeal to Ancona Courts. Her Majesty's Government may agree to this, but Italian Advocate must be engaged by British Ambassador at Rome | 67 |
| 75 | Law Officers | 30, | Draft Slave Trade Convention. Provision should be made for (1) Possession of Slaves without certificates; (2) Free blacks without passports; and (3) Slaves without passports. (Draft Convention annexed) | 68 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 76 | Law Officers | June 22, 1878 | Foreigners and martial law. Porte's Circular. No provision for privileges under existing Treaties. The Circular is justified by existence of state of siege, &c. | 71 |
| 77 | Law Officers | 29, | Illegal sentence passed by British Consul at Jeddah on a British Indian subject, and its illegal reversal at Constantinople without appeal. Sentence being illegal, remaining punishment must be remitted | 71 |
| 78 | Law Officers | July 12, | Military bridge at Ibraila. Damaged by Messrs. Carnegie's tug. Claim of Russian authorities. As to free navigation of the Danube. No question of Treaty rights, but only of the bridge being properly placed and the tug properly navigated. Form no opinion. Case should be referred to Danube Commission. Russian subsequent regulations cannot affect previous cases | 72 |
| 79 | Law Officers | July 19, | Turkish dhow "Aloni," with slaves, captured by Her Majesty's ship "Wild Swan." No Slave Trade Treaty with Turkey. Capture not justified | 73 |
| 80 | Law Officers | Aug. 6, | Military bridge at Ibraila damaged by Messrs. Carnegie's tug. Russian regulations assuming responsibility of shipping for damages should not be enforced. Call attention of Russian Government to arbitrary mode of assessing damages | 73 |
| 81 | Law Officers | 8, | Case of the "Harriet Agnes." Whether unseaworthy because loaded a trifle over disc mark. Master fined by Consul-General Fawcett. As to jurisdiction of Constantinople Consular Court, vessel having sailed from Nicolaieff. She is not necessarily unseaworthy under Merchant Shipping Acts. Fine must be returned. She was within Constantinople jurisdiction, notwithstanding original offence was committed at Nicolaieff | 74 |
| 82 | Law Officers | 14, | Case of the "Wave," arrested by Consul-General Fawcett for offence against Merchant Shipping Act. No power to arrest, except in exercise of Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction. As to breaches of law with respect to grain cargoes | 75 |
| 83 | Law Officers | Sept. 9, | Suit in Egyptian Mixed Tribunals between two natives, one of whom is a United States' protected subject. Judgment does not militate against rights of foreign Powers relative to protection | 76 |
| 84 | Law Officers | Oct. 29, | European Commission of the Danube with reference to Turkey being replaced by Roumania. Roumania should accede to Danube Articles of Treaty of Berlin. Public Act and Order in Council should be altered so as to meet altered circumstances | 76 |
| 85 | Law Officers | 30, | Forced loans. Liability of Brittsh subjects, holders of real property, to. They are liable, unless other Powers are exempted from such contributions | 77 |
| 86 | Law Officers | Nov. 5, | European Commission of the Danube. Alterations in Public Act. Agree in Sir J. Stokes' suggestions | 78 |
| 87 | Law Officers | 19, | Danube and Black Sea Railway Company. As to submission of claim to arbitration. Territory having been ceded to Roumania by Treaty of Berlin, Porte is relieved from submitting case to arbitration | 78 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 88 | Law Officers | June 25, 1878 | Liability of Government for acts of its agents. "Jane Francis" case. Refuting Venezuelan arguments. That Government is liable for its Consul's wrongful acts | 79 |

WÜRTEMBERG.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 89 | Law Officers | Jan. 11, 1878 | Guardianship of infants. Law as to. Approving draft to Mr. Petre. (Draft to Mr. Petre annexed.) Mr. Ochs not having by his will appointed his widow the guardian of his children, she cannot be their guardian in respect of their property | 80 |

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Earl of Derby.—(Received March 28.)

Temple, March 27, 1878.

My Lord,

Slave dealing. Power of Consul at Fernando Po to send British subject to Lagos for trial.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin,* in relation to a question which had arisen as to the power of Her Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po to send a British subject for trial to Lagos on a charge of slave-dealing. That the judicial powers of Her Majesty's Consul were regulated by Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 21st February, 1872, a copy of which accompanied the papers.

That by that Order in Council the Consul had power to deal with the offences against the Slave Trade Acts mentioned in section 16, but he had no authority to send offenders for trial to a British Colony under the provisions in that behalf contained in the Foreign Jurisdiction Act.

That we would observe, however, that the Colonial Office considered that that power might be exercised by him under the terms of the concluding paragraph of section 26 of the Slave Trade Act, 1873 (36 and 37 Vict., cap. 88), and they inquired whether your Lordship concurred in the instructions to that effect which they proposed to send out to the Governor of the Gold Coast Colony.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proposed instructions might be approved.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

He has no such power.

That, in our opinion, the Consular Officer has not, by 36 and 37 Vict., cap. 88, sec. 26, the power to send a person, charged with an offence under that Act, for trial to a British Colony; for we think such Consular Officer is not a Judge having "jurisdiction to try" within the meaning of that section.

My Lord,

Decree of forfeiture of Arab dhow "Mambo Sara." Violation of Slavery Acts.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us papers relating to a Decree of Forfeiture of an Arab dhow, the "Mambo Sara," and of the owner's cargo, for a violation of the Acts for the suppression of slavery, which Decree was made on the 7th day of June last by Her Majesty's Consul-General at Zanzibar.

That in his despatch No. 158 of the 12th November last, Dr. Kirk raised several questions as to which he solicited instructions from Her Majesty's Government, and his despatch was accordingly referred in the usual course to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury for the opinion of their Legal Adviser on Slave Trade matters.

Question whether owner must suffer for illegal acts of the master.

That the Report of Mr. Rothery was transmitted to the Foreign Office by their Lordships in their letter of the 5th ultimo, and we should observe that it dealt with a question of great importance in the administration of justice under the Slave Trade Acts, namely, whether a violation of sections 2 and 4 of the Act 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, committed by the master of a vessel, entails the forfeiture of the vessel and of the cargo belonging to her owner, in cases where there was no evidence whatever of any complicity or guilty knowledge on the part of the latter.

That Mr. Rothery had arrived at the conclusion that, on the true construction of section 4 of the Act 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, that question must be answered in the affirmative, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would inform the Earl of Derby whether, having regard to the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of the "Newport" (Swabey 317), we concurred in Mr. Rothery's view of the effect of the Act.

That if we should consider that in the case of the "Mambo Sara" there was a miscarriage of justice as regards the forfeiture of the vessel and of the portion of her cargo belonging to the ship-owner, the Earl of Derby requested our opinion as to whether, under the circumstances detailed by Dr. Kirk, it was competent to him to review his judgment, notwithstanding that the time limited for appeals had elapsed, and, if so, whether, in the event of the Decree being varied as regards the forfeiture of the vessel and the owner's cargo, the claim and title of the captors to the proceeds thereof would be annulled, and the amount become payable to the owner.

In obedience to his Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Owner is exonerated. Ship and cargo must be restored.

That, in our opinion, there has been a miscarriage of justice in this case. The owner of the ship and condemned cargo cannot, upon the evidence as we gather from Dr. Kirk's Report, be brought within the words of 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, sec. 4, and is, on that evidence, "exonerated from any guilty knowledge of an illegal purpose." (See the "Newport," Swab. Adm. Reports, p. 333.)

We think the owner is entitled to be repaid the value of his seized and destroyed ship, and of his sold goods, and to be repaid any expenses which the illegal condemnation and loss of his property may have inflicted upon him.

The claim and title of the captors to the proceeds should also be annulled.

There may be some technical difficulties in the way, which may prevent Dr. Kirk from reviewing his Judgment and varying his Decree, and we observe that the owner, in his petition, makes no complaint in respect to his vessel.

Nevertheless, in our opinion, the case is one of so great a miscarriage of justice that no technical difficulties nor mistake of the owner should prevent his having full redress from Her Majesty's Government.

No. 3.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor.

Slave Trade.—Case No. 17 of 1877.

Slave Trade. "Mambo Sara" case. Vessel and cargo rightly condemned.

IN my opinion, the dhow in this case and so much of the cargo as belonged to the owner were rightly condemned, and no claim for compensation should be entertained.

2. As I understand the 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, sec. 4, if any person fits out, navigates, or uses a ship for the unlawful objects in the Act, i.e., for the Slave Trade, the ship and the cargo on board belonging to the owner are forfeited.

Owners must suffer for master's acts.

3. Therefore if the master uses the ship in this way the ship is forfeited, and the owner must suffer. Either he was privy to it, or, if not, he ought to have employed a better master. The master represents the owner, and the owner must take the responsibility, as he would reap the profit, of the master's acts.

Difficulty of proving complicity of owner.

4. If this were not so the whole of the proceedings for putting a stop to the Slave Trade would be paralysed. A ship might be filled with slaves under the eye of one of Her Majesty's cruizers, and yet, if a guilty knowledge of the owner must be proved, the cruizer would either have to hold her hand until she obtained evidence of that guilty knowledge, or else, if she seized the ship, she would do it at the peril of having to make restitution if the knowledge were not proved. All that a slaver would have to do would be to send out his ship under an unscrupulous and worthless captain, to give him regular papers and strict written orders to pursue a legitimate trade, and prohibiting any trade that was illegal, and give him a private hint that he was free to do any slave business if he had an opportunity. If not detected the owner would get the profit; if detected, the papers of the ship and the orders of the owner would be relied upon, and if guilty knowledge could not be proved the ship would escape.

5. The course taken by the Legislature is, in my opinion, a much simpler and more effective one. The case is to be tried against those who are navigating or using the vessel. If there is a case against them the vessel is forfeited and the owner's goods on board. If it were a case of penalties or punishments it would, of course, be different. There, in order to exact a penalty or inflict a punishment there must be personal guilt.

6. In the present case I cannot doubt that there was a sufficient primâ facie case against the captain and the crew for forfeiture and condemnation. There was a slave on board, there were manacles and handcuffs, and the captain ran the ship aground to escape capture.

Precedents.

7. The cases referred to do not really conflict with this view. In "Bartham v. The Queen," 2 Moore 19, the question was whether three persons on board a ship seized in the port of Gibraltar were really slaves or not. This depended on some arguable questions as to their letters of freedom, &c. The Court held that it was doubtful whether they were slaves, but if they were, it was not proved that the owner, master, or mate was cognizant of the fact. It was not a question of the master being cognizant and the owner ignorant. On the contrary, Mr. Baron Parke, throughout the judgment, assumed that it would be sufficient to prove either that the owners or persons having the conduct and management of the vessel were cognisant.

8. As to the case of "Hocquard v. The Queen," 11 Moore 155,* the marginal note, no doubt, states that the ship was restored on the ground that there was no sufficient proof of any guilty knowledge on the part of the owners of the ship or shippers of the goods. But here, again, it was not a question of the master and crew having knowledge and the owners being ignorant. The question was, whether there was any evidence whatever that the ship was employed in the Slave Trade de facto. And the Court held that there was not such evidence, either against the owners or the shippers of the goods, or any one engaged in navigating the ship.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador had informed your Lordship that the Tribunals of his country had before them a law-suit between Austrian subjects on which a considerable sum depended, and in the course of which a question had been raised respecting bills drawn in this country by one of the parties to the suit, husband and wife, at the time resident here.

Power of women to draw, accept, &c.

That the Tribunals requiring information on certain questions of English law in such cases, the Ambassador had forwarded the accompanying series of questions, to which he requested that answers might be returned.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would be good enough to advise your Lordship as to the nature of the reply that should be given to his Excellency.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That having considered the questions submitted to us, the following are the answers which we return:—

Answers.

1. It is correct that, according to English law, a woman married or unmarried is of full age at 21 years.

2. It is correct that, according to English law, a woman of the full age of 21 years (provided she is not a married woman with a living husband) is able in England to draw, accept, or indorse a bill of exchange, or to make a promissory note, and that she is liable in England to pay the amount of such bill of exchange or promissory note, but, although generally, a married woman is not, during coverture, liable on bills of exchange or promissory notes accepted, made, or indorsed by her, yet, if she has separate estate, such estate is chargeable with the bills of exchange or promissory notes accepted, made, or indorsed by her, provided such separate estate is not settled on her without power of anticipation.

3. If the words "in this country" in question 3 mean "in England" we answer in the affirmative.*

4. It is correct that the requisites mentioned† are the requisites of a promissory note, save only that a promissory note may be made payable to bearer, in which case the name of the person to whom the sum is to be paid is, of course, not mentioned. This answer assumes that the question means by "promissory note" a negotiable instrument; many notes not negotiable might yet constitute an acknowledgment of indebtedness from the promiser to the promisee.

5. According to English law a promissory note, after it has been indorsed, stands on the same footing as a bill of exchange, and confers the same privileges and advantages and creates the same liabilities, and that it is not necessary that either a promissory note or a bill of exchange should have expressly noted or written thereon the words "bill" or "exchange" or "promissory note."

6. It is correct that, according to English law, if two or more persons give a joint and several promissory note, each is liable separately for the whole amount for which the note is given.

7 and 8. It is correct that, according to English law, the law of the foreign nation is a fact to be proved by the evidence of experts. The competency of the witness to prove as an expert foreign law is a question for the Court, and the only general rule that can be collected from the reported cases is, that the witness must from his profession or business have had peculiar means of becoming acquainted with that branch of law which he is called to prove.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN HOLKER.
HARDINGE S. GIFFARD.
J. PARKER DEANE.

---

* Question 3 was as follows: "Is it correct that according to English law a foreign woman is liable for a bill of exchange or promissory note which she, acting according to the English law, has given in this country, and which is to be paid in this country, although, according to the laws of her own country, she may not be able to give a bill of exchange or promissory note?"

† The requisites mentioned in the 4th question were the following:—
1. The signature of the maker, namely, the person who promises to pay.
2. The statement of the sum promised to be paid for value received.
3. The date when the sum promised to be paid is to be paid.
4. The name of the person to whom or to whose order the amount is to be paid.
5. That the instrument bears the proper amount of stamp duty.

My Lord,

St. Juan del Rey Mining Company. Charge against of Slave Trading.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd March last, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying printed correspondence, relating to a charge brought against the St. Juan del Rey Mining Company, of violating the provisions of the Slave Trade Acts. That the Company was a British Company originally established in 1830, and now registered under the Limited Liability Act, its office being at 8, Tokenhouse-yard, in the City of London. That it possessed mines at Marro Vehlo in Brazil, which were worked partly by slaves hired from the "Brazilian Company," another English Mining Company formerly carrying on business at Cata Branca in Brazil (and frequently referred to as the Cata Branca Company), under an Agreement in writing made in 1845, and subsequently therefore to the passing of the Act 6 and 7 Vic., cap. 98.

That the Brazilian Company "had been unsuccessful, and suspended operations in 1845, when it sold its land and plant, and hired out its slaves to the St. Juan del Rey Company, but it appeared that it never wound up its affairs, and still existed as a Company.

"That the Agreement of 1845 for the hire of the Cata Branca slaves was for a period of fourteen years, and would have expired in 1859, were it not for a further Agreement having been entered into between the two Companies, which was not reduced to writing, but the substance of which was given in the affidavit of Mr. Frederick Thomas Cutbill, a Director of the Brazilian Company, a copy of which formed the Inclosure 3 in Mr. Buckley Mathew's despatch No. 8 of September 7, 1877 (Correspondence, p. 21).

"That a copy of the original Agreement of 1845 formed the Inclosure 2 of the same despatch.

"That it had only recently come to light that that Agreement contained provisions stipulating that such of the slaves as were then under 21 years of age should on attaining that age before the expiration of the Agreement be liberated, and that at the expiration of the Agreement in 1859 the whole of the slaves and their issue should become absolutely free and emancipated. That these provisions have not been observed, for the reasons given in Mr. Cutbill's affidavit above mentioned, and also in the letter of Mr. Hockin, Managing Director of the Company, of the 23rd October, 1877 (Correspondence, p. 58), such of the Cata Branca blacks as have not been voluntarily emancipated by the Company were still held by them in slavery, and their yearly hire paid to certain parties in this country, to whom it was alleged that the benefit of the contract for the hire of the slaves was transferred in consideration of advances" (Mr. Buckley Mathew's No. 3, Correspondence, p. 9; Mr. Consul Hunt's Report, Correspondence, p. 65).

That legal proceedings have been instituted in Brazil against the St. Juan del Rey Company, the particulars of which would be found in Mr. Buckley Mathew's despatch No. 8 of September 7, 1877, above referred to (Correspondence, p. 21), and at the close of Mr. Consul Hunt's Report (Correspondence, p. 66). That in the meanwhile Mr. Consul Hunt, who had been dispatched to Morro Vehlo, in pursuance of instructions from the Earl of Derby, to make full inquiries into certain grave charges brought against Mr. J. N. Gordon, Her Majesty's Vice-Consul at Morro Velho, as well as in regard to the detention in slavery of the Cata Branca blacks by the Company, had furnished a Report of his inquiry, which formed the first inclosure in Mr. Buckley Mathew's despatch No. 100 of December 20, 1877 (Correspondence, p. 61).

Vice-Consul Gordon's complicity.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was to draw our special attention to that Report, and further to state that Vice-Consul Gordon, who was now in this country, was Superintendent of the Company in Brazil. That he had been dismissed from his office by the Company, and suspended in the exercise of his Consular functions.

1878

That the charges against Mr. Gordon were not only that he was cognizant of all the proceedings of the Company, and gravely implicated therein, but he was accused, among other things, of having illegally detained in slavery after the death of her former owner, Mr. P. Brown, a coloured woman named Quintilliana Theresa Le Brun, although, as Mr. P. Brown's executor, he was in possession of a duly executed document by which she had been made free; and further, of having illegally registered as a slave a woman named Camilla Francisca, who was not on the list of the Cata Branca slaves transferred to the Company, by falsely signing himself as a member of the "National Brazilian Association." That for the particulars of these and other charges, he was to refer us to Mr. Buckley Mathew's despatches No. 15 of July 26, 1877, and its inclosures (Correspondence, p. 9), No. 16 of July 31, 1877, and its inclosures (Correspondence, p. 16), and to Mr. Consul Hunt's No. 31 of August 6, 1877 (Correspondence, p. 18). That Mr. Gordon's defence against these charges was contained in Mr. Consul Hunt's despatch No. 37 of November 3, 1877 (Correspondence, p. 29). That as regards the St. Juan del Rey Company, we would observe that in the letter of their Managing Director (Correspondence, p. 58) it was stated that, according to the opinion of their legal advisers in this country, the legality of their proceedings was unquestionable, and that the facts of the case as regarded the Agreement of 1845 were well known to Mr. Gordon.

That the proceedings of the British Mining Companies in Brazil with reference to the employment of slave labour have been the subject of correspondence with the Foreign Office for many years, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the memorandum at page 3 of the Correspondence, which showed what the position of the question was at the time of the receipt of the letter addressed to the Earl of Derby by the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society on the 7th June, 1877, which we would find at page 1 of the printed Correspondence.

That, in addition to the various Reports of the Law Officers of the Crown adverted to in that memorandum, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to that of the Queen's Advocate, dated the 30th November, 1867, and printed at page 5 of the collection of Law Officers' opinions for that year; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour Lord Derby with our opinion as to whether Mr. Gordon and the directors of the St. Juan del Rey Company, and its officers and shareholders, or any of them, have rendered themselves liable to criminal proceedings in this country, and, if so, as to what steps Her Majesty's Government should take in the matter.

In obedience to the commands contained in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter, we have the honour to report—

The British Companies are punishable under 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98.

That, in our opinion, the Articles of Agreement (Inclosure 2 in Mr. Mathew's despatch of the 7th September, 1877, page 21 of the Correspondence) are a contract for the dealing or trading in, or transfer of, slaves, or persons intended to be dealt with as slaves; and, therefore, the parties to those Articles of Agreement, being British subjects, were punishable under the 6 and 7 Vict., cap. 98.

And we are also of opinion that all persons who, subsequent to the date of the Articles of Agreement, and being privy to those Articles, have become members of the Company which so dealt with the slaves, are punishable under the same Statute, unless they are within the exceptions of the 6th section of the Act.

Mr. Gordon may be proceeded against.

We think Mr. Gordon may be proceeded against, and those directors of the St. Juan del Rey Company, the officers, and shareholders of the Company who do not come under the exceptions of the 6th section above referred to are liable to criminal proceedings; which of those persons, however, may be so liable, and which may avail themselves of the exceptions, there is no evidence before us at present to show.

We therefore suggest that further inquiry should be made with the view of ascertaining the position as to date of acquiring and manner of acquiring shares in the Company by the directors and other shareholders, and we think Mr. Gordon may be proceeded against alone. When this information has been obtained, and if it be found sufficient for the purpose, your Lordships may properly consider whether Her Majesty's Government shall undertake any prosecution, or merely lend such aid as may be in its power to the Anti-Slavery Committee.

We have, &c.

My Lord,

Guatemalan Decree. Trials for sedition, rebellion, &c.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th February ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin,* relative to a Decree issued by the President of Guatemala providing for the trial and punishment by a military Court of persons who might in future be guilty of sedition, rebellion, or conspiracy, and of their accomplices, abettors, or concealers.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government were entitled to claim for British subjects exemption from the provisions of the Guatemalan Decree; and whether it was advisable that Her Majesty's Minister should be instructed to make any representation on the subject to the Guatemalan Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot claim exemption for British subjects.

That Her Majesty's Government cannot, in our opinion, claim for British subjects an exemption from the provisions of the Guatemalan Decree.

Crimes, &c., not defined. Notice must be given to British Minister of proceedings.

But as no definition of the words or crimes, sedition, rebellion, conspiracy, accomplices, abettors, or concealers is to be found in the Decree, we think Her Majesty's Minister may properly be instructed to officiously call the attention of the Guatemalan Government to the large meaning which might be given to these words, and request that no proceedings should be taken against British subjects without informing the British Minister and giving the accused the opportunity and means of defending himself.

My Lord,

Forced loans. Mr. A. Smythe's claim against Honduras.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 9th March ultimo, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Central America, inclosing correspondence† relative to a claim put forward against the Honduras Government by Mr. Archibald Smythe, a British subject, on account of forced loans said to have been exacted from him, and of losses caused to him by the measures which he alleged to have been taken by Honduras officers in consequence of his refusal to pay certain contributions demanded from him.

That we should see that Her Majesty's Minister had informed Mr. Smythe that his claim was much exaggerated, and that he was not entitled to compensation for the losses entailed upon him through his refusal to pay the contributions required from him, inasmuch as his proper course would have been to pay the money under protest and seek redress through the proper channel. That Mr. Locock based his reply upon an instruction addressed to his predecessor by Earl Granville in 1871 relative to the claim of Mr. Goussen, after consulting Her Majesty's Advocate-General (whose Report was sent to us with Sir Julian's letter); and to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour his Lordship with our opinion as to whether Mr. Locock's answer to Mr. Smythe should be approved, and the claim on behalf of Mr. Smythe limited to the amount of the tax levied under protest, without reference to the loss sustained by reason of the forced sale of his effects; and generally as to the proper measure of compensation in that case.

The previous papers relating to both claims were inclosed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to the commands contained in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the papers transmitted to us, and we are of opinion that the letter from Mr. Locock to Mr. Smythe cannot be approved.

Mr. Locock, we think, took a right view of Mr. Smythe's case when, in the letter of the 13th January, 1875, he claimed "fair compensation for the losses and injuries" which Mr. Smythe had suffered and been subjected to.

We think this claim so made was well founded upon the representations made by Mr. Smythe in his letter of the 10th November, 1874.

And since Mr. Locock's first communication on the subject (13th January, 1875), Mr. Smythe has been again, without excuse on the part of the Honduras Government, and after Mr. Smythe had written to the British authorities claiming protection, been subject to further exactions and annoyances (in January, February, April, and June 1876).

Mr. Smythe should be reimbursed sums levied and compensated for annoyances, &c.

This being so, the claim of Mr. Smythe should not now be limited to the amounts of the tax levied under protest and the legal interest upon those amounts. But Mr. Smythe is entitled to claim the repayment of the sums taken from him, the interest upon those sums, and a "fair compensation" for the expenses to which he has been put and the annoyances and injuries to which he has been subjected.

Had Mr. Smythe inserted in his claim a demand for compensation for the loss sustained by reason of the forced sale of his effects, we should have been strongly inclined to think him well founded in making that demand.

Want definition of term.

THE Law Officers and Dr. Deane find it impossible to answer the question submitted to them without being made acquainted with the exact meaning of the term "free port."

Will you then be so kind as to furnish the information required, i.e., whether "free port" means a port where, as a rule, no import or export duties are levied, or merely a port to which the vessels of all nations are allowed to resort?*

subsidy payable by the Government of Nicaragua to the Mosquito Indians under the Treaty of Managua, he was directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin,* with reference to certain further questions arising out of the same Treaty which gave rise to discussion in 1866, and which had been revived by the Nicaraguan Government on that occasion. That one reason assigned by the Nicaraguan Government for the non-payment of the subsidy was, among others, put forward by them from time to time, that they had not been allowed to enter upon the "full sovereignty" of the Mosquito Reserve conferred upon them by the Treaty, and in our Report above referred to we pointed out that the words "full sovereignty" did not occur in the Treaty.

Import and export duties at Greytown.

That we would perceive from Mr. Gollan's despatch No. 18 of the 6th November last that the Nicaraguan Government had recently issued and carried out an order for the levy of export duties at Greytown, in violation, as was contended by Her Majesty's Government, of Article VII of the Treaty, by which Greytown was declared a free port.

That we would observe also from Mr. Gollan's despatch No. 7, Political, of the 18th November last, that the Nicaraguan Government persisted in levying import duties at Greytown on goods introduced at that port, and intended for consumption in the Mosquito territory, a proceeding which Her Majesty's Government considered to be also in violation of Article VII of the Treaty.

That, as before stated, the claims of the Nicaraguan Government over the Mosquito Reserve under the Treaty had been the subject of previous discussion.

That thus, in 1865, they claimed the right to grant mahogany cuttings in the Reserve.

That on that question, which was disposed of, but which was not irrelevant to the present inquiry, as touching the limits of the sovereignty claimed by Nicaragua over the Reserve, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the Foreign Office memorandum of the 25th January, 1866, and to the Reports of the Queen's Advocate No. 16 of the 5th February, 1866, and No. 20A of the 19th July, at pp. 9 and 186 of the printed collection of Law Officers' Reports for that year. That the claims now contested related to the levy of duties. That as regarded the levy of an export duty at Greytown, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to Article VII of the Treaty, and to the following papers:—

1. Foreign Office memorandum of the 20th December last.
2. Mr. Gollan's despatch No. 6 of the 18th November last.
3. Mr. Locock's despatch No. 13 of the 17th January last.
4. Parliamentary Papers relating to Central America, to which references were made in the last-mentioned despatch.

That as regarded the levy of duties on goods intended for consumption in the Mosquito territory, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the same Article of the Treaty, and to the following Papers:—

1. A despatch to Mr. Buckley Mathew No. 1 of the 3rd January, 1866.
2. Mr. Buckley Mathew's despatch No. 18 of the 10th May, 1866, containing the reply of the Nicaraguan Minister for Foreign Affairs (Señor Silva) to the representations of Her Majesty's Government and Mr. Buckley Mathew's rejoinder.

the papers relating to this case into our consideration, and to favour Lord Derby with our opinion as to whether, having regard to the provisions of the Treaty of Managua, the protest of Her Majesty's Government against the action of the Nicaraguan Government in levying an export duty at Greytown, and an import duty on goods imported there, and intended for consumption within the Mosquito Reserve, was well founded.

In obedience to the commands of the Earl of Derby we have the honour to report—

Export duty unjustifiable. Import duty on goods for consumption in Mosquito Reserve justifiable.

That we are of opinion that the protest of Her Majesty's Government against the action of the Nicaraguan Government in levying an export duty at Greytown is well founded; but the protest against the action of the Nicaraguan Government in levying an import duty on goods imported there, and intended for consumption within the Mosquito Reserve, is not well founded.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received August 9.)

My Lord, Temple, August 8, 1878.

Import duties at Greytown on goods for consumption in Mosquito Reserve.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 13th May, he was directed to state to us that there was one point connected with the question of the levy of duties at Greytown on which your Lordship would be glad of a further expression of our opinion.

That we stated that, in our opinion, a protest would not be well founded "against the action of the Nicaraguan Government in levying an import duty on goods imported there, and intended for consumption within the Mosquito Reserve;" and that we made no distinction between goods intended for conveyance by land into the Mosquito Reserve and goods brought to Greytown in transit by sea to the Reserve.

That with regard to goods to be forwarded by land the question was of no practical importance, as the high range of mountains which intervened between Greytown and Mosquitia practically prevents the conveyance of goods by land.

But that if the opinion expressed in our Report was to be understood as applying to goods brought to Greytown in transit by sea to the Reserve, that opinion was in conflict with the views hitherto acted upon by Her Majesty's Government.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we intended the opinion quoted above to be understood as applying to goods brought to Greytown in transit by sea to the Mosquito Reserve, or only to goods intended for conveyance thither by land.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that it was proposed to submit the question of the Greytown duties, and all other questions between Great Britain and Nicaragua, arising out of the Treaty of Managua, to arbitration, and that our opinion on the point then submitted to us will probably be required for the purpose of preparing the case to be laid before the Arbitrator.

That the papers previously submitted to us were again sent therewith, together with some others lately received.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Justifiable, whether goods are conveyed to Mosquito by land or by sea.

That, by force of the last sentence in Article VII, the Nicaraguan Government has the right to put an import duty on goods brought into the port of Greytown, and destined for consumption within the territory of the Republic, whether they are conveyed to the place of consumption by land or by sea.

The expression in the Article VII "from sea to sea" apparently means from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Landing of ammunition from British vessel "Emmeline" at Greytown prevented by German ship of war "Medusa."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 18th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the despatches inclosed, as marked in the margin,* reporting the proceedings of the Commander of the German ship of war "Medusa" in preventing, under a threat of confiscation, the landing of some ammunition from the British schooner "Emmeline" while lying in Greytown harbour.

That a dispute had for some time past existed between the Governments of Germany and Nicaragua, arising out of an outrage committed on the German Consul at Leon, and the "Medusa" had arrived at Greytown to enforce compliance with the demands of Germany.

Hostilities apprehended.

That the Commander of the "Medusa" refused to allow the ammunition in question to be landed, on the ground that hostilities might break out at any moment between the two countries, and he stated that he was ready to hold himself responsible for the consequences.

That the master of the "Emmeline" subsequently agreed to give up the ammunition to the German Commander on receipt of an undertaking on his part to pay the value.

War not declared.

That war not having been declared, the action of the German Commander would seem to have been premature and unwarranted by international law.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proceedings of the Commander of the "Medusa" in that case call for a remonstrance on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

German action illegal.

That the proceedings of the Commander of the "Medusa" were illegal.

Remonstrate and claim indemnity.

In our opinion, therefore, Her Majesty's Government may properly call the attention of the German Government, or German Minister in this country, to the facts, and, in addition, request that the persons, if any, who may have suffered loss from the proceedings of the Commander of the "Medusa," be fully indemnified.

"Cadiz" hulk at Chinkiang. Customs privileges stopped by China.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 7th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 11th ultimo on the case of the hulk "Cadiz" at Chinkiang, he was directed by your Lordship to submit, for our consideration, the draft of a proposed reply to the communications of the Chinese Envoy on the subject of the controversy which had arisen touching the action of the Chinese authorities, in demanding the removal of the hulk without a previous inquiry before British authorities as to the necessity for her removal, and in withdrawing certain customs facilities from the hulk, in consequence of the owners having refused to comply with such demand.

---

* Mr. Thomas, No. 8, Political; Mr. Graham, No. 57.

That the draft of the proposed reply then submitted to us had been prepared by Sir Thomas Wade, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take it into consideration in conjunction with our Report on the case, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it might properly be adopted as it stood, or required any modification.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot concur in proposed reply to Chinese Envoy.

That we have very carefully considered the proposed reply to the communications of the Chinese Envoy prepared by Sir Thomas Wade.

China is in the right.

This reply cannot, we submit, properly be adopted. The opinion which we formed upon the effect of the Treaty obligations of China and upon the facts was that the Chinese authorities in the whole transaction were in the right.

Sir Thomas Wade, however, in his reply goes into a justification of the proceedings of the owners of the hulk "Cadiz," and thus indirectly throws, if not the whole, yet a great part of the blame upon the Chinese.

The facts (with the exception, of course, of the cause of damage to the wall) being admitted, it seems to us needless to recite the different statements, as Sir Thomas does in his reply.

We much doubt whether it is worth while to say what Her Majesty's Government would have done had the circumstances been different.

Answer that Her Majesty's Government will not support claim of China Steam Company.

We submit, also, it is not prudent to raise questions of extra-territoriality, or to go with any matter beyond that which is the immediate subject of discussion.

We find it, for the same reasons, impossible to modify the proposed reply.

And we respectfully suggest that the Chinese Envoy would be best answered by simply informing him that upon an examination into the whole facts as they appear in the papers communicated Her Majesty's Government does not intend to support the claim for indemnity made by the British merchants representing the China Steam Company.

Inclosure in No. 12.

*Draft of Letter to Kuo Ta Jen.

Draft letter to Kuo Ta Jen.

Sir, December , 1877.

WITH reference to the correspondence on record regarding the hulk "Cadiz," stationed at Chinkiang, I have the honour to state to you that the whole of the papers have been carefully considered by the Law Officers of the Crown. Her Majesty's Government understand the chief facts of the case to be as follows:—

History of the "Cadiz" case.

The foreign trade at the port of Chinkiang appears to be carried on almost exclusively by steamers, which, from the rapidity of the current, could not load or discharge with sufficient dispatch without the assistance of certain hulks or store ships which are moored along the river bank. The "Cadiz" was one of these hulks.

The British merchants representing the China Steam Company, the British firm to which the "Cadiz" belongs, having received notice from the Harbour-master at Chinkiang that the hulk must be removed, objected. They appear, in the first instance, to have understood this direction to be absolute, and to be based on the assumption that their hulk was causing damage to the retaining wall of the river bank. A discussion ensued, at an early stage of which the merchants were invited to consent to the removal of the hulk, merely as a temporary measure, in order that it might be ascertained whether she were the cause of the damage alleged or not. To this the owners also objected. They contended not only that the damage to the wall was not the consequence of the hulk's position, but that if there were ground for such a charge it ought properly to be investigated by the British Consul before the hulk were interfered with. Her removal would seriously prejudice their business.

The Superintendent of Customs declined to bring the case before a Consular Court, and having threatened that if, within a given time, the hulk were not removed, certain facilities, without the enjoyment of which these hulks become useless, would be withdrawn, did eventually withdraw those facilities.

* An amended letter was sent on February 6, 1878. (See MS. correspondence, "case of the 'Cadiz' hulk.')

This step occasioned a considerable loss to the owners of the hulk, for which they now seek to be indemnified. On the other part, the Chinese Government continues to maintain that the hulk, which still lies in her old berth, is really occasioning the mischief originally complained of, and to require removal of the hulk in order that the truth may be ascertained.

The best professional opinions obtainable on the spot have been taken as to the influence of the hulk upon the current. There is a serious conflict between these opinions; but upon the value of the evidence either for or against the hulk, it is not proposed at present to pronounce. The Chinese Government being alone responsible for the conservancy of its waters, it appears to Her Majesty's Government but reasonable that, if any doubt existed as to the fact in dispute, the hulk should have been removed at the instance of the Superintendent of Customs, pending inquiry, and in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government it is to be regretted that her owners were not advised to consent to her temporary removal when this was first required of them. Had they been able, after the survey had taken place, to prove themselves aggrieved, Her Majesty's Government would have been in a position to recover indemnity for whatever loss they might show to have been sustained. Under the circumstances, it is not the intention of Her Majesty's Government to support their claim for indemnity, and instructions will be sent to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Peking to direct that the Harbour-master at Chinkiang be at once authorized to assign the hulk "Cadiz" another berth until the necessary investigation shall be completed.

The decision which I have now the honour to communicate to you will not, I trust, be misunderstood by the Chinese Government. It must not be taken as implying any abandonment whatever of the claim to exclusive jurisdiction over British subjects and their property in China, heretofore maintained by Her Majesty's Government. Were that right less explicitly declared than it is in the existing Treaties between China and foreign nations, it would be incumbent* upon Her Majesty's Government, either alone or in concert with the other Treaty Powers, at once to secure the addition of such provisions as would place it beyond dispute.

These remarks appear to me called for by the action taken at Chinkiang in the case of the hulk "Cadiz," by the Superintendent of Customs. The reasonableness of his demand that the hulk should be temporarily removed is perfectly admitted; but [the propriety of†] the course pursued by him when the owners appealed to their Consul does not appear to Her Majesty's Government equally capable of defence. To compel them to remove the hulk, her "facilities,"‡ as they are termed, that is to say, the arrangements under which alone the hulk was enabled to do her business, were withdrawn. In other words, the business of her owners was annihilated; a tremendous penalty, in the infliction of which the Chinese authority virtually assumed the right to decide that the British subject was a wrong-doer, and to punish him for the wrong he was alleged to have done. It is much to be deplored that before a measure so extreme was resorted to, the case was not referred to Her Majesty's Government for consideration.

Nothing would more sincerely gratify Her Majesty's Government than to perceive that the laws and usages of the Chinese Empire had been brought into such accord with those of foreign nations as to justify surrender of the right to ex-territorial jurisdiction in China, but until the necessary modification has been achieved there is no right which, in the interests of peace, it will be the duty of Her Majesty's Government more watchfully to maintain.

for instance, as Zanzibar, Madagascar, Turkey, &c., the marriage of a British subject solemnized in such countries by a priest in holy orders would be upheld by English Courts of Law as a valid marriage.

Citing precedents. Marriages in heathen countries.

That the question whether a marriage solemnized between British subjects in Japan by a clergyman of the Church of England, but not under the Act 4 Geo. IV, cap. 91 (Marriages in Embassies or Missions), or the Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68 (Consular Marriages), would be held valid by English Courts, was raised by Sir H. Parkes in his despatch No. 143 of the 29th August, 1876, and he transmitted therein, among other papers, a memorandum by Mr. Wilkinson, attached to Her Majesty's Consulate at Kanagawa, containing an elaborate argument tending to show that the common law of England, as it existed before Lord Hardwicke's Act, would not apply to such a marriage, and that it would consequently be void.

That the Order in Council for China and Japan, however, by section 5, declared that Her Majesty's jurisdiction in those countries should be exercised in conformity with the common and statute law of England, as far as circumstances admitted.

That a similar provision existed in the Order in Council for the Levant, and as, in our Report of the 18th October, 1876, we advised that a marriage celebrated between British subjects in Turkey by a Roman Catholic priest, according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, would be held valid in this country, it was not deemed necessary to trouble us with the papers above referred to, especially as the contemplated marriage was shortly afterwards solemnized under the Consular Marriages Act.

That we would observe, however, that the same question had again been raised in the inclosed letter from Mr. W. H. Fazan, who desired to be informed whether a marriage between two British subjects solemnized at Shanghae, in China, by a clergyman of the Church of England in the English Church, and not under the Imperial Acts above referred to, would be valid.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether Mr. Fazan's inquiry might be answered in the affirmative.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

The marriage will be valid.
Not annulled by fact of not being under the Act.

That Mr. Fazan may, in our opinion, be answered that the fact of the marriage not having taken place at the Embassy or Consulate at Shanghae will not annul the marriage in a legal point of view, but that such marriage would be a good and valid marriage.

Supreme Court. China and Japan.

Powers of delegating duties to Assistant Judge, Law Secretary, &c.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th March last, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit the correspondence, together with a memorandum thereon,* relating to the discharge of judicial functions in Japan by Mr. Wilkinson, in his capacity of Acting Law Secretary to Her Majesty's Supreme Court for China and Japan, and to arrangements which had been made for holding the Supreme Court in Japan whilst the Acting Chief Judge had been holding the Supreme Court at Shanghae.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour Lord Derby with our opinion on the following questions:—

Simultaneous sittings in China and Japan, &c.

1. Is it competent to the Chief Judge, under Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan of the 9th March, 1865, to delegate for hearing and determination by the Assistant Judge or Law Secretary any class of cases in general terms, or is his power under sections 14, 15, 19, and 21 limited to the delegationof particular cases nominatim?

* Sir H. Parkes, No. 32, Confidential, October 21, 1876; No. 35, Confidential, October 30, 1876; to Sir H. Parkes, No. 35, Confidential, December 20, 1876; No. 36, December 20, 1876; Mr. Goodwin, No. 5, November 1; Sir H. Parkes, No. 61, Confidential, December 31, 1877; No. 7, January 24, 1878; Memorandum by Sir J. Pauncefote, March 7, 1878.

2. Can the Supreme Court sit at the same time in two places, the Chief Judge presiding over the Court at one place and deputing the Assistant Judge or the Law Secretary to preside over the Court at another place; or can the Chief Judge alone hold sittings of the Supreme Court "all over China and Japan," under section 37?

3. Was the authority given by the late Acting Chief Judge (Mr. Goodwin) to Mr. Wilkinson, as Acting Law Secretary, to hear and determine "all summary civil and criminal cases arising in the Supreme Court (at Kanagawa), and such other cases as the Acting Judge might specially refer to him," warranted by the Order in Council?

4. Was the arrangement whereby, on the departure of the Acting Chief Judge from Japan, Mr. Wilkinson was left as Acting Law Secretary in charge of the Supreme Court at Kanagawa, warranted by the Order in Council, and, if so, what are his powers as regards the trial of civil and criminal cases?

5. Having regard to the terms of section 18, is the appointment of Mr. Hall to act as Registrar of the Supreme Court at Kanagawa warranted by the Order in Council?

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state that a new Chief Judge of the Supreme Court had recently been appointed, and was then on his way to China, and that it was important that instructions on the subject of the arrangements which had given rise to the above questions should be dispatched as soon as possible. That Lord Derby would therefore be obliged if we would favour him with our report at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to the commands of the Earl of Derby we have the honour to report—

That clauses 14 and 15 refer to the Assistant Judge, clauses 19 and 21 to the Law Secretary. The wording of the two sets of clauses is almost the same, and, in our opinion, the Assistant Judge or Law Secretary can hear only the cases, civil or criminal, which are specially referred by the Judge from time to time. This being so, we are further of opinion that the Judge cannot, under the Order in Council, delegate for hearing and determination any class of cases in general terms, but only particular cases nominatim.

We think this opinion is strengthened by a reference to that part of the Order in Council which provides for the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Provincial Court beyond the district of the Consulate of Shanghae. (Section 35 and sections 36 to 80.)

2. The Supreme Court may, in our opinion, specially refer matters and questions in civil cases, and in criminal cases originally instituted in, or brought before the Supreme Court, to the Assistant Judge. (Clauses 14 and 15.)

And for the dispatch of urgent business, the Judge of the Supreme Court may refer similar matters and cases to the Law Secretary. (Clauses 19, 21.)

And, in our opinion, clause 37 does not require that the Chief Judge alone should hold sittings of the Supreme Court all over China and Japan.

3. We think the authority given by the late Acting Judge to Mr. Wilkinson as Acting Law Secretary to hear and determine "all summary, civil, and criminal cases arising in the Supreme Court at Kanagawa" was not warranted by the Order in Council; but an authority to hear and determine cases specially referred to the Law Secretary by the Acting Judge would be warranted by the Order in Council.

4. We think the arrangement made when, on the departure of the Acting Chief Judge from Japan, under which Mr. Wilkinson was left as Acting Law Secretary in charge of the Supreme Court at Kanagawa, was not warranted by the Order in Council.

5. The appointment of a fit person, in this case of Mr. Hall, to act as Registrar of the Supreme Court at Kanagawa, might, in certain cases (for instance, where the Law Secretary is properly sitting as Judge), be fairly brought within clause 22 of the Order in Council; but, as the authority to Mr. Wilkinson to hear and determine cases purporting to have been referred to him was not warranted, and as Mr. Wilkinson was neither absent, nor ill, nor employed temporarily in any capacity other than that of Law Secretary, the appointment of Mr. Hall to act as Registrar was, in the circumstances, not warranted by the Order in Council.

My Lord, Temple, May 13, 1878.

Foreign jurisdiction.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in a letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote of the 23rd March last, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying printed copies of correspondence, as marked in the margin,* which had taken place between the Foreign Office and Mr. Reilly, who was engaged in the preparation of a new Order in Council for China and Japan.

Proposed Act for extending powers of administering justice.

That we would observe that, with a view of facilitating the administration of justice in Her Majesty's Consular Courts in those countries, and generally in all foreign countries where Her Majesty enjoyed exterritorial jurisdiction, it had been suggested that the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts should be supplemented by a further Act enabling the Queen, by Order in Council, to confer on foreign jurisdiction Courts any of the powers relating to the administration of justice which were vested in Colonial Courts by various Acts of Parliament, and also empowering Her Majesty to provide for the administration of justice among British subjects in any place out of Her Majesty's dominions not being within the jurisdiction of any civilized Power.

Places not within jurisdiction of any civilized Power, &c.

That other enactments were also suggested, the precise nature of which was shortly explained in the inclosed correspondence; and to request that we would favour his Lordship with a Report thereon, and also inform his Lordship whether, in our opinion, a Bill to carry out the proposed legislation might properly be introduced in Parliament.

In obedience to the commands contained in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter we have the honour to report—

No objection.

That, in our opinion, a Bill to carry out the proposed legislation may properly be introduced into Parliament; but we suggest for consideration whether such Bill should not repeal the existing Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, and re-enact such Statutes and contain such fresh clauses as may now be required, so that all the provisions respecting the Queen's foreign jurisdiction should be under one Act and the necessary Orders in Council.

We have, &c.

My Lord, Temple, June 5, 1878.

Panama Railroad Company.
Complaint of Atlas Steam-ship Company against, for refusing through bills of lading.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 14th ultimo, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, papers relating to a complaint by the Atlas Steam-ship Company against the Panama Railway Company, in respect of which they claimed the intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

That their complaint was that the Railway Company had withdrawn from them the privilege of through bills of lading in respect of merchandise destined for transmission across the Isthmus of Panama, a privilege accorded to other Steam-ship Companies.

* To Mr. Reilly, December 22, 1877; Mr. Reilly, January 17 and March 2, 1878.

That they contended that that proceeding, which was most injurious to their interests, was in violation of the obligations imposed on the Railway Company by their contract with the Columbian Government; and they urged that, considering the great national importance of the question involved, Her Majesty's Government were bound to exercise their influence with the Columbian Government with a view to procuring the redress of the grievance of which they complained.

That Mr. Lister was to refer us, in the first place, to the inclosed printed correspondence on the subject, which passed between the Foreign Office and the Managers of the Atlas Steam-ship Company, and also to the correspondence between Mr. Archibald, Her Majesty's Consul-General at New York, and the Panama Railway Company, contained in Mr. Archibald's despatch No. 5 of the 3rd December last.

Equality claimed with American companies.

That the representations addressed by Her Majesty's Consul-General to the Panama Railway Company having proved unavailing, the Managers of the Atlas Steam-ship Company had appealed again to Her Majesty's Government, and, in their letter of the 2nd ultimo, they transmitted a printed Case, showing the grounds upon which they claimed "that Her Majesty's Government should require the Government of the United States of Columbia to place the Atlas Steam-ship Company, and all other British subjects, on an equal footing with American Companies in regard to the traffic across the Isthmus of Panama by the Panama Railroad Company."

That your Lordship was informed that that printed Case had been prepared on behalf of the Company by Mr. Cohen, Q.C., and that Mr. Lister was to request that we would take all the accompanying papers into consideration, and report to your Lordship whether we concurred in the views expressed in the case as to the obligations of the Panama Railway Company under their contract with the Columbian Government, and as to the claim of the Atlas Steam-ship Company to the intervention of Her Majesty's Government for the purpose therein indicated.

That the matter was one of considerable importance, and your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the above questions at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the question is whether the Panama Railroad Company is bound to grant through bill of lading privileges to all using their line if they grant those privileges to one Company.

The Railway Company say that in the exercise of their rights they may appoint whom they please as their agents, and that those agents are the persons who shall grant the through bills of lading.

But if the Company are bound under any contract to grant equal privileges to all, they cannot evade that obligation by authorizing an agent to grant or withhold the privilege.

The argument put forward by the President of the Panama Railroad Company, in his letter to Consul-General Archibald (30th November, 1877), so far as it is based upon the right of the Company to appoint agencies with or without power to issue through bills of lading as may best serve the interests of the Company, is therefore unsound if taken alone.

The Vice-President, in his letter to Messrs. Leech (19th November, 1877), however, takes larger ground.

1. That the Company perform their whole duty when they receive goods or passengers for transportation without preference, and deliver the same, as consigned, at the other end of their line.

That the Company are not bound to make business arrangements of any kind, or have any understanding with persons or commercial lines trading with the isthmus.

2. That the Company are authorized to own, run, or have interests in, vessels on either ocean, and have a general right to increase the business of the line, through agencies for the sale of through bills of lading, by agents on connecting lines.

Referring to the contract of 1867 (the now subsisting contract)—

By the Preamble the work of the railroad is so to be perfected that it may better answer the necessities of the commerce of the world.

By Article 6 the Company may collect such tolls as they may deem proper to establish.

By Article 13 the railroad enterprise is to be esteemed [sic] of public utility.

By Article 15 the Tariffs shall be fixed and modified as the Company may deem best.

Article 16 provides for the transportation of foreign mails gratis and free to all nations.

1878

Article 25 binds the Company to transport at certain prices to be fixed.

So far, there is nothing in the words of the contract, nor arising from the monopoly granted to the Company, which binds the Company to grant through bills of lading to all persons using their line if they grant such bills to any particular persons.

The Treaty between the United States of Columbia and Great Britain of December 1866 does not, under the most-favoured-nation clause, touch the question at issue; and the contract of 1867 does not derogate, as seems to be suggested in the printed case (p. 4), from the rights and privileges conceded to British subjects under the Treaty of 1866. Still, although the words of the contract may not control the action of the Company, "considerations of justice and public policy and the duty to receive goods and passengers for transportation without preference" may have that effect.

As Railway Company profess to treat all alike,

And, since it is the admitted (see p. 6 of printed Case) "policy and duty of the Company that no charges or conditions shall be imposed upon the traffic passing over its road, and all legitimate facilities connected therewith should be open to the citizens and subjects of all nations without discrimination;"

"In accordance with which rule," it is added, "the citizens, subjects, and vessels of all countries have been, and are, placed on a precise equality, and this rule will be continued under all circumstances;"

And, since it is clear that the privilege of a "through bill of lading," granted to a United States' Steam-ship line, and withdrawn from the Atlas line, causes great delay to and throws increased cost upon the latter, thereby giving greater facilities to, and making a great discrimination in favour of the United States Steam-ship Company to the prejudice of the Atlas line, and thus destroying the precise equality between the vessels of these lines;

Her Majesty's Government may urge that the case be brought before Columbian Tribunals.

In our opinion, your Lordship may use the influence of Her Majesty's Government with the Columbian Government to the extent of urging the Columbian Government to bring the grievance complained of by the Atlas Steam-ship Company, and the question raised on the understanding and fulfilment of the contract of 1867, in relation to that grievance, before the Tribunals of the Columbian Union, as provided by the substituted Article 33, at page 47 of the printed Contract.

The Report of the Committee (inclosed in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd ultimo) upon the powers of the Legislature in the United States, and the cases and authorities and general principles referred to in the Report, do not, we think, affect the powers of the Panama Railway Company and the Government of the States of Columbia.

We have, &c.

Order in Council, and Commission and Instructions to High Commissioner.

I AM honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to me the draft of an Order in Council, constituting the office of High Commissioner and Commander-in-chief over the Island of Cyprus, and making provision for the government of that island; and also the drafts of a Commission and Instructions under the Royal Sign Manual and Signet, the former appointing Lieutenant-General Sir Garnet Wolseley, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., to be Her Majesty's High Commissioner, and the latter regulating the exercises of the powers and authorities conferred upon that office. And that the above drafts are accompanied by an explanatory memorandum, and with copies of the documents therein referred to and noted in the margin.* Sir Julian Pauncefote also requested that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to whether the drafts of the proposed Order in Council, Royal Commission, and Instructions are sufficient in law to carry out the objects indicated in the memorandum, and may properly be laid before the Queen for Her Majesty's approval.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

Approving. As to members of Legislative Council being natives of Cyprus.

That inasmuch as the urgency of the matter prevents any opportunity of communicating with the Attorney-General and Dr. Deane, I have the honour to report my own opinion that the drafts of the proposed Order in Council, Royal Commission, and Instructions are sufficient in law to carry out the objects indicated in the memorandum, and may properly be laid before the Queen for Her Majesty's approval; but I would suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, whether the provision at the end of paragraph 6 of the draft Order in Council, that the unofficial members of the Legislative Council shall be natives of the island, is appropriate to the peculiar circumstances of the Island of Cyprus.

Sir Julian Pauncefote also stated that he had to request that we would take the papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to whether the drafts of the proposed Order in Council, Royal Commission and Instructions, were sufficient in law to carry out the objects indicated in the memorandum, and might properly be laid before the Queen for Her Majesty's approval.

In compliance with your Lordship's wishes signified in the above-mentioned letter, I have the honour (writing for myself, for I have not had an opportunity of learning the views of the Solicitor-General and Dr. Deane) to report—

Approving with an amendment.

That I have carefully considered the draft of the Order in Council, Royal Commission, and Instructions in question. That I would suggest that in clause 6 of the Order in Council, line 10, after the word "Signet," the words, "or shall be provisionally appointed, subject to Her Majesty's will and pleasure, by the High Commissioner, in pursuance of any instruction or instructions, warrant or warrants, under such Sign Manual or Signet as aforesaid," should be inserted.

If this alteration in the draft Order in Council is made, I think the proposed Order in Council, Royal Commission, and Instructions will be sufficient in law to carry out the objects indicated in the memorandum, and may properly be laid before the Queen for Her Majesty's approval.

My dear Sir Julian, Colthurst, Clitheroe, September 12, 1878.

Order in Council, &c. Dr. Deane's Report. Turkish law in Cyprus.

I INCLOSE a letter touching the Cyprus Order in Council, &c., which I have this morning received from Deane.

I cannot say that I share in the doubts and difficulties which present themselves to Deane's mind.

I take it that the Turkish law will prevail in Cyprus until it is altered by the exercise of the powers conferred by the Order in Council, and I do not think that the High Commissioner can get into any trouble by administering the Turkish law, and inflicting punishments prescribed by it, if he takes care not to do anything contrary to the spirit of our laws; for example, by authorizing punishment by torture.

As to granting pardons and commuting punishments, there is ample power given to the Commissioner to exercise the prerogative of mercy.

With regard to the Executive Council, I do not see any objection to some of the members of this Council being natives of Cyprus, especially when we consider that the province of the Council will be simply to advise.

Foreign Consular jurisdiction under Treaties with Turkey.

There is a point to which Deane does not allude, and to which I did not think it necessary to refer in the Report I sent in yesterday. That is—What will be the powers of the High Commissioner, under the Order in Council, so far as concerns the subjects of Powers having Conventions or Treaties with the Porte giving jurisdiction to the Consuls of such Powers in Turkish territory? In my view, the Sultan cannot—not without making an absolute cession of Cyprus—confer upon the Queen a more extensive power of legislating than he possesses himself, and therefore the additional Treaty does not enable Her Majesty to make a law which will have the effect of abrogating any Convention between the Porte and any foreign State.

In order that Deane's views may be formally before Lord Salisbury I have copied the Report he proposes, and have signed it in his name.

I have, however, not been able to recite the covering letter, as I find that I returned it to you. Perhaps you will be kind enough to get one of your clerks to introduce the usual recital in the blank space I have left.

I have not heard from the Solicitor-General. I presume he must have sent in his Report to the Foreign Office.

Dr. Deane to the Attorney-General.

Achnagonal'n, Grantown, N.B., September 10, 1878.

My dear Attorney-General,

Dr. Deane's opinion.

I HAVE been through these Cyprus papers.

I wish that we had more time to consider them.

As to Turkish or British law, &c. (Reference to Sir T. Picton's case).

For instance, what punishment for crimes is to be inflicted. You will remember Sir Thomas Picton's case, in one of the West India Islands, who got into trouble for punishing under the Spanish law. Is the Governor of Cyprus to sanction Turkish punishments? To pardon or commute? To follow the common law of England, or that of the island?

Executive Council. Native members.

Then I doubt very much the wisdom of the proposed constitution of the Executive Council, so far as the native members are concerned.

Proposed Report. (See No. 20).

With these and some other difficulties in my mind, with very little time to think them out, and without the opportunity of our meeting, I should suggest that we report—

That the draft of the proposed Order in Council, Royal Commission, and Instructions are sufficient in law to carry out the objects indicated in the memorandum, and may properly be laid before the Queen for Her Majesty's approval.

In so advising your Lordship, we have considered merely the present emergency requiring the island to be brought in some shape under British government, and we think that it will be necessary to consider, at no distant time, the state of the law, civil and criminal, as it now exists in Cyprus, and what modifications those laws should receive so as to bring them into accord with British rule.

And we doubt whether the constitution of the Executive Council, so far as relates to native members, will not have to be reconsidered.

Will you notify this Report as you think right, and send it in for this hurried Council, signing for me?

Sincerely yours,

Inclosure in No. 21.

Memorandum on Turkish Capitulations with Foreign Countries as affecting Cyprus.

Capitulations in Cyprus.

IN considering this question, I do not think we can look on Cyprus as in any sense acquired by conquest. It is quite true that we might have taken it by force, and that had we done so we should have held it free and clear of all obligations attaching on Turkey. But we did not take it by force, and we acquired it, deliberately, and for obvious reasons, by an arrangement which was described to be the reverse of alienation, and still more of forcible alienation. We could not, in my opinion, now contend that this arrangement carried with it the incidents of conquest.

England has no rights of conquest.

Same powers that Turkey had.

2. We must take the arrangement, then, as it really is. The Porte has given us every power in and over Cyprus which it possessed, but we have got nothing more than what the Porte could give. And we have this for a limited time, the Porte retaining the reversion.

3. In order to appreciate the exact effect of this state of things on the Capitulations, it would be desirable to have a careful analysis of the Capitulations; for under that term, I fancy, are included provisions as to Courts and Judicature, and also fiscal arrangements, such as exemptions from duties, and privileges ejusdem generis.

Foreign extra-territorial jurisdiction.

4. As regards the provisions as to judicature, including the extra-territorial privileges of Consuls and subjects of foreign Powers, I do not imagine that if we were to institute a satisfactory Tribunal for the exercise of civil and criminal jurisdiction in the island, with a proper Code, foreign nations would decline to submit to it, or desire anything better. If they did demur, I think there would be fair ground to contend that Capitulations, so far as they relate to jurisdiction and procedure, and set up an imperium in imperio, are a device invented to meet the anomaly and inconveniences arising in the case of subjects of Christian States trading and sojourning in a Mussulman country, and that their raison d'être ceases where the legislation and administration is no longer in Mussulman hands.

Argument may be used against.

Exemptions, &c. under Capitulations cannot be done away with.

5. But this does not apply to stipulations as to duties, exemptions, Tariffs, &c. As to these, Capitulations are Treaties, and Turkey could not terminate its Treaties by assigning a part of its territory to be administered by England. It may, however, be that, on examination, the stipulations will be found to point to specific duties, and to grant exemptions as to them; and that, under our legislative power, we may so alter the whole system of Customs as to make the Capitulations no longer applicable.

My Lord,

Cypriote accused of killing Ottoman subject. Whether amenable to jurisdiction of Alexandria Consular Court.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 28th October ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying telegram from Her Majesty's Acting Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, informing your Lordship that a native of Cyprus, accused of being concerned in the death of an Ottoman subject, had been brought before the Consular Court of Alexandria, and asking whether he was to be considered as amenable to its jurisdiction.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was also to transmit to us as bearing on the question:—

Copy of the Convention of 4th June last assigning Cyprus to this country.

Copy of an Agreement giving Her Majesty the Queen legislative and other powers with respect to that island.

A memorandum drawn up in the Foreign Office on a telegram, also inclosed, from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, inquiring whether natives of Cyprus were entitled to British protection beyond the limits of their island, and your Lordship's reply to that telegram.

Sir Julian Pauncefote further stated that a collection of the Commercial Treaties between Great Britain and Turkey, at p. 39, of which would be found the Xth Article of the Treaty of the 5th January, 1809, stipulating that British protection should not be granted to Ottoman subjects without the permission of the Porte.

That, lastly, a copy of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, regulating the exercise of Her Majesty's jurisdiction in the dominions of the Porte; that we would observe that by sections 16 and 262 of that Order provision was made for the registration of persons enjoying British protection, and for the exercise of criminal jurisdiction over them.

That it did not appear that the accused in this case had ever obtained registration as a protected person.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the answer which should be given to Mr. Lascelles' inquiry.

Further despatches were forwarded to us in a note from Mr. Philip Currie, dated the 5th November instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cypriotes are not protected subjects of the Queen beyond Cyprus. Consular Court has no jurisdiction.

That, in our opinion, natives of the Island of Cyprus are not protected subjects of the Queen in Egypt, or in other parts of the Ottoman dominions beyond Cyprus, or in foreign countries, and beyond the limits of the island, and the native of Cyprus accused of being concerned in the murder of an Ottoman subject is not amenable to the jurisdiction of the Consular Court in Egypt.

We form this opinion upon the terms of the Convention and the Agreement of the 14th August.

If, however, the Ottoman subject has been, by the permission of the Porte, expressly placed under British protection, and registered under Article 16 of the Order in Council, we are of opinion that he is amenable to the Consular jurisdiction.

My Lord,

Deportation Ordinance.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that Sir Garnet Wolseley, Her Majesty's High Commissioner for Cyprus, was apprehensive that attempts might be made by some turbulent characters of Greek and Levantine nationality to create political agitation in the island, and he was desirous of being armed with the necessary legal powers to deal summarily with such persons, and to expel them from the island.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the printed draft of an Ordinance empowering the High Commissioner, with the advice of the Executive Council, to prohibit persons whom he should believe to be dangerous to the peace and good order of the island from residing therein, and containing such provisions for enforcing the prohibition as appeared sufficient to meet the necessities of the case.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the proposed measure might properly be laid before the Legislative Council of Cyprus.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose copies of certain Ordinances of the Colonies of Hong Kong and Fiji on the same subject, which contained analogous provisions; also copies of the Order in Council establishing the Legislature of Cyprus and of the Royal Instructions to the High Commissioner, and of the Conventions between Great Britain and the Porte relating to the British occupation of the island.

That it was desirable that the draft Ordinance, if, in our opinion, it presented no objections in point of law, should be dispatched to Sir Garnet Wolseley by the mail which leaves London on Friday, the 6th instant, and that your Lordship would therefore be glad if we should be able to transmit our Report thereon in time for that purpose.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not inconsistent with Order in Council, &c.

That, in our opinion, the proposed measure is one which may be laid before the Legislative Council of Cyprus not inconsistently with the Order in Council establishing the Legislature of Cyprus, the Royal Instructions to the High Commissioner, and the Conventions between Great Britain and the Porte.

1878

Grants too arbitrary a power.

But the measure, in many respects, goes beyond the precedents at Hong Kong and Fiji, and gives the High Commissioner very great and arbitrary powers, which, we think, should not be placed in his hands.

Deportation without trial, as to.

The power to remove, without trial, should be confined, in our opinion, to persons who may have come to Cyprus without ostensible business.

Deportation after trial and conviction.

In the case of other persons, if it is deemed desirable to provide that they shall be removed from the island, the power to remove should be conferred only after they have been tried for, and convicted of, some offence.

Deportation Ordinance amended.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 4th instant respecting the draft of a proposed Ordinance for the expulsion from Cyprus of persons believed to be dangerous to the peace and good order of the island, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of an amended Ordinance for that purpose.

Giving power to Legislative Council instead of to High Commissioner.

That it would be seen that the Ordinance would provide that dangerous persons might be prohibited from remaining in the island by a resolution of the Legislative Council, whereas the draft Ordinance submitted to us in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 3rd instant vested the power of such prohibition in the High Commissioner with the advice of the Executive Council.

That the papers inclosed in the former letter were returned to us, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take them into our consideration, together with the draft of the amended Ordinance then transmitted to us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the amendments therein made disposed of the objections which the original draft appeared to us to present.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Better, but still too arbitrary.

That though the amendments to the Ordinance considerably modify the objections we entertained to it in its original form, it may be a question whether the Ordinance, even now, does not confer too arbitrary an authority.

My Lord,

Closing of Puerto Plata to foreign trade by Decree.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from the British Vice-Consul at Santo Domingo* forwarding a Decree issued by the Provisional Government of that Republic ordering the closing of the harbour of Puerto Plata to foreign commerce.

That that Decree had not been officially notified to Her Majesty's Government, and was perhaps intended to operate as a Municipal Act only; but, from the terms of the Decree, it would seem to be intended that the closing of the ports should be enforced by the rules of blockade.

Port in hands of rebels.

That your Lordship would therefore be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether, the port of Puerto Plata being in the hands of the rebels, it was competent to the Government of Santo Domingo to close it to foreign commerce otherwise than by establishing a belligerent blockade, duly notified to neutral Powers and effectively maintained. That, if we should be of opinion that the port could be closed to foreign commerce by force only of the Decree, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to advise your Lordship as to whether foreign vessels arriving at the port after the dates specified in the Decree could be legally seized and condemned, or, as stated in the Decree, would be liable to the "laws of blockade."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Closing is equivalent to blockade, and must be duly notified and maintained.

That, taking the words of the Decree, we are of opinion that the act of closing the port to foreign commerce is a belligerent act, and must be taken to mean a blockade in the proper sense of the word, and requiring due notice and efficient maintenance before vessels arriving at the port could be legally seized and condemned.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received October 26.)

Temple, October 25, 1878.

My Lord,

Dominican Decree respecting confiscation of vessels carrying contraband of war. British protest.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd September, 1878, stating that on the 4th July, 1876, our opinion was requested by the Earl of Derby as to the steps that should be taken by Her Majesty's Government with regard to a Decree issued by the Government of Santo Domingo, prohibiting the introduction into the Republic of arms and munitions of war, and ordering the confiscation of all vessels discharging such articles, or having such articles on board, under the circumstances specified in the said law.

That in our Report of the 15th July, 1876, we advised his Lordship that the 1st Article of the Decree, namely, the prohibition to introduce arms, &c., was within the competence of the Dominican Government, but that the remaining Articles, ordering the confiscation of vessels carrying the forbidden articles, were contrary to the rules and practice of civilized nations, and we referred to the general rule as to the penalty for carrying "contraband of war."

As to existence of a state of war.

That we added that we assumed, as the basis of our opinion, that a state of war existed. That there was room for some doubt whether the actual state of affairs in Santo Domingo amounted to a "state of war" in the sense in which that expression was used in our Report. That undoubtedly there were at least two parties in the Republic carrying on hostilities against each other, but that state of things was of very frequent occurrence in the Dominican Republic, and the contest going on in 1876 was not considered to call for any formal recognition on the part of Her Majesty's Government, nor, as far as Her Majesty's Government were aware, on the part of any other Government.

That it was, however, considered advisable, in view of the danger with which British vessels were threatened by the Decree, to act in the sense of our Report without further delay; and accordingly notice was given in the "London Gazette" of the 1st Article of the Decree, and Her Majesty's Representative accredited to the Dominican Republic was instructed by telegraph to protest against Article 2 to state that the provisions of that Article were illegal, and that confiscation of British vessels under it would not be submitted to; and to warn the Dominican Government that they would be held responsible for the seizure of any British vessel under the Article in question.

* Mr. Coën, No. 3, Political, March 15, 1878.

Seizure of Dutch vessel "Havannah Packet."

That after that nothing further was heard of the Decree until March last, when the Netherlands Minister at this Court asked for information as to the course taken by Her Majesty's Government in 1876, which information was furnished to him.

That on the 5th June this year the British Vice-Consul at Santo Domingo reported that a Dutch brig, "Havannah Packet," had been seized within Dominican waters and confiscated by the Dominican authorities under Article 2 of the Decree of 1876.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to state that he was to point out that, according to information received by Mr. Coën, the Dominican Government justified its proceedings in that case, on the ground that the Netherlands Government had not protested against the Decree in due time, as had been done by Her Majesty's Government, thereby apparently admitting the validity of the British protest.

That it would be seen from the above summary that the Decree of 1876 was issued at a time of revolution, and when actual hostilities were going on in Santo Domingo, although the insurgents had not been formally declared or recognized as belligerents by Her Majesty's Government. That since the date of the Decree four other revolutions have taken place, with brief intervals of comparative peace.

Netherlands Government ask grounds of British protest.

That the Netherlands Minister in his letter of the 12th ultimo had requested, on behalf of his Government, to be informed of the grounds on which Article 2 of the Decree of 1876 was held by Her Majesty's Government to be illegal, and also whether they still hold the same opinion.

That it became important, therefore, to ascertain whether the hostilities going on in Santo Domingo at the date of the Decree, and during the revolutions which had since broken out there, constitute a "state of war" within the meaning of that expression as used in our Report of the 15th July, 1876, and, if not, whether the protest of Her Majesty's Government could be deemed to have operated of itself, as a recognition of the belligerent status of the contending parties.

That the correspondence relating to the question was inclosed therewith, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer which it would be advisable to return to Count Bylandt's inquiry.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Adhere to former Report.

That we adhere to our former opinion.

Dominica, in using words "contraband of war," adopted a state of war.

Confiscation of vessels illegal.

Article 2, sections 1 and 8, speak of "materials of war," and section 10 has the words "materials deemed by the terms of this law to be contraband of war." The Santo Domingo Government by the use of these terms adopted "a state of war." The penalties which the Decree imposed upon the attempted introduction of articles contraband of war into the territory of the Republic, and more particularly (Article 2, section 4) the confiscation of any ship anchored on any part of the coast of the Republic, with articles contraband of war, were, in our opinion, contrary to, or in excess of, the usage and practice of civilized nations, and consequently illegal.

Slave Trade Convention with Egypt.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Treasury, inclosing copies of two Reports from Mr. Rothery, with a draft memorial to Her Majesty in Council which had been prepared with a view to an Order in Council for the purpose of bringing the Slave Trade Convention recently concluded with Egypt under the operation of the Slave Trade Acts; and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would inform your Lordship whether we concurred in the Reports of Mr. Rothery generally, and especially in his view that a British vessel captured by an Egyptian cruizer could be condemned in one of the East African Courts under the East African Courts Act, 1873 (which gave jurisdiction only where seizure had been made by the Commander of one of Her Majesty's ships), by the vessel being handed over by the captors to a British Commander, who would institute the proceedings against her in the British Court.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Vessels captured by Egyptian cruizer may be condemned under East African Courts Act if handed over to a British Commander.

That we concur in Mr. Rothery's Report generally, and in his view that a British vessel captured by an Egyptian cruizer could be condemned in one of the East African Courts under the East African Courts Act, 1873 (which gives jurisdiction only where seizure has been made by the Commander of one of Her Majesty's ships), by the vessel being handed over by the captors to a British Commander, who would institute the proceedings against her in the British Court.

Civil Code. Decree modifying.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, inclosing a copy of a Decree issued on the 24th December last by the Khedive, whereby certain modifications were introduced into the "Code Civil" in respect to the valuation and sale of articles seized by order of the Courts.

That the following questions had arisen with reference to that Decree:—

1. Did the Decree effect any change in the system within the meaning of Article 12 of the Civil Code?

2. Was it incumbent on the Egyptian Government to submit, for the approval of the foreign Powers, all additions to the Codes made under the authority conferred by Article 12?

3. Was the question whether such additions effect a change in the system, for the sole decision of the magistracy, as contended by Chérif Pasha?

That Lord Tenterden was to inclose a copy of the Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire and of the Codes for convenience of reference, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the above questions at our early convenience.

Modifications do not affect "system." All changes of "system" must be submitted to Powers for approval.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report that—

1. The modifications introduced by the Decree are mere details in working out the orders of the Courts, and do not, in our opinion, effect any change in the system, within the meaning of the 12th Article of the "Code Civil."

1878

2. In all cases where the proposed change, by addition or modification, would affect the system, the proposed change must, in our opinion, be submitted for the approval of the foreign Powers. But where the system is not affected, we think there is no obligation so to submit the change.

3. The question whether the additions or modifications effect a change in the system is not one for the sole decision of the magistracy.

Article 12 gives the magistracy merely a power of advising and suggesting.

My Lord, Temple, May 11, 1878.

Claims of Cocca Brothers against Egyptian Government.

WE are honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 2nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us the despatches and their inclosures which had been received from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, together with a minute on the subject of a decision recently given by a Commission of Arbitration, consisting of a selection from the Judges of the Mixed Tribunals, on a claim for damages made by the brothers Cocca (Greek subjects) against the Egyptian Government for their forcible expulsion in the year 1867 from a tenement which was considered by the British Consular authorities to belong to the estate of a deceased trader named Stathi Stano, who enjoyed British protection.

Expulsion from house considered to belong to Stano, a British-protected subject, on responsibility of Consul-General Stanton.

That for reasons stated in the inclosed papers, the Egyptian Government claimed to be relieved by Her Majesty's Government from all liability on account of the decision of the Commission, by which they were condemned to pay damages amounting to over 70,000*l.*, and to reinstate the plaintiffs in their property.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to take those papers into our consideration, and to favour Lord Derby with our opinion as to the course which Her Majesty's Government should adopt under the circumstances, and as to whether the action of Her Majesty's Consul at Alexandria, as reported in his letter to Mr. Vivian of the 19th instant (inclosed in Mr. Vivian's despatch No. 33 of the 11th instant), should be approved.

We are also honoured with further papers on this subject, inclosed in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter bearing date the 1st instant.

In obedience to his Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That in 1860 the Okella was transferred to Anastacy, and Sotiri Cocca remained in undisturbed possession till Stathi's death in 1864.

The widow and administratrix of Stathi took no steps to recover the property till 1867, when she applied to the British Consular authority.

No legal proceedings of any kind as between party and party seem to have been instituted, but possession recovered by an armed force lent to the British authorities by the Egyptian Government at the request and on the responsibility of General Stanton, under the direction of the late Sir P. Francis.

Damages given against Egyptian Government, who claim to recover them from British Government.

In the present year, by a decision of three Judges of the Court of Appeal of the Mixed Tribunals, in a proceeding brought by members of the family of Anastacy against the Egyptian Government, that Government is found liable for the forcible seizure of the Okella in 1867, and heavy damages are found against the Government.

In these proceedings against the Egyptian Government, the widow who had remained in undisturbed possession was not made a party, and no notice of the proceedings was given to the British authorities, till some time after the Decree the Egyptian Government put forward a claim against Her Majesty's Government for indemnity, on the ground that the forcible measures resorted to in 1867 were taken on the responsibility of General Stanton.

Latter cannot repudiate General Stanton's acts.

We think Her Majesty's Government cannot disavow or repudiate the acts of General Stanton, and we agree with Sir Julian Pauncefote, that the Egyptian Government should be told that Her Majesty's Government decline, looking to the delay on the part of the family of Anastacy, and the fact that no notice of the proceedings before the Judges was given, nor notice of the intended submission to arbitration to be in any way bound by the decision of the Judges.

Had better agree to fresh investigation, &c.

But that Her Majesty's Government will agree to an arrangement between the Egyptian, Hellenic, and British Governments for a fresh investigation into the whole of the case in reference to the rights of ownership over the Okella.

And that, in the meanwhile, the proceedings of the Commission should be stayed.

We think this action on the part of Her Majesty's Government would be better than the course which Mr. Cookson, with the sanction of Mr. Vivian, has advised, and which has apparently been acted upon, since it is desirable to ascertain the real merits of the case, and not to bring the question down to an amount of damages.

Whilst differing, however, from Mr. Cookson, we must observe that he has probably a more accurate knowledge of the facts than we have, and that the course advised by him will have the effect of delaying execution, and give time for the intervention of Her Majesty's Government.

With reference to the further papers transmitted to us in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st instant, we have the honour to state to your Lordship that as they relate merely to a question of amount, and not to the principle involved in this case, they do not, in our opinion, call for any further report.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received November 7.)

Temple, November 7, 1878.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 11th ultimo, stating that he was directed to transmit to us papers, and to request that we would advise your Lordship on the following questions:—

Judicial reforms. Immunity of Consuls from jurisdiction of Mixed Tribunals under the Capitulations.

That foreign Consuls in the Levant, and more particularly in Egypt, enjoyed, as we were aware, under the Capitulations and the usages engrafted thereon, certain privileges analogous to those of Diplomatic Agents in Christian countries, and, among them, they claimed absolute immunity from the jurisdiction and process of the local Tribunals.

That that immunity, which did not attach to the Consular office in Christian countries, had grown out of the peculiar conditions under which the subjects of Christian Powers resided in Mahommedan States.

That, consequently, upon the establishment of the Mixed Tribunals in Egypt, the French Government thought it necessary, by Article 7 of the Protocol of the 10th November, 1874, to reserve expressly the privileges of their Consuls, and to stipulate that they should not be justiciable by the Mixed Tribunals. That that last stipulation was probably deemed necessary, on the ground that the raison d'être of the immunity of foreign Consuls from the jurisdiction of Mahommedan Tribunals was inapplicable to the Tribunals of the Reform, which were presided over by a majority of foreign Judges, and in which justice was administered on the general principles of jurisprudence common to all Christian States.

Great Britain may claim benefit of French and German Protocols.

That, by an Agreement between the British and Egyptian Governments, dated the 31st July, 1875, it was declared that the benefit of all the stipulations and reservations contained in the French Protocol, as well as those contained in a Protocol of the 5th May, 1875, concluded between the German and Egyptian Governments, would immediately be extended to Great Britain, "should the British Government at any time express a wish to that effect."

Has not done so.

That Great Britain had not, up to that time, expressed such a wish, and one of the questions which had there arisen was whether, notwithstanding that Her Majesty's Government might not claim the benefit of the French Protocol, Her Majesty's Consuls in Egypt were entitled to exemption from the jurisdiction of the Mixed Tribunals.

1878

That, on that point, Mr. Lister was to refer us to Mr. Vivian's despatch No. 189 of the 25th May, and to the Foreign Office despatch No. 118 of the 14th June in reply thereto.

That it was considered that the Protocols in question, and the claim of Great Britain to the benefit thereof, if Her Majesty's Government should so desire, constituted an admission that foreign Consuls were, in the absence of a special stipulation, subject to the jurisdiction of the Mixed Tribunals, and the question was answered in that sense.

But that we should observe that in a further despatch from Mr. Vivian, No. 266 of the 30th July, and its inclosures, and also in the letter from the Austro-Hungarian Chargé d'Affaires of the 8th August, a contrary view was advocated to that expressed in the Foreign Office despatch No. 118 of the 14th June, and that it was contended that the establishment of the Mixed Tribunals had in no respect affected the immunities of foreign Consuls in Egypt; and that although Her Majesty's Government might not claim the benefit of the French and German Protocols, British Consuls were not subject to the jurisdiction of those Tribunals.

That another question had arisen, namely, whether, assuming that British Consuls were exempt from that jurisdiction, under the Capitulations, or should become so by reason of Her Majesty's Government deciding to claim the benefits of the French and German Protocols, they were entitled to waive the privilege, and to institute a suit in those Courts, thereby submitting to the jurisdiction.

That Mr. Vivian stated in his despatch No. 189 of the 25th May that the Court of Appeal at Alexandria had decided that upon the proper construction of the 7th Article of the French Protocol foreign Consuls, to whom the benefit of that Protocol extends, could neither sue or be sued in the Mixed Tribunals.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take all papers transmitted therewith into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on both the questions above stated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Consuls' immunities not affected by the Mixed Tribunals.

That the establishment of the Mixed Tribunals in Egypt has not changed, or in any way affected the immunities of foreign Consular officers in Egypt.

It may therefore be unnecessary to claim the benefit of the Agreement between the British and Egyptian Governments of the 31st July, 1875.

But British should be on same footing as other Consuls.

But it is, in our opinion, desirable that British Consular officers in Egypt should be expressly put on the same footing with other (for instance, the French) Consuls, and we therefore suggest that it will be proper to obtain, in general terms, the benefit of all the stipulations and reservations contained in the French and German Protocols.

Consuls may waive their privileges.

We think that British Consuls may, in strictness, waive their privilege, and either sue or be sued in the Mixed Tribunals, unless the constitution of those Tribunals provides that Consuls shall not be amenable to their jurisdiction.

But not where official rights are concerned.

We are, however, of opinion that no Consul should be allowed to waive his privilege in any case in which his official rights and duties are concerned.

Annex.

Draft to Mr. Vivian.

Foreign Office, December , 1878.

Sir,

Draft.

YOUR despatches Nos. 266 and 292 of the 30th July and 28th August last relative to the liability of foreign Consuls to the jurisdiction of the new Egyptian Tribunals were duly received and have had careful attention.

Establishment of Mixed Tribunals has not affected immunities of Consuls.

Upon further consideration of the question in communication with the Law Officers of the Crown, Her Majesty's Government have arrived at the conclusion that, notwithstanding the reservations in the French Protocol and the declaration of the right of Great Britain to claim the benefit thereof contained in the agreement of the 31st July, 1875, the establishment of the Mixed Tribunals in Egypt has not affected the immunities of British Consular agents.

As to claiming privileges of French Protocol.

Consuls' right to waive privilege would be affected.

Powers must come to an understanding.

In order to dispose of any doubts on this question arising out of the judgment of the Court of Appeal in the case of the Belgian Consul at Damietta (copy of which was inclosed in your despatch No. 189 of the 25th May last), Her Majesty's Government would be disposed at once formally to claim the benefit of the reservations contained in the French Protocol, were it not that, by the same judgment, it has been declared that the Mixed Tribunals, on the proper construction of the French Protocol, have no power to entertain a suit instituted by a Consular officer who may be willing to submit to the jurisdiction, and the result would be that British Consular officers would, in that respect, be in a less advantageous position than at present. Before taking this step, therefore, Her Majesty's Government consider it necessary that some understanding should be arrived at among the Governments concerned by means of a supplemental agreement explanatory of the term "justiciables" in the VIIth Article of the French and other Protocols, which will dispose of the difficulty created by the judgment of the Court of Appeal, and remove all doubt as to the power of Consular officers, under those Protocols, to waive their privilege, and either sue or be sued in the Mixed Tribunals.

I am, &c.

My Lord,

Chesterfield Islands. Occupied by French, after Governor of New South Wales had granted guano licences to British subjects.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 30th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers relative to the occupation of the Chesterfield Islands by the French, which

---

* Mr. Vivian, Nos. 189, 266, and 292; to Mr. Vivian, No. 118; Count Deym, August 8; Law Officers, November 7.

had given rise to the following question:—That the correspondence which formed Inclosure 1 to the Colonial Office letter of the 15th October details the circumstances under which the Governor of New South Wales, in March 1877, acting under instructions from the Colonial Office, granted a lease of those islands to Messrs. Poole, Picken, and Co. Sir E. Robinson, in his despatch No. 83 of the 12th July (inclosure in Colonial Office, 13th September), related how the lessees, having become insolvent, the lease was cancelled; and that he subsequently promised a lease of the islands to Messrs. Scott, Henderson, and Co., having, on the 4th June last, received from them a deposit of 100*l.*

That he proceeded to state that the usual licence was engrossed and ready for execution, and that the new lessees or licensees had, on the strength of the agreements, purchased and fitted out a vessel for working the guano deposits on the islands, when he received a letter from the Governor of the French Colony of New Caledonia, notifying to him the formal annexation of the islands on behalf of the French Government, on the 15th June last, by a French vessel of war. That that annexation appeared to have been effected by direction of the Governor of New Caledonia, although, on the day preceding the dispatch of the French vessels of war from Nouméa to take possession of the islands, the Governor was formally warned by Her Majesty's Consul of the British claim, and was informed by him that the islands had been recently surveyed by Her Majesty's ship "Reynard," preparatory to being leased out to several Englishmen who had made application for them.

That we should perceive from Sir E. Hertslet's memorandum of the 3rd August [1878], and from the letters of the Admiralty to the Colonial Office of the 5th June, 1877, and 2nd October, 1878 (Inclosure 1 in Colonial Office letter of 15th October), that the islands in question, which were of no value except in respect of their deposits of guano, were not marked on any ordinary map. It was believed that they were first discovered, in 1793, by the British ships "Normujier" and "Chesterfield," the former of which vessels was commanded by Captain Bampton; hence the islands were known as the Chesterfield and Bampton reefs. They were examined and surveyed in sufficient detail for all nautical purposes by Captain Denham, in Her Majesty's ship "Herald," in 1860, but they had never been taken possession of on behalf of the British Crown.

As to declaration of annexations (reference to Lacepede Islands).

That in our Report of the 21st February, 1877, in the case of the Lacepede Islands,* we advised that the validity of a mere Declaration to annex territory was, in the present state of international law, extremely doubtful. That in the present case, however, though possession of the islands was not actually taken on behalf of the British Government, still, as it appeared that they were originally discovered and named by British subjects, and that acts of ownership were performed on behalf of the British Crown by the Governor of New South Wales, by the grant of leases thereof to British subjects in March 1877, and again in June 1878, and further, that those facts and the claim of Great Britain to the islands was formally notified to the Governor of New Caledonia, by Her Majesty's Consul, before their annexation by his direction, on the 15th June, the title of the French Government could hardly be said to be founded on equity and good conscience.

That Lord Tenterden was, therefore, to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the circumstances therein set forth would justify Her Majesty's Government in making any representations to the French Government on the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government not justified in remonstrating.

That, in our opinion, there is no circumstance stated in the papers which have been referred to us which would justify Her Majesty's Government in making any representations to the French Government on the subject of the Chesterfield Islands.

Temple, January 3, 1878.

My Lord,

German "Imperial Registration and Marriage Law." Fine on clergymen who solemnize a marriage not previously concluded before the Registrar.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 16th October, 1877, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion upon the following point:—

That on the 6th February, 1875, a Law was promulgated at Berlin, known as the "Imperial Registration and Marriage Law," by the 67th clause of which it was enacted that "a clergyman or other minister of religion who proceeds to perform the rites of marriage without its having been previously proved to him that the marriage has been concluded before the Registrar, will be punished by a fine not exceeding 300 marks, or by imprisonment, the maximum term of which is three months."

Law not applicable persons enjoying diplomatic privileges.

That the point having been raised whether the penalties of that clause would apply to a British clergyman marrying British subjects within the walls of a British Mission, Her Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin was directed to inquire what were the views on the subject of the German Foreign Office. That the instruction was carried out in the note, which was inclosed, of the 18th August last, and that on the 27th September* an answer was sent, which was also inclosed, communicating a memorandum to the effect that a British clergyman celebrating a marriage without complying with the requirements of the law would subject himself to the prescribed penalties, unless he enjoyed diplomatic privileges as a member of the Mission, e.g., as a Chaplain; or unless the parties married should both enjoy such privileges.

That your Lordship would be glad to know whether, in our opinion, the view taken in the memorandum was a correct exposition of the bearing of international law on the subject.

Ex-territoriality of Embassies, &c.

Lord Tenterden was also to inclose, with further reference to the question, a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Berlin,† inclosing some observations as to the German interpretation of the law which have been made by the British clergymen resident in that capital, and likewise despatches on the subject from the various British Missions in Germany,‡ and to draw our attention as regards the question of the so-called ex-territoriality of the residences of Ambassadors to the cases referred to at pp. 31, 32 of the memorandum by Sir A. Cockburn, contained in the Appendix to the Report of the Royal Commission on Fugitive Slaves.§

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot take advantage of for purpose of breaking laws. Minister and Consul, with their families, only exempt.

That the German memorandum is, in our opinion, a correct exposition of the bearing of international law upon this subject. The house of a Foreign Minister cannot be made use of as a privileged place to which persons may resort for the purpose of breaking the laws of the country in which that house is situated, and the only persons who can claim exemption from obedience to those laws are the persons properly accredited to that country as Minister or Consular officer, his family, and his officers. The law now in question does not affect the religious liberty of any person, but simply insists, and enforces by means of penalties, that a civil procedure shall be a condition precedent to the religious ceremony.

As to application of law to foreigners not domiciled in Germany.

We have some doubt whether the law was intended to apply to all foreigners in the German Empire, whether domiciled in that country or not, and we would respectfully suggest to your Lordship that it would be advisable to get an answer from the German Government at Berlin upon the point.

The introduction to the pamphlet containing the law states that the law was passed in order to assimilate the laws of marriage in all the States of the German Empire, and section 46, dealing with the question of the publication of banns, is entirely based upon the doctrine of domicil, and if that section is construed strictly, the law seems to be only applicable to persons domiciled in Germany. Undoubtedly, if the law is intended to apply to every marriage which is contracted in Germany, it will bear hardly on foreigners who are not actually domiciled in that country, and who wish to be married there, but in our opinion the law cannot be objected to on any other ground.

My Lord,

Slave Trade Treaty of 1841. Extension to German Empire.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th instant, stating that with reference to our report of the 26th of October last respecting the proposed extension to the German Empire of the Slave Trade Treaty between Great Britain, Austria, Prussia, and Russia of the 20th December, 1841, Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us some further papers relating to that matter, and he was to request that we would take them into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the proposal of the German Government contained in Count Münster's note of the 22nd December last, to conclude a separate Convention with Great Britain, in which the consent of Austria and Russia to the modifications of the Treaty of 1841 introduced into such Convention should be expressly reserved, is one that should be accepted by Her Majesty's Government, or whether they should insist on the new Convention being concluded by all the parties to the Treaty of 1841.

Separate Convention with Great Britain. Austria and Russia to consent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the object of the Convention is merely to meet the altered state of Prussia and Germany, and the change to be introduced into the engagement of Great Britain is almost, if not wholly, immaterial.

No objection.

This being so, we are of opinion that the course (though an unusual one) suggested by Count Münster in his note of the 22nd December last may be followed, and Count Münser's proposal as contained in that note be accepted.

My Lord,

Marriage, at British Consulate at Geneva, of a German to a British subject.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that he was to transmit to us a correspondence with the German Embassy, in which a question arose as to the validity of a marriage celebrated at the British Consulate at Geneva between Baron von Mengerson and a Miss Berwick, a British subject.

British Acting Consul had no warrant. Consul had resigned at time of marriage.

That the present Consul at Geneva, Mr. Auldjo, was empowered to celebrate marriages, under "The Act 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68," by a warrant dated the 15th July, 1872; but it appeared that the marriage in question was solemnized by him on the 26th June, 1872, when he was only acting as Consul in the place of Mr. Mackenzie, the former Consul, who was the holder of a warrant to celebrate marriages, but had resigned his Consular office at the date of the marriage, his resignation having been accepted on the 20th June, 1872.

That from the inclosed Report of the Law Officers of the 13th December, 1872, it would seem that notwithstanding the provisions of "The Act 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 61," the marriage was invalid by reason of its celebration having taken place between the date on which Mr. Mackenzie ceased to hold his Consular office and the date of the new warrant to celebrate marriages issued to Mr. Auldjo. But that, before replying to Baron von den Brincken's communication, your Lordship desired to be informed whether we concurred in the Report from the Law Officers above referred to, and to be favoured with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the inquiry of the German Government.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that the Foreign Office despatch authorizing Mr. Auldjo to be Acting Consul in the place of Mr. Mackenzie was dated the 21st November, 1871, and that he was to transmit, for convenience of reference, a copy of the Acts 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, and 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 61.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Invalid.

That we concur in the Report of the Law Officers of the 13th December, 1872. The inquiry of the German Government may, in our opinion, be properly answered by stating that the marriage in question was not valid, since at the date of the marriage there was no Consular officer at Geneva properly authorized to celebrate marriages.

My Lord,

Haytian Consular fees in foreign ports. Law.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 20th February last, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers noted in the margin* relative to a law which had been passed by the Haytian Republic, regulating the fees to be levied by their Consular officers in foreign ports.

That we would observe that Her Majesty's Minister at Port-au-Prince, under instructions from Her Majesty's Government, had strongly protested against the imposition of the fees in question, on the ground that their excessive amount must tend to injure trade, and more especially that those mentioned in the first two Articles of the Decree were virtually of the nature of an export duty upon goods shipped to Hayti, in addition to the import duty levied in the ports of the Republic.

Equivalent to an export duty from British ports.

That Her Majesty's Government did not contest the right of the Haytian Republic to levy any customs duties, however onerous, in their own ports, but the ground of objection was that the Haytian Consuls virtually exacted export duties on British goods from British subjects in British ports, and that those duties were levied in a vexatious manner, under regulations which seemed to have been framed with a view to extorting fines, and that they were levied upon goods which might possibly (as pointed out in Messrs. Maxwell, Savage, and Co.'s letter of the 8th October) never enter Hayti.

That it would be seen that the Haytian Government, in the answer returned to Major Stewart's protest, evade a discussion on the above-mentioned point.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour Lord Derby with our opinion as to whether the levy of the fees in question by the Haytian Consuls was a violation of the rights of this country, and a proceeding which justified the protest of Her Majesty's Government.

We were also honoured with Mr. Lister's letter of the 1st June last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Port-au-Prince.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the preamble and clauses 8 and 9 of the Decree show that the object is not to provide funds for the support and pay of the Consulates and Consular Agents, but to raise money for the Haytian Government by means of a customs duty imposed in this country, and possibly upon goods which may never be carried to Hayti.

Her Majesty's Government may protest against violation o ftheir rights.

We are therefore of opinion that the levy of the fees in question is to some extent a violation of the rights of this country, and is a proceeding which justifies the protest of Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord,

Letters from Pope and Cardinals announcing death of Pius IX, &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us translations of two letters which had been addressed to the Queen by the College of Cardinals and the Pope.

That the former letter notified to Her Majesty the death of the late Pope Pius IX, the latter the elevation of Pope Leo XIII to the Supreme Pontificate.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those letters into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, having regard to the repeal of the Statute 5 Elizabeth, cap. 1, by the Act 9 and 10 Vict., cap. 59, there was any objection in point of law to a suitable acknowledgment by the Secretary of State of the letters in question.

That Lord Tenterden was likewise to transmit to us for reference a printed memorandum* respecting the relations of Great Britain with the See of Rome between the years 1814 and 1846, and to call our attention to a Report of the Law Officers of the Crown, dated the 5th November, 1823, which would be found at p. 44 of the printed memorandum.

That he was to add that should there be any doubt on the point of law referred to us, or should we be aware of any other reason why, in our opinion, the Secretary of State should not enter into direct communication either with the Pope or with the College of Cardinals, a verbal acknowledgment of those letters might be given by Lord Lyons to the Papal Nuncio at Paris, from whom his Excellency received them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Secretary of State may answer them.

That we see no legal objection to a suitable acknowledgment of the letters in question by the Secretary of State.

[*] Confidential Paper No. 65.

Avoid acknowledging "Supreme Pontificate," &c.

In the Pope's letter there are two expressions, "Supreme Pontificate" and "Catholic Church," to which we would call your Lordship's attention, since we think the answer should be so framed as not to admit, even by silence, the claim of the Pope to Supreme Pontificate.

The word "Catholic" has a peculiar and exclusive meaning when used by persons called, we believe, in every Act of Parliament, "Roman Catholics." The answer should, we submit, have the words "Church of Rome," or, "persons in communion with the Church of Rome."

Formal address: "Most Eminent Sir."

Your Lordship will probably adopt the formal address, "Most Eminent Sir," hitherto used.

In reference to the Cardinal's letter, the like observations apply to the expressions "Catholic Church," "Supreme Pastor," and "Apostolic See." And in the answer we suggest that words should be used carefully avoiding the recognition of those titles or descriptions.

My Lord,

Tuscan Gas Company. Refusal of Italian Government to grant privileges under Joint-Stock Companies Convention.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 10th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our opinion, the correspondence relating to the complaint of the Tuscan Gas Company (Limited), that the Italian Government declined to grant to them a Royal Decree of authorization to enable them to carry on their business within the Kingdom of Italy.

That the facts of the case appeared to be briefly as follows:—

The Tuscan Gas Company was a Company duly incorporated in this country, and formed for the purpose of lighting with gas various towns in Italy.

That by a Declaration exchanged between the Governments of Great Britain and Italy on the 26th November, 1867,* it was stipulated that Joint-Stock Companies constituted and authorized in conformity with the laws in force in either of the two countries might freely exercise in the dominions of the other all their rights, in conformity, however, with the laws and customs in force in the said countries.

That in accordance with that stipulation the Tuscan Gas Company applied to the Italian Government for the Royal Decree of authorization necessary to enable them to carry on their business in Italy, but it was refused, on the ground that the authorization could only be extended to Companies constituted and doing business in a foreign State, and desirous of extending their operations to Italy.

That the Tuscan Gas Company had appealed against that decision to Her Majesty's Government. That your Lordship was disposed to think that the action of the Italian Government was not in accordance with the terms of the Declaration above referred to; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether just grounds existed for a representation being addressed to the Italian Government on the subject.

Opinions of various foreign countries.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that your Lordship took steps to obtain the views of those foreign Governments with which Great Britain or Italy had concluded Conventions of a similar kind; and he was to transmit to us the replies which had been received,† together with copies of the Conventions to which they referred.‡

That we would perceive that the general tenour of those replies was favourable to the contention of the Tuscan Gas Company; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to draw our attention more especially to the note from the Netherlands Government, which pointed out that the additional Protocol annexed to and explanatory of their Convention with Italy (of which this country, under most-favoured-nation treatment, would have the benefit) precluded in the most explicit way any restriction of the kind which the Italian Government sought now to impose.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that, as it was of great importance to the Company that early action should be taken in the matter, your Lordship might be favoured with our opinion at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

May remonstrate with Italian Government.

That, in our opinion, just grounds do exist for a representation being addressed to the Italian Government on the subject.

We suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that this representation should be so framed that it may draw from the Italian Government their reasons for refusing to "The Tuscan Gas Company (Limited)," which has been constituted and authorized in conformity with the laws in force in this country, the free exercise in Italy of all rights in conformity with the laws and customs in force in Italy.

The attention of the Italian Government may, in the representation, properly be called to the intention of the British and Italian Governments, and obvious meaning which Her Majesty's Government puts upon the words of the Declaration of the 26th November, 1867.

And the Italian Government should be directly asked to state in what respects "The Tuscan Gas Company" has failed to comply with the terms and meaning of the Declaration, or is not in conformity with the laws in force in Italy.

The attention of the Italian Government may also be properly called to the Italy and Netherlands Convention 11th April, 1868, and the Italy and Russian Declaration 8th November, 1866, and the bearing of those two documents with reference to the most-favoured-nation clause.

S. Reilly, under instructions from the Foreign Office Department, for the purpose of amending the existing Order in Council for China and Japan of 9th March, 1865, a copy of which was annexed for convenience of reference.

Appeal to Supreme Court in China.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to our Report of the 10th May last* on the subject of the judicial powers of the Acting Law Secretary of the Supreme Court established under that Order, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state that, in order to place the administration of justice in Japan on a more convenient footing, and to obviate in future the irregularities which had occurred, it had been decided to establish a separate court for Japan, with an appeal to the Supreme Court at Shanghae. That the inclosed draft Order had been framed as a temporary measure only, as it was proposed in the course of next year to issue a consolidated and comprehensive Order in Council for China and Japan, which should contain amended rules of procedure, and confer on both Courts the additional powers contemplated by the Foreign Jurisdiction Bill introduced this Session in Parliament.

That, in the meanwhile, it was of the utmost importance that the proposed Order in Council should be issued with the least possible delay; and unless it could be passed at the next Council, which was expected to be held on Wednesday next, serious inconvenience would be occasioned. That under those circumstances your Lordship desired Sir Julian Pauncefote to request that we would be so good as to take the draft Order in Council into our immediate consideration, and that, if it was possible, we would favour your Lordship with our opinion by Monday next as to whether it might properly be laid before the Queen for Her Majesty's approval.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cancel "Law Secretary" clauses in 1865 Order, &c.

That a clause should be inserted in the draft Order, providing that the China and Japan Order in Council, 1865, should be read as though all provisions with regard to the Law Secretary were expunged.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 23rd September last, stating that several instances have arisen of late years in which the proceedings of Naval Courts summoned abroad by Her Majesty's Consular officers and the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships have been invalid by reason of the absence of full and complete instructions for the guidance of those officers.

That accordingly, the Board of Trade have caused to be prepared a new set of "instructions relating to Naval Courts," and in now transmitting to us the inclosed proof of those instructions, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take them into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether they might properly be issued, and with any remarks and suggestions which we might have to offer thereupon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approving, with slight alteration.

That we think the instructions at p. 5, line 18, should use the words of the Statute, "Master or any of the crew," in lieu of the words "Master, officer, or seaman."

At p. 11, lines 11 and 12, it is stated that "the sections specially alluded to of certain Statutes" are appended to these instructions. On p. 9, secs. 23 and 24 of the Act of 1862 (25 and 26 Vict., cap. 63) are alluded to, but only section 23 is set out in the appendix. We think section 24 should be also set out.

Subject to the above remarks we approve of the proposed instructions, and think they may be properly issued.

My Lord,

Publication of news papers, &c. Japanese Municipal Laws generally. Whether binding on British subjects.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 5th November last, stating that the Earl of Derby addressed to Her Majesty's Minister in Japan an instruction, in the sense of our Report of the 19th September, 1877, on the subject of the right of the Japanese Government to interfere with the foreign press in that country, and that Mr. Lister was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches,* which had been received from Sir H. Parkes, raising certain further questions in connection therewith, and generally with the ex-territorial rights of British subjects in Japan.

That in his despatch No. 4, Sir H. Parkes requested that he might be informed whether the conclusions at which we arrived with reference to the foreign press were founded on grounds peculiar to the publication of newspapers, or whether the same reasons applied to other occupations in which British subjects were engaged, and whether the Japanese municipal laws, which regulated the exercise of certain trades or vocations, which he specified, were binding on British subjects.

That on that point Mr. Lister was to observe that it was hardly reasonable to contend that British subjects should be allowed to compete with the natives in the trades or vocations referred to, without being subject to the burdens or restrictions imposed on the latter, and the consequence of such a state of things would probably be, that Japanese subjects would carry on business in the name and through the medium of British subjects, for the sake of the privileges and immunities which they would thereby enjoy.

But that where British subjects exercised trades or vocations which were carried on among the foreign community only, or which did not bring them into competition with the natives, a tacit understanding seemed to have prevailed, that the municipal laws of Japan relating to such trades do not apply to them, and that they were subject only to British laws, and to such regulations as Her Majesty's Minister might issue under Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan of the 9th March, 1865 (sections 85 and 90).

Japanese Shooting Regulations. As to.

That Mr. Lister was to transmit to us, among the papers, copies of the Treaty of 1858 between Great Britain and Japan, and of the Protocol of the 6th June, 1862, which comprised all the existing Treaty stipulations between the two countries, and also a copy of a correspondence which took place in 1876, respecting shooting regulations in Japan, in which the subject under consideration was discussed with reference to the application of the Japanese Game Laws to foreigners. In that case Her Majesty's Minister issued regulations to enforce obedience thereto on the part of British subjects.

That Sir H. Parkes, in his despatch No. 3, pointed out that, on the reply to the general question then raised, depended the future policy of Her Majesty's Government with regard to Her Majesty's jurisdiction in Japan, and he proceeded to argue that the doctrine laid down in Mr. Fisher's despatch to Mr. Bingham of the 2nd May, 1876, referred to, with approval, in our Report of the          September, 1877, was at variance with the principles which Her Majesty's Government had hitherto consistently maintained in their relations with Japan under the Treaty of 1858, and also with China under a similar Treaty. In support of that allegation, he cited a passage from a despatch from Earl Granville to Sir T. Wade of the 21st August, 1871, having reference to missionaries, but that the extract which he gave from that despatch did not appear to sustain the position that British subjects, though only amenable to British Tribunals, were entitled to disregard the laws of China.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take all the papers transmitted therewith into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be made to the questions submitted in Sir H. Parkes' two despatches.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Municipal Laws apply to British subjects in Japan, except when inconsistent with Treaty rights.

That, in our opinion, the municipal laws of Japan apply to British subjects in Japan in all cases where those laws are not contrary to, or inconsistent with, Treaty rights.

Our former opinion upon the press laws in Japan was founded on the general

---

* Sir H. Parkes, Nos. 3 and 4, January 30, 1878

1878

principle that the laws of Japan were to be observed and obeyed by all residents in Japan, except in those cases where the Japanese Government had surrendered a part of the powers inherent in, and belonging to, every independent State within its own territory.

This general principle is not limited to the publication of newspapers, but applies to other occupations in which British subjects in Japan may be engaged, including the examples given by Sir H. Parkes in his despatch No. 4 (30 January, 1878).

No tacit understanding should, we think, be allowed to have any operation against the municipal laws of Japan, whether newly-executed, or of earlier date, but not heretofore put into action, unless those laws are an infraction of Treaty rights, and conflict with the privileges and immunities enjoyed by British subjects under the provisions of Treaties.

creeds solemnizing marriages where the previous civil formalities prescribed had not been observed, and without the certificates of the Civil Judge, were liable to certain penalties, and by Article 6 the same provision was made applicable to foreign Consuls.

Reference to German laws.

That, in submitting the above-mentioned Decree for our consideration, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that in Germany, by the Imperial Registration Law of 1875, it was enacted that any clergyman solemnizing a marriage without proof of the previous civil formalities having been observed he is liable to certain penalties, and in expressing our opinion on that law, we reported in our letter of the 3rd January last* that Her Majesty's Government could not object to its provisions, and we concurred in the view expressed in a memorandum furnished by the German Government, that it applied to an English clergyman solemnizing marriages at the British Embassy or at British Consulates under our Acts of Parliament in that behalf, and not enjoying Diplomatic privileges as an officer of the Mission.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government had any valid ground for objecting to any of the provisions of the Decree of the Uruguayan Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government cannot object.

My Lord,

Marriages between brothers- and sisters-in-law.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the answer that should be returned to the inquiry made, in the inclosed note, by the Netherlands Minister† as to the principles of the legislation in force in this country respecting marriages between brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law, legitimate or illegitimate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Illegal in United Kingdom.

That the Netherlands Minister may, in our opinion, be properly answered that the marriages between brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law, whether legitimate or illegitimate, are illegal and forbidden in the United Kingdom.

With deceased wife's sister, legal in some Colonies.

Your Lordship will, however, probably think that the Netherlands Minister should be informed that the marriage of a man with the sister of his deceased wife is valid in some British Colonies, which have their own Legislature.

And that for some years past attempts have been made, and will probably be renewed, to induce Parliament to make the marriage of a man with the sister of his deceased wife valid in this country.

My Lord,

Operation of Extradition Act in Straits Settlements.

Surrender of fugitives from Dutch Colonies.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 27th February last, stating that, with reference to the operation of the "Extradition Act, 1870," in the Colony of the Straits Settlements, and to our Reports of the 11th January and the 21st of March, 1877,* relating thereto, and more especially to the surrender of fugitives from the Dutch Colonies, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Colonial Office,† inclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor of the Straits Settlements, in which his Excellency applied for instructions from Her Majesty's Government on the question stated in the second paragraph of Mr. Malcolm's letter.

That the Extradition Act of 1870 by section 2 provided that, where an extradition arrangement had been made with any foreign State, Her Majesty might, by Order in Council, direct that the Act should apply "in the case of such foreign State," and by section 5 it was declared that, on the publication of the Order, the Act should apply "in the case of such foreign State."

Fugitives from native States under Indian Act of 1854.

That Orders in Council have from time to time been issued and published, applying the Extradition Acts, 1870 and 1873, in the case of certain foreign States without any exception as to British Colonies, and the question submitted by the Colonial Office was whether the Indian Act No. 7 of 1854, under which fugitives from native States were surrendered prior to 1870, was still in force in the Straits Settlements as regarded foreign States with which no extradition arrangement had been made, within the meaning of section 2 of the "Extradition Act, 1870," and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on that point, for the information of the Colonial Office.

Papers bearing on the case were inclosed, as marked in the margin.‡

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot issue Order in Council under Extradition Act when no arrangement with foreign country exists.

That the Extradition Act, 1870, sec. 2, enables Her Majesty to apply the Act by Order in Council only where an arrangement has been made with the foreign State.

No arrangement has been made, as we understand, with the Malay or native States near the Straits Settlement.

So that Her Majesty could not, as in the former case (where the difficulty arose with respect to Holland), make any Order in Council under section 18 of the Act of 1870.

May issue one under 29 and 30 Vict., cap. 115.

Doubt if Indian Act is in force.

But we think Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, under 29 and 30 Vict., cap. 115, sec. 2, establish a law providing for the surrender of fugitive criminals in the Straits Settlements, and that such law may be conveniently framed upon the India Act No. 7, and we advise this course because we doubt whether the India Act could now with safety be resorted to.

My Lord,

Illegal execution at Apia of American, named Cochrane, for murder.

As to punishment of British subjects implicated in.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st instant, stating he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office* on the subject of the illegal execution of an American sailor, named Cochrane, at Apia for the murder of another American named Fox, and of the steps to be taken to punish those British subjects who were concerned in the proceedings, and observing that, as the acts complained of were committed before the Proclamation of the Western Pacific Order in Council, the matter would appear to be one to be dealt with by Her Majesty's Consuls.

That the Order in Council establishing the High Commission Court was issued under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act and section 6 of the Pacific Islanders Protection Act, 1875, and as regards Samoa Her Majesty's jurisdiction would be exercised solely under the powers conferred by the last-mentioned Act, as it could not be claimed by Treaty, usage, or sufferance.

That it was presumed that, as pointed out in the letter from the Colonial Office, the Order in Council could not have a retro-active operation so as to give jurisdiction to the High Commissioners' Court to try offences committed before it came into force and operation; but, as instructions were to be sent to Sir A. Gordon on the subject, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the question raised.

Consul has no authority.

That it would seem that the Colonial Office were under the impression that the case was one which could be dealt with by the Consuls representing the nationality of the different offenders, but that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that, as regards the British Consul, his authority only extended to the summoning of a Naval Court and to the exercise of the powers conferred upon him by sections 267 and 268 of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854," and that those powers applied only to offences committed by masters, seamen, and apprentices belonging to British ships, whereas the offenders in the present case did not come under that category.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore further to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, the offence alleged to have been committed by the British subjects who took part in the execution of the American sailor at Apia under the circumstances detailed in these papers was justiciable by any British Tribunal out of the United Kingdom.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 21st instant, stating that, with reference to the letter from the Foreign Office of the 1st instant, he was to transmit to us a further despatch which had been received from Her Majesty's Consul at Samoa (No. 26, December 20, 1877), relating to the hanging by Lynch law of a United States' citizen named Corcoran at that place.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to return that despatch, together with the other papers which had been already transmitted to us on that subject.

High Commissioners' Court.
No jurisdiction over crimes committed before it came into force.
British subject may be justiciable under Acts of Geo. III, or may be tried in United Kingdom.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the High Commissioners' Court has no jurisdiction over crimes committed before it came into force and operation.

And the British subject who took part in the hanging of the citizen of the United States may be justiciable under 57 Geo. III, cap. 53, and 46 Geo. III, cap. 54, but, unless he is justiciable under these Statutes, he can be tried only in the United Kingdom.

My Lord,

Case of illegal execution at Apia, and Slave Trade atrocities by Mr. Scott on the Congo.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 15th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 27th March last in relation to the execution of an American sailor at Apia in the Samoan Islands, and to our previous Report of the 9th August last* in relation to the outrages committed by a British subject, named Scott, on the Congo River, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would further advise your Lordship on the following points:

As to offenders being justiciable under Acts of Geo. III.

That the Act 57 Geo. III, cap. 53, provided for the trial and punishment, in the manner therein mentioned, of all murders and manslaughters committed on land at the settlement on the Bay of Honduras by any person residing or being within that settlement, and of all murders and manslaughters committed in the Islands of New Zealand and Otaheite, or within any other islands, countries, and places not within His Majesty's dominions, nor subject to any European State or Power, nor within the territory of the United States of America, by the master or crew of any British vessel, or by any person sailing therein or belonging thereto, or that should have sailed in or belonged to and have quitted any British vessel to live in any of the said islands, countries, or places, "or that shall be there living."

That Sir George Cornewall Lewis, in his treatise on foreign jurisdiction, published in 1859, in noticing that Act, observed that "this Statute is now probably obsolete, if, indeed, it ever had any operation." That the Act was repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act of 1873 as regarded the Bay of Honduras, New Zealand, and Otaheite, and the question arose whether it was still in force as regarded the other places therein mentioned.

That, if our answer to that question should be in the affirmative, your Lordship would be glad to be also advised whether the Act applied to any British subject who might be living in such other places, or only to the master or crew of a British vessel, or to a person sailing in or belonging thereto, and who should have quitted such vessel to live in such places. That it was important in dealing with the case which had arisen in the Samoa Islands, and also with reference to the outrages on the Congo River, to ascertain whether the accused were justiciable under that Act, and for that purpose your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the questions above stated.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Acts still in force.

That, with the exception of the provisions repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act, 1873, the 57 Geo. III, cap. 53, is now in force.

Parties are justiciable under them.

And we are of opinion that any British subject who may be living in any of the places described in the 57 Geo. III, cap. 53, though he may not have been brought there by or quitted a British vessel to live there, is justiciable under the 46 Geo. III, cap. 54, and 57 Geo. III, cap. 53.

My Lord,

Attack on British Vice-Consulate at Iquitos by the Mayor and others.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches reporting the particulars of a gross outrage perpetrated on the British Vice-Consulate at Iquitos by the Mayor and others at that place, and inclosing copies of the correspondence which had passed between the British Chargé d'Affaires at Lima and the Peruvian Government on the subject.

That the facts of the case were stated in the letter of Vice-Consul Johnston to Mr. Graham of the 2nd August last, which formed the first inclosure to despatch No. 50, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to draw our attention to Mr. Graham's letters to Señor Rospigliosi of the 12th October (Inclosure No. 2 in No. 50) and of the 3rd November (Inclosure No. 1 in No. 56), to Señor Rospigliosi's reply of the 7th

1878

November (Inclosure No. 2 in No. 56), and to Mr. Graham's rejoinder to that reply of the 9th November (Inclosure No. 4 in No. 56).

Peruvian Argument that remedy lies in Law Courts.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, under the circumstances of the case, Mr. Graham acted rightly in refusing to admit the argument of the Peruvian Government, that Mr. Johnston should seek his remedy in the Law Courts of the country in order to recover his losses, and whether Her Majesty's Government could properly demand reparation and compensation from the Peruvian Government for the outrage committed and the losses sustained.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 4th instant, stating that he was to transmit a further despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lima, from which we should see that the Peruvian Minister for Foreign Affairs had agreed to pay the sum of 200 soles, to which Mr. Graham concluded the damage might possibly amount, and that he (Sir Julian Pauncefote) was to request that we would take that despatch into our consideration, together with the previous papers already before us.

Precedent quoted in "Calvo."

That he was at the same time to call our attention to a case mentioned in "Calvo," vol. i, pp. 417-418, which afforded a precedent for the claim made by Mr. Graham. In that case a mob having attacked the houses and persons of Spaniards in New York and ransacked the Spanish Consulate, the United States' Government, while refusing compensation to unofficial Spaniards, paid for the damage done to the Consulate on the ground put forward by Mr. Graham in the Iquitos case, that foreign Consuls are entitled to a higher degree of protection than unofficial foreigners.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Consul is under protection of Government in whose country he resides. Compensation due.

That a Consul is, in our opinion, under the protection of the Government within whose territory he resides officially, to a greater degree than an ordinary resident foreigner, and the case in "Calvo," referred to in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter, is a precedent upon which Her Majesty's Government might properly have insisted upon the payment of some compensation, had not the Peruvian Government consented to pay the compensation.

Repudiating "Law Court" argument.

The argument of the Peruvian Government, that the Vice-Consul should seek his remedy in the Law Courts of Peru, was, in the circumstances of the case, properly not admitted by Mr. Graham.

That that memorandum contained an exposition of the case from the point of view in which it was regarded by the Peruvian Government, and concluded with a demand of satisfaction for the acts of Rear-Admiral de Horsey, which they consider an outrage on the rights of Peru.

That the inclosed draft of reply had been drawn up by your Lordship's directions, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take it into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether it met with our concurrence, or whether we would suggest any modifications in it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Annex.

Draft of Letter from the Earl of Derby to Señor Galvez.

Foreign Office, , 1878.

M. le Ministre,

HER Majesty's Government have had under their consideration your letter of the 27th November last, inclosing a memorandum which you state contains the exposition of the "Huascar" question addressed to them by you in the name of your Government, and expressing the hope that the demand of your Government for satisfaction on account of the proceedings of Rear-Admiral de Horsey in relation to the "Huascar" will be received with those sentiments which are characteristic of the equity of the British Government.

Attack on "Huascar" no outrage on rights of Peru.

Her Majesty's Government have given to this memorandum the careful attention which it deserves, with every desire to treat the question in that spirit of justice which you so courteously recognize as guiding their relations with foreign States in the discussion of international difficulties. They find it, however, impossible to reconcile their views of international law and of justice with the arguments advanced by the Peruvian Government in this case, and although they deeply regret that circumstances should have arisen which necessitated a recourse to the measures complained of, it appears to them that the memorandum entirely fails to establish the proposition that the proceedings of Rear-Admiral de Horsey constitute an outrage on the rights of Peru.

There can be no dispute as to the main facts of the case, which are fully and accurately set out in the papers laid before Parliament, a copy of which I have the honour to inclose for convenience of reference.

She was a rebel ship.

Peruvian Government repudiated her acts.

The "Huascar" was a rebel ship, and the Peruvian Government, by a public Decree dated the 8th May, 1877, which was officially communicated to Her Majesty's Minister at Lima and to the other foreign Representatives, declared that the Republic would not be responsible for the acts of the rebels in whose possession she had fallen, of whatsoever nature those acts might be. By the same Decree they publicly authorized the capture of the "Huascar," and offered to recompense properly all those who, not belonging to the crews of the vessels forming the squadron of operations, should bring her under the authority of the Government, or who might contribute to do so.

"Huascar's" outrages on British flag.

After the promulgation of this Decree, the "Huascar" committed a series of outrages on the British flag. She boarded and detained the "John Elder" at sea. She boarded and demanded despatches from the "Santa Rosa;" she forcibly took coal from the "Imuncina;" she removed a Peruvian officer from the "Columbia," and she compelled the engineer of the latter ship,[†] a British subject, to serve against his will.

"Huascar" sailed under no flag.

The "Huascar" having been taken out of the hands of her lawful officers, and the Peruvian Government having disavowed any liability for her acts, it follows that she was sailing under no national flag, and that no redress could be obtained from that Government for any acts which she might commit.

British Admiral forced to protect British property.

Under these circumstances Her Majesty's Government consider that Rear-Admiral de Horsey was bound to act decisively for the protection of British subjects and British property by visiting upon the vessel herself and her crew the consequences of her unwarrantable proceedings, and they cannot admit the right of the Peruvian Government, whilst disclaiming, by a public Decree, all responsibility for the acts of the "Huascar" as a rebel ship, to regard her at the same time as a national vessel, and to resent as a national injury the reprisals* which she brought upon herself by the outrages which she committed on a foreign flag.

---

[†] Should be, "the engineer of the 'Huascar'" (see Admiralty letter of March 27, 1878).

1878

As to attack being made in Peruvian waters.

It is argued, however, in the memorandum, that Rear-Admiral de Horsey cannot justify his action by an appeal to the Decree of the 8th May, as that Decree did not authorize the capture of the "Huascar" in Peruvian waters; and that from the fact that he did not intimate to the Peruvian Government that he intended to act under the Decree, as well as from the character of the attack made upon the monitor, it must be inferred that he could have had no intention to co-operate in her recovery, but was bent only on her destruction.

Her Majesty's Government dissent altogether from those views.

Decree authorizing capture specified no locality.

Having regard to the general terms of the Decree, they are at a loss to perceive how the exercise of the authority thereby conferred, whether on the high seas or in Peruvian or any other waters, can afford any legitimate ground of remonstrance or complaint on the part of the Peruvian Government. There is nothing whatever in the Decree to indicate that the authority to capture the "Huascar" did not extend to Peruvian waters, or that any previous notice to the Government of an intention to act upon the Decree was necessary. On the contrary, the vessel and the rebels on board of her were declared outlawed, and the natural presumption, as well as the only practical purpose of the Decree, was that the vessel should be seized wheresoever and whensoever she could be found.

Intention of British Admiral to deliver her to Peruvian Government.

With reference to the character of the attack on the "Huascar," and to the intention attributed to Rear-Admiral de Horsey, I would observe that neither the "Shah" nor the "Amethyst" being armour-plated vessels, the capture of so powerful a monitor as the "Huascar" could not reasonably be attempted without the employment of all the force at their command; and that the intention of Rear-Admiral de Horsey to deliver her into the hands of the Peruvian Government, if he should effect her capture, is evidenced by the terms of the letter which he addressed to her rebel commander on the 16th May, and to which reference is made in the early part of the memorandum. In that letter he distinctly stated that any further interference with British subjects or property would cause him to capture the vessel "and deliver her to the lawful authority."

As regards the strictures contained in the memorandum respecting the use of torpedoes by Her Majesty's ships on that occasion, the necessity for this proceeding and its propriety under the circumstances must be left to the appreciation of those best qualified to form a judgment thereon from a professional point of view; and I need only express the satisfaction of Her Majesty's Government that no casualty resulted therefrom.

The exact meaning and effect of the Decree of the 8th May having given rise to discussion, it may not be out of place to invite your attention to the following remarks:

The intention of the Peruvian Government in promulgating that Decree, if it admitted of any doubt, was very clearly manifested in the correspondence which passed between Señor Zegarra, the Peruvian Chargé d'Affaires accredited to Chile, and the Chilean Minister of Foreign Affairs, and which is published in the Chilean official "Gazette."

Peru requested Chile to capture her.

It appears from this correspondence that on the occasion of the Mutiny and escape of the "Huascar" from Callao, Señor Zegarra, acting under telegraphic instructions from his Government, addressed a note to the Chilean Minister for Foreign Affairs, requesting that if the "Huascar" should enter a Chilean port, she should be seized by the authorities and placed at the disposal of the Peruvian Legation.

On the 17th May, it having become known that the "Huascar" had entered the port of Caldera, Señor Zegarra renewed most formally his demand for the detention of the vessel, which he stated was then in Chilean waters, and in fulfilment of the decisive orders of his Government, he required that the Chilean Minister should telegraph with the least possible delay the necessary instructions for the carrying out of such action.

Señor Zegarra on the 22nd May again addressed a note to the Chilean Government remonstrating against their refusal to comply with the wishes of his Government, and criticizing the grounds put forward by them in justification of their refusal, namely, that the "Huascar" was not a pirate, that there was no reason to fear that she would interfere with Chilean commerce, and, therefore, that Chile had no right to assume a hostile attitude towards her.

---

* Alteration suggested by the Law Officers: "the immediate and severe treatment."

Admission of Peru that "Huascar" was a pirate.

In this note Señor Zegarra used the following language, which, being addressed under instructions from his Government, is deserving of special attention:—"If a vessel under such conditions is not a pirate, I confess I do not know what to term her; she navigates without a commission from any Government, acknowledges no territorial authority, and to establish more precisely her position has detained on the high sea a commercial packet, forcibly compelling the delivery of the correspondence on board; if such a vessel is not a pirate, at the least she has placed herself completely outside international right; the flag she flies does not belong to her."

Señor Zegarra concludes his note by repeating his protest against the Chilean Government for not having arrested the "Huascar."

Her Majesty's Government, concurring as they do in the views above expressed as to the status and condition of that vessel at the time of her engagement with Her Majesty's ships "Shah" and "Amethyst," and considering the terms of the Decree of the 8th May, are of opinion that the demand of the Peruvian Government is not sustainable on any principle of law or justice. Although Rear-Admiral de Horsey did not succeed in capturing the "Huascar," it is incontestable, from the fact of her surrender to the Peruvian Government immediately after her encounter with the British ships, that he contributed to her recovery in the manner contemplated by the Decree, and while discharging his duty in the protection of British interests, he intended to render, and did actually render, material service to the Government of Peru.

British Admiral committed no offence against dignity of Peru.

Her Majesty's Government cannot but believe that the popular excitement which has been caused by the event in question is to be attributed to an imperfect knowledge of the true facts of the case, and they trust that the friendly explanations which I have given in this letter will satisfy your Government that Rear-Admiral de Horsey is quite innocent of the charge imputed to him in the memorandum, of having violated the rights of Peru, and that he has committed no act which can justly be construed as an offence against the dignity of the Republic.

I avail myself of this occasion to renew the expression of the friendship and goodwill with which Her Majesty's Government are animated towards the Government which you so worthily represent.

I have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received May 13.)

Temple, May 11, 1878.

My Lord,

Exportation of negroes from Africa to Island of San Thomé. Suspected Slave Trade.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers from Mr. Hopkins, Her Majesty's Consul at Loanda, and from the Admiralty, reporting the circumstances under which the Portuguese brig "Pensamento" was boarded by a boat from Her Majesty's ship "Swallow" off the coast of Angola in the month of December last, with a view to verify the status of certain native passengers, who were being transported on board that vessel, as free labourers, from the Portuguese port of Novo Redondo, on the mainland of Africa, to the Island of San Thomé, a Portuguese Possession off the African Coast.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was, in the first place, to refer us to the correspondence which took place between Captain Borlase Warren, of Her Majesty's ship "Swallow," and Mr. Hopkins, which was contained in Inclosures 1, 2, 3, and 3A of the Consul's despatch No. 4 of the 27th December, 1877.

That in consequence of the suspicions entertained that the system carried on by the Portuguese authorities for the supply of labourers to the Island of San Thomé was in violation of the Treaty between Great Britain and Portugal for the suppression of slavery, Captain Borlase Warren stopped and searched the Portuguese brig "Pensamento" on the high seas, and the result of that proceeding was given in his letter to Consul Hopkins of the 17th December, 1877 (Inclosure 3A in No. 4).

Portuguese law.

That thereupon a correspondence took place between Consul Hopkins and the Governor of Angola (Inclosures 4, 5, 6, and 7 in No. 4), from which we should perceive that the system carried on was stated to be based on certain Colonial Regulations of the 25th December, 1875, made under the authority of a law passed by the Portuguese Parliament on the 29th April, 1875.

Slaves purchased, then ransomed and exported free.

That under that system slaves were purchased from native Chiefs and others on the mainland of Africa, and brought to Loanda or Novo Redondo, where they became free, the status of slavery having been abolished throughout the Portuguese dominions by the Law of the 29th April, 1875, a copy of which was annexed for convenience of reference. It was admitted that the system was one of ransoming slaves. In the words of the Governor of Angola, "Slaves, yesterday, when in the hands of the Chiefs of the interior, acquire, when ransomed, all the freedom which the subjects of His Most Faithful Majesty's have, and pass to the land in which flutters the Portuguese flag."

That on arrival, however, at Loanda or Novo Redondo, those ransomed slaves were taken before the Guardian General, and, after being examined by that functionary, enter, it is said, "voluntarily and freely, and with perfect knowledge of the cause," into contracts as labourers for the Island of San Thomé. That Consul Hopkins, as we should perceive from his despatch No. 29 of the 13th June, was at first disposed to take a favourable view of that system, but in consequence of further information which he had obtained he arrived at the conclusion that he had been deceived, and in his letter to the Governor of Angola of the 17th December, 1877 (Inclosure 4 in No. 4), he characterised that free emigration as a "farce," and stated his reasons for that opinion. That, whether the system of emigration thus carried on was really a system of slavery under the cloak of laws and regulations ostensibly directed to humanitarian objects, was a question which could only be solved satisfactorily by further investigation, but, in the meanwhile, Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the purchase of slaves for the purpose of enabling them to obtain their freedom in the manner contemplated by the Portuguese Law of the 29th April, 1875, and the Colonial Regulations made thereunder, constituted a violation of the terms or of the spirit of the Treaty of 1842 between Great Britain and Portugal for the suppression of slavery.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the offence named in the Treaty of 1842 (Articles I and II) is the transporting negroes by sea for the purpose of consigning them to slavery.

Purchase of slaves for purpose of freeing them is no violation of Slave Trade Treaty.

In our opinion, the purchase of slaves for the purpose of enabling them to obtain their freedom in the manner contemplated by the Portuguese Law and Regulations does not constitute a violation of the terms or of the spirit of the Treaty of 1842.

Draft Treaty with Portugal, Article XVIII.

Extradition in India.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a printed draft of a Treaty between Her Majesty and the King of Portugal, Article XVIII of which dealt with the question of extradition between the possessions of their respective Majesties in India; and that he was to request that we would take that Article into our consideration, together with a letter from the India Office which Lord Tenterden was likewise to inclose, and that we would favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion:—

1. Whether, in view of section 3 of the Imperial Extradition Act of 1870, it was competent for the Crown to enter into the proposed arrangement?

2. Whether, in the event of our being of opinion that the Crown was not competent to enter into such arrangement, the difficulty might be got over by the issue, under section 18 of the Act of 1870, of an Order in Council suspending the operation of the Imperial Act in India.

That Lord Tenterden was also to request any suggestions regarding that matter which might occur to us.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, bearing date the 19th instant, stating that with reference to the letter of the 1st instant relative to the draft Treaty with Portugal, he was directed by your Lordship to submit the following question for our opinion:—

Whether, having in view the Imperial Extradition Acts of 1870 and 1873, and the Indian Extradition Act of 1872, copies of which were inclosed, the proposed Article in the draft Treaty relating to extradition between British and Portuguese India could be entered into by the Crown.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that Mr. Hope, a Member of the Council for India, who had been for some time occupied in the negotiation of the proposed Treaty, would be happy to furnish us with any information on that matter, either verbally or in writing, should we desire it.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot suspend Extradition Acts.

That the Imperial Acts of 1870 and 1873 cannot, in our opinion, be applied by Order in Council, suspending the operation of those Acts in India, and by that means giving effect to the XVIIIth Article of the proposed Treaty with Portugal.

Indian Legislature must provide for carrying out Treaty.

But we think this proposed Article relating to extradition between British and Portuguese India can be entered into by the Crown, and that provision for carrying the Article into effect can be made by the Legislature of India.

Extradition between Hong Kong and Macao.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 16th instant, stating that the serious attention of the Governments of this country and Portugal had of late been drawn to the necessity of coming to some arrangement for checking the immunity now enjoyed by criminals in the neighbouring Colonies of Hong Kong and Macao, who, by reason of the absence of an Extradition Treaty between this country and Portugal, were enabled to evade the pursuit of justice.

Portuguese objection to capital punishment.

That the aversion felt by the Portuguese Government to capital punishment in cases of murder had hitherto presented an obstacle to the conclusion of an Extradition Treaty between the two countries.

That to obviate that difficulty Her Majesty's Government were now considering the expediency of coming to a local arrangement with the Government of Portugal for the mutual surrender of criminals between the Governments of Hong Kong and Macao, such as was proposed in the letter from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office of the 28th September last, by consenting to strike out altogether the crime of murder from the schedule of Extradition Crimes in "the Hong Kong and Macao Extradition Ordinance, 1870," which had not yet come into operation for the reasons above mentioned, or by undertaking that in the event of a fugitive surrendered to the Hong Kong Government by the Macao authorities being tried for murder and sentenced to death, the sentence should be commuted to one of imprisonment for life, or for a shorter period.

As to undertaking to commute sentences of death.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was pleased to inclose, for our information, together with the papers relating to this matter, copies of the Hong Kong and Macao Extradition Ordinance (No. 13 of 1870) and of the Hong Kong Ordinance No. 1 of 1860 relative to conditional pardons; and to state that your Lordship would be glad if we would take the question into our consideration, and favour you with our opinion whether the above proposal could legally be carried out as regards the undertaking to commute any sentence of death.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Government has no power to do so. Sir T. Henry's opinion.

That, in our opinion, the proposal to commute any sentence of death is inadmissible,—"The Government has no power to stipulate that the punishment ordained by law should not be carried into effect." These words are taken from the letter of Sir Thomas Henry to Mr. Liddell, 19th August, 1871, and we entirely concur with the opinions expressed in that letter.

My Lord,

Marriage at Taganrog.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th January ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith, for our consideration, a despatch which had been addressed to your Lordship by Her Majesty's Consul at Taganrog, asking for instructions as to whether he was legally entitled to perform the marriage ceremony at his Consulate between Duncan Lewis Hoyland, a British subject, and a Russian lady named Daria Smalianinoff, these persons having already been united in wedlock at a Russian Orthodox Church.

British and Russian subject, first married at Russian church.

As to Consular district of Taganrog.

That from the wording of Mr. Consul Carruthers' Commission, a copy of which was inclosed, your Lordship presumed that the Province of Ekaterinoslaff, which seemed to be divided into two portions, in one of which Taganrog was situate, was part of the Consular district of Taganrog within the meaning of the Consular Marriage Act, and that, therefore, Mr. Carruthers might properly marry the parties, who resided in the province in question, upon the conditions and formalities prescribed by the Consular Marriages Act being complied with, as if no previous ceremony had taken place, the words "bachelor" and "spinster" being left out of the marriage notice. That before, however, replying to the Consul's despatch, your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we concur in that view, and if not to be favoured with our opinion on the questions raised by Mr. Carruthers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

May be performed at British Consulate, but unnecessary.

That we assume first that Mr. Carruthers is a Consul duly authorized to solemnize and register marriages under the 12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68, and 31 and 32 Vict., cap. 61, and secondly, that the 6th section of the former Act, requiring the residence of both the parties for one calendar month within the district of the Consul, and the other conditions there required, have been complied with, and on these assumptions we are of opinion that Mr. Carruthers may properly solemnize the intended marriage.

Previous marriage by lex loci is valid everywhere.

We would, however, submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that the previous marriage, if valid according to lex loci, is valid everywhere, and that the intended Consular marriage may have effect only within Her Majesty's dominions, so that the Consular marriage is possibly unnecessary.

Consul Carruthers' Commission.

VICTORIA, by the grace of God, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c., &c., to all and singular to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Whereas, We have thought it necessary for the encouragement of Our subjects trading to the ports and places on the Sea of Azoff, to appoint a Consul to reside at Taganrog to take care of the affairs of our said subjects, and to aid and assist them in all their lawful and mercantile concerns, and to endeavour to procure for them that justice and equity which shall be agreeable to the friendship and good correspondence subsisting between Us and Our good brother the Emperor of all the Russias:

Now, know ye that We, reposing especial trust and confidence in the discretion and faithfulness of Our trusty and well-beloved John Patrick Carruthers, Esquire, have nominated, constituted, and appointed, and do by these presents nominate, constitute, and appoint him, the said John Patrick Carruthers, to be our Consul at Taganrog. Hereby giving and granting unto him full power and authority by all lawful means to aid and protect Our merchants and others our subjects trading or that shall trade to or reside at Taganrog aforesaid, and all other ports and places on the Sea of Azoff. To have and to hold the said office during Our pleasure in as full and ample a manner as the Consul of the most favoured nations resident in the dominions of our said good brother do hold and enjoy their employments. And We do in a friendly manner desire Our said good brother the Emperor of all the Russias to receive and admit him, the said John Patrick Carruthers, for our Consul as aforesaid, and upon all reasonable requests to do him that justice and afford him that assistance which may testify his friendship to Us, and which We shall upon all occasions be ready to acknowledge.

And We do hereby strictly enjoin and require all Our subjects to take due notice of this Our Commission, and yield obedience thereto.

Claim of Messrs. Bailey and Leatham ("Elizabeth" collision case).

Refusal to return money paid into Russian Court.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 29th June last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us the papers* relative to the misappropriation by a Russian official, since deceased, of a sum of money deposited by Messrs. Bailey and Leatham on the occasion of a collision between their steamer "Elizabeth" and a Russian coal lighter, and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further steps which should be taken in regard to that case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Lord A. Loftus may properly be instructed to bring this case again to the notice of M. de Giers, and to represent that the case is not one in which a creditor is seeking to recover money from the representatives of a deceased debtor. But it is a case in which a British subject, having an action brought against him in a Russian Court of Justice, could not, by the law of Russia, defend himself until he had deposited in the hands of an officer of that Court a sum of money.

Russia must repay money.

That the action having been decided in favour of the British subject, and he now being entitled by the law of Russia to receive back the money deposited in the hands of the officer of the Court, that is, in effect, paid into the Court of Justice, the British subject should not, like an ordinary creditor, be compelled to sue the representatives of Messrs. Brook's trade marks. Fraudulent imitation at Warsaw.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers relative to certain legal proceedings, in which Messrs. Jonas Brook Brothers and Co., of Huddersfield, had been engaged at Warsaw with respect to a fraudulent imitation of their trade marks.

That we should observe from Lord Augustus Loftus' despatch No. 23, Commercial, of the 18th June, that it was contended, on the part of the Russian Government—

1. That the declaration of the 11th July, 1871, was inapplicable to that case, because the thread sold at Warsaw was not sold to the public as coming from Messrs. Brook's manufactory.

2. That the difference of price showed the commercial good faith of the vendor, Benkel, who had received the goods in the regular way from Tillman's factory in Silesia; and

3. That before Benkel could be blamed for selling the counterfeit marks, the counterfeiting must be brought home to Tillman.

That Her Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburgh moreover suggested that because Tillman had registered and advertised the marks as his own in Germany under the German Law, the decision, whether they were counterfeit or not, rested with the German Tribunal.

That it would be seen from Messrs. Brook's letter of the 13th ultimo that they controvert, for the reasons therein given, the opinions above expressed, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we concurred in Messrs. Brook's refutation of the points urged by M. de Giers and Lord Augustus Loftus.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we entirely concur in the Messrs. Brook's refutation of the points urged by M. de Giers.

Lord A. Loftus was, we presume, not altogether aware of the fact that Messrs. Brook had succeeded in their proceedings in Germany against Tillman.

Fraud proved. Violation of Trade Marks Declaration.

But in the view which we take of the proceedings in Russia what Tillman did is immaterial, since the imitation was proved; the price at which the thread was sold showed the fraud and knowledge of the fraud, and the declaration prohibits the offering goods for sale bearing fraudulent trade marks wherever manufactured.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th ultimo, forwarding to us therewith, by your Lordship's direction, a letter from Mr. Devereux* preferring a claim against the Russian Government for 1,027*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* on account of the detention of the brig "Industry" in the Danube from the 28th April, 1877, to the 22nd March, 1878. The circumstances under which the vessel in question was detained are detailed in Mr. Devereux's letter, and in the despatches from Her Majesty's Consul at Galatz,* which were also inclosed. That two letters from the Board of Trade were also forwarded, the second of which contained observations as to the manner in which the case might be regarded from the point of view of international law.

Detained on account of danger of navigation.

That we would perceive from the inclosures in Mr. Consul Sanderson's despatch No. 41 of the 5th May, that the reason assigned for the detention of the vessel by the Russian Consul was the danger that she would incur from measures taken by the Russian military authorities to impede the navigation of the river between Ibraila and Reni. That, under those circumstances, if the observations contained in the letter from the Board of Trade were correct, it would appear that the detention of the "Industry" did not justify any claim as of right against the Russian Government unless it be held that the Russian authorities were bound to give longer notice, and to allow a reasonable time for neutral vessels to clear out.

Shortness of notice given to neutral vessels.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any representation could properly be made to the Russian Government on behalf of Mr. Devereux.

That some further papers were inclosed to complete the correspondence, which we were requested to be so good as to return with our reply.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

May represent case to Russian Government, but cannot make claim as of right.

That the circumstances connected with the detention of the "Industry" are such that a representation may, in our opinion, properly be made to the Russian Government on behalf of Mr. Devereux for a favourable consideration of his case.

The circumstances to which we particularly refer are the shortness of the notice given to the master to take his vessel away, the impossibility of his being able to remove the vessel in that short time without the aid of a tug, an impossibility which must have been known to the Russian authorities on the spot, and the willingness of the master to take his vessel away had he been able to do so.

But we think a claim as of right cannot properly be made against the Russian Government who exercised a right of war.

Gibraltar. Smuggling, &c. Order in Council to regulate trade.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 27th March last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a letter and its inclosures from the Colonial Office relative to the proposed issue of an Order in Council for regulating the trade of Gibraltar, and checking the smuggling trade carried on between that port and the Spanish coast, and also the draft of the answer which, if we should concur therein, it was proposed to return to the Colonial Office.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and inform his Lordship whether we concurred in the terms of the proposed answer. That we should observe from the concluding paragraph of the Colonial Office letter that the object of the order was to exercise police jurisdiction over waters which, though claimed as British territorial waters, had hitherto been exempt from police control.

* Consul Sanderson, Nos. 29, 31, 33, 38, 41, and 43 of 1877; Board of Trade, May 2 and 4; Lord A. Loftus, No. 33, 1877; to Lord A. Loftus, No. 405; Mr. Plunkett, No. 670, 1878.

That the power intended to be given to the Governor to define the limits of the port was probably suggested by the provisions of section 11 of the Customs Consolidation Act of 1876 (39 and 40 Vict., cap. 36), whereby the Lords of the Treasury may by warrant enlarge the limits of ports in the United Kingdom. But that it might perhaps be considered that that power was vested in their Lordships for customs purposes only, and that Lord Derby wished to be informed whether it would, in our opinion, be desirable to defer the issue of the Order in Council until after the passing of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Bill then before Parliament.

In obedience to the commands of the Earl of Derby we have the honour to report—

Limits of port. Object to Governor having power to fix.

That, in our opinion, there are great objections to giving the Governor of Gibraltar power to declare what waters, round the rock of Gibraltar, shall be deemed to be within the limits of the port.

And we think the modification proposed in the draft answer to the letter of the Colonial Office, to the effect that a clause should be inserted in the Order in Council, requiring the sanction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies to any proclamation extending the limits of the port of Gibraltar, is also open to objection.

Nor do we think the objection to either or both of these measures would be removed by any act of the British Legislature.

Difficulty as to 3-mile limit.

The difficulty (apart from the meaning of the Treaty of Utrecht) in fixing the limit of British jurisdiction in the Bay of Gibraltar arises from the fact that the bay is less than 6 miles across. A 3-mile jurisdiction from the rock could not therefore be insisted upon in the greater part of the bay.

Any action which might be taken by the Governor, the Secretary of State, or Parliament in extending the limits of the port at all, and specially to bring those limits within the 3 miles of any Spanish ground, would therefore be at least a doubtful exercise of authority, and would certainly be offensive to the Spanish Government.

Fixed line of demarcation should be settled with Spain.

We suggest for consideration and with reference to the difficulty which is referred to in the draft answer, as existing between the Spanish and English Governments, that in the bay a defined and fixed line dividing the English and Spanish waters in the bay should be settled by the two Governments.

Outside the bay and beyond 3 miles from the Spanish shore no objection can be taken by Spain to British jurisdiction except on the Mediterranean side of the rock, within 3 miles of the Spanish lines.

In this last case the line dividing the Spanish and British waters should also be settled by the two Governments.

Order in Council is objectionable.

These observations go, we are aware, to the very point of the Order in Council; but, since the Order seems to us open to serious objections in principle, and, if made, may lead to grave remonstrance on the part of the Spanish Government, we have thought we were bound to lay them before your Lordship.

Verbal alterations if persisted in.

If, however, your Lordship should be of opinion that the principle of the proposed Order in Council should be adopted, we think the following verbal alterations may properly be made:

In the heading of the Order, after the words "other boats" should be added the words "of any description."

In paragraph 2, after the words "pulling or sailing," should be added the words "being towed, drifting, or moving in any manner or by any means."

In paragraph 3, the words "of any description" should be added after the word "boat."

In the same paragraph after "moved from" should be added the words "or in any manner with or without clearing left."

My Lord,

Case of the "Octavia." Spanish reply to claim for indemnity.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir J. Pauncefote's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 20th November last,* he was directed to transmit to us a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, inclosing the reply of the Spanish Government to the application which he made to them by direction of the Earl of Derby for the payment of an indemnity in the case of the "Octavia," and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take that despatch into our consideration, together with the previous papers, which were likewise inclosed, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the rejoinder which Sir John Walsham should be instructed to make to the arguments of the Spanish Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Claim was on account of illegal seizure and detention.

That the Spanish Minister may, in answer to his note of the 14th May last to Sir John Walsham, properly be reminded that the claim made by Her Majesty's Government for the restoration of the "Octavia" and her cargo, and for compensation to the owners and the master and crew, was not, as the Spanish Minister supposes, made on the ground that the seizure took place in waters where there was no power lawfully to effect the seizure, but on the ground that the ship was seized and detained, and her master and crew imprisoned for several days, when a careful examination of the ship's papers and her crew would have led to the immediate—as they did to the subsequent—release of both ship and crew.

Her Majesty's Government readily admits that circumstances connected with the "Octavia" may have justified the stopping and visiting that vessel; and Her Majesty's Government would probably have made no claim on behalf of the owners, for any compensation if the ship herself and the crew had been at once restored and released.

The case, however, assumes a different aspect when the detention and imprisonment have extended over so long a time as they were allowed by the Spanish authorities to do.

Her Majesty's Government do not question the good faith of the Spanish authorities, but cannot help observing upon what slight suspicions they may be disposed to act, when the Spanish Minister invites Sir John Walsham to form an idea of the sincerity of the assurances of innocence put forward by the present captain of the "Octavia," from the fact that some former captain of the "Octavia" has visited and is destined to command some other vessel suspected of preparing an expedition to the coast of Cuba.

The simple question is, whether the seizure and detention were legal or not.

Seizure and detention were illegal. Claim for compensation cannot be withdrawn.

The Spanish Government excuses, but admits the illegality of that seizure and detention. But whilst the illegal conduct of the Spanish authorities may be excusable in the eyes of their own Government, Her Majesty's Government is bound to protect Her Majesty's subjects from an illegal act, and procure compensation for the consequences of an illegal act.

Her Majesty's Government, still considering that the antecedents of the vessel and other circumstances stated by the Spanish Minister did not justify the lengthened detention of the ship, and imprisonment of the passengers and crew, regret that the claims for compensation cannot be now withdrawn.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor as to the "Octavia."

Case of the "Octavia."

Ground of claim. Seizure on high seas.

Aggravated by detention of ship and crew.

THE grounds upon which, as it seems to me, compensation ought to be claimed (so far as it ought to be claimed) against the Spanish Government, are the same as those upon which a release of the ship was demanded in the despatch of the 27th May, 1876, and care should be taken that those grounds are not now changed. I mention this in the first instance, because I observe that the Report of the Law Officers of the 19th July last proposes that the Spanish Minister should be told that the claim for compensation is not made on the ground that the seizure took place on the high seas, but on the ground that the ship was detained and the crew imprisoned, when a careful examination of the ship's papers ought to have led to their immediate release. I do not think this is correct, and by putting the case in this way we should be virtually admitting that the seizure on the high seas was legal. Our principal ground of complaint was that the ship was, at the time of the capture, a British ship sailing on the high seas. No doubt the wrongful act of her seizure was very much aggravated by the detention of the ship and crew long after the time when any possible doubt as to the place of capture and as to the nationality of the ship and the regularity of her papers must have been removed.

Claims must be insisted on.

2. As regards compensation, it seems to me that the claims, other than that of Cordova, ought to be insisted on, and that as to them there is nothing in the note of the Spanish Minister of the 14th May last which justifies a refusal by the Spanish Government to entertain those claims.

As to owner's claim for ship.

Spain cannot refuse on ground of breach of British law by a British ship.

3. As to the claim of Cordova in respect to the ship, I do not think that it lies in the mouth of the Spanish Government to object to that claim, modified and limited as it has been put before them. Even supposing that the ship broke her engagement to proceed direct to New York, and even supposing that she was fitted out or used in contravention of the English Foreign Enlistment Act, those are not matters with which the Spanish Government have anything to do. The ship had not actually committed any act of hostility against the Spanish Government, and she was not within their jurisdiction, but, as has been already said, on the high seas. I do not therefore think that we should admit that it is open to the Spanish Government to urge as a reason why they should not pay compensation for wrongfully seizing and detaining a British ship on the high seas that the ship had, when within British jurisdiction, committed some violation of British municipal law.

But British Government should not claim in such a case.

Inquiry should be made as to breach of Foreign Enlistment Act, &c.

4. But it is altogether a different thing whether, if the ship has violated our municipal law and rendered herself liable to forfeiture, we should put ourselves forward to obtain compensation to her owner for her seizure. If it is the case that the ship was released, when detained in Jamaica, under an engagement to proceed direct to New York, and if she did not in good faith so proceed, and still more if it is the fact that she is really owned by foreigners, Cordova being only their agent, and that she was fitted out or used, or intended to be used, contrary to the Foreign Enlistment Act, then I think we should decline to press Cordova's claim as to the ship. I think the Government should direct some investigation into this matter, to be made in whatever place the information is most likely to be obtained, and should call upon Cordova to give them such assistance and produce such evidence as they require. I think in the meantime that this part of the claim against the Spanish Government ought not to be relinquished, but that it should be kept in abeyance, and the Spanish Government should be told that we are making the investigation, not because we think them entitled to inquire whether there has been a violation of our law, but because we think that we ourselves are bound to see that our law is vindicated.

My Lord,

Spanish encroachments in Sulu Archipelago.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 16th ultimo, stating that the rapid encroachments of the Spaniards in the Sulu Archipelago, and the molestation and annoyance occasioned thereby to foreign trade, compelled the Governments of Great Britain and Germany in 1876 to take measures for the protection of their subjects and others trading in those waters.

That their Representatives were accordingly instructed to address a remonstrance to the Spanish Government, and negotiations ensued which resulted in the signing of a Protocol, dated the 11th March, 1877, a copy of which was annexed thereto.

Freedom of trade for Great Britain and Germany secured by Protocol, except in parts in actual possession of Spain.

That the object of that Protocol was to secure to British and German vessels complete freedom of trade and fishery, and entire immunity from any duties, or impositions, or interference whatever from the Spanish authorities in the Sulu Archipelago, except at the particular points then in the possession of Spain; and it was further agreed that if Spain took effective possession of any other points, and gave the two Governments special notice thereof, and of the establishment there of a sufficient official staff for the necessities of trade, such new points, after such official publication as was prescribed, would be treated on the same footing as those in the actual possession of Spain at the date of the Protocol.

That since the signature of that document the Spanish authorities had compelled the Sultan of Sulu to cede to the Spanish Crown two-thirds of the territory which remained to His Highness at the time the Protocol was signed.

New Treaty between Sulu and Spain.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote inclosed a Report[*] from Mr. Treacher, the Acting Governor of Labuan, who was sent on a special mission to Sulu to ascertain the precise state of affairs.

Compulsory cession of further territory to Spain.

That Mr. Treacher reported that the Sultan had, against his will, signed the Treaty to the above effect, but that at the date of his visit the signatures of the Spanish authorities had not been affixed.

That your Lordship feared that that act of Spain created a new state of things which, if not objected to, in limine, might serve as a pretext hereafter for overriding or seriously weakening the effect of the Protocol.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore to request that we would have the goodness to report whether, in our opinion, the Governments of Great Britain and Germany were entitled to protest against that Treaty, or whether any action was necessary or expedient to protect their interests under the Protocol.

We were also honoured with Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 20th ultimo, forwarding to us, by direction of your Lordship, a further despatch[†] from the Acting British Consul-General in Borneo.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot protest against Treaty.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government cannot properly protest against this Treaty between Spain and the Sultan of Sulu.

May make a Treaty giving Great Britain the right to object, &c.

We are not sufficiently acquainted with the state of the different peoples and Governments in the Sulu Archipelago to say whether any and what action may be necessary or expedient to protect the English and German interests under the Protocol; but we suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that possibly Treaties might now be made by the German and English Governments giving them the right to object to the

My Lord,

Gibraltar water boundary.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 20th July last, stating that with reference to our Report of the 14th of that month, pointing out the objections to the proposed Order in Council giving the Governor of Gibraltar power to determine what waters round the rock should be deemed to be within the limits of the port, and suggesting that a defined and fixed line in the bay should be adopted as the boundary between British and Spanish waters, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the Colonial Office* accepting the proposal of a "medium filum aquæ," but recommending that, pending the settlement of that question, an Order in Council should be issued extending the limits of the port all round the rock, at a distance not greater than the existing anchorage and quarantine ground.

Proposed provisional Order in Council extending.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was further pleased to state that your Lordship would be glad if we would take this further suggestion into our consideration, and inform your Lordship whether we saw any objection to such an arrangement.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Unnecessary. Police have necessary powers.

That we gather from Lord Cadogan's letter that the police of the port have the required powers within the limits of the anchorage and quarantine ground in the bay.

Might be misconstrued.

It seems to us, therefore, that nothing would be gained by Order in Council confirming or recognizing these powers; and we entirely concur in the observation of Sir J. Pauncefote, that such an Order might be construed into an admission that our legislative power extends no further.

No interference with Spanish Mediterranean waters.

Different considerations apply to the waters round Europa Point and at the back of the rock. But even as to these waters we doubt whether it is expedient to make any Order in Council.

Should, however, such an order be deemed necessary, great care must be taken that Spanish waters on the Mediterranean side be not interfered with.

I AM sorry that I have kept the "Octavia" papers (which I return in separate cover) so long. The facts which appear in the legal proceedings at Jamaica show that the Colonial Government there have gone so far in recognizing Cordova as entitled to British protection and intervention that (scoundrel though he may be, and probably is) I do not think he can now be thrown overboard, or called on to disprove mere suspicion. I think the best way would be to settle with the Spanish Government for as small a sum as can fairly be asked, on the lines suggested in Mr. West's last despatch. There seems to have been no deterioration of the ship, and the claim is mainly the minor one for demurrage, &c.

Temple, May 13, 1878.

My Lord,

Consular Court cases at Tunis. Mode of procedure.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that he was to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis,* in which he applied for the opinion of the Law Advisers of the Crown as to the manner in which he should proceed as Judge of Her Majesty's Provincial Consular Court at Tunis in two suits pending therein, the particulars of which were given in a memorandum inclosed.

That the difficulties felt by the Consul-General related mainly to matters of procedure.

That as regards the question raised in the first suit, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that under section 122 of the Levant Order in Council, suits were commenced by a petition which was to be served on the defendant, and that by section 135 a suit might be set down for hearing by order of the Court after the expiration of the time allowed to the defendants for answering the petition.

That by section 170 provision was made for the determination of the suit ex parte, where the defendant was absent at the hearing, and service of the petition was proved.

Camilleri case.

That the Consul-General stated that in that case the plaint (by which he probably referred to the petition) was served on Camilleri and his wife, and on the widow Busultil, and that though the infant children of the testator were also out of the jurisdiction, the Court had appointed curators of their interests. As regards the second suit no petition had been served, and the Consul-General stated that all the defendants were out of the jurisdiction of the Court, though the property which was the subject-matter of the suit was within it. The infant children, as before stated, were represented by curators. That the provisions of the Order in Council as to the service of documents were contained in section 53, and seemed to meet the case of defendants out of the jurisdiction.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the questions raised by Sir Richard Wood.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Order may be made notwithstanding absence of defendants.

That in respect of the first suit we are of opinion that, assuming all the preliminary steps in the cause to have been properly taken, the Court may proceed, under section 170 of the Order in Council, to hear the suit, and make the order under section 171, notwithstanding the absence of the defendants, and, if necessary, decree the sale of the property mortgaged; but the Court in making this Decree, and notwithstanding the appointment of curators to the three minors, must take care that the Order in no way prejudices their interests.

In respect to the second suit, the deed of cession is valid, but nothing will pass under that deed except the interest of the widow, and no Decree can be made against the estate generally, since the minors have an interest in that estate subject to their mother's life.

The fourth share mortgaged by Rosa, and, we presume, her husband, must be dealt with by the Court having regard to the interest of the mortgagees in the first suit, and to the interests of the minors in the other three-fourths.

Petition must be served, &c.

But as the petition in this second suit has not been served, service must be effected in one of the ways pointed out in section 53 of the Order in Council.

In answering the questions of the Consul-General, we assume that the subject-matters are within the jurisdiction of his Court, and that the principles upon which he is to act are the same with those of English law.

My Lord,

G. Camillieri sentenced to imprisonment by Tunis Consular Court.

Appeal on ground of illegality of sentence.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 16th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch which had been received from the Acting Judge at Constantinople (No. 117, 28th December), requesting to be furnished with instructions respecting an application which had been made to Her Majesty's Supreme Consular Court for the release of Guiseppe Vicenzo Muscat Camillieri, who was condemned by the Consular Court at Tunis to one year's imprisonment with hard labour in the gaol of Malta, on the ground that the proceedings at Tunis under the Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap 96, sec. 80, were void if taken without the previous sanction of Her Majesty's Attorney-General.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was also to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul-General at Tunis (No. 15, 17th July), inclosing a copy of the sentence pronounced against Camillieri on the 7th July last.

That the Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, for the regulations of Consular jurisdiction in the Levant, provided, by section 6, that Her Majesty's criminal jurisdiction should be exercised in conformity with the English Statute Law "as far as circumstances permit," and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, under those words, it was competent to the Judge of the Consular Court at Tunis to dispense with the consent of Her Majesty's Attorney-General in applying the provisions of section 80 of the Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 96, to the case before him.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Consular Judge not right in dispensing with consent of Attorney-General.

That, in our opinion, under the words "as far as circumstances permit," it was not competent to the Judge of the Consular Court at Tunis to dispense with the consent of Her Majesty's Attorney-General in applying the provisions of section 80 of the Act 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 96, to the case before him.

But person convicted cannot object on those grounds.

We may add, however, that it will not be open to the person who has been convicted to raise by writ of error any objection to the proceedings, on the ground that the consent of the Attorney-General was not obtained (see "Knowlden and others v. the Queen," in Error 33, L. I. M. C. 219).

My Lord,

British and Italian Consular Courts, Constantinople. Conflict of jurisdiction.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers noted in the margin* in relation to a conflict of jurisdiction which had arisen between the British and Italian Consular Courts at Constantinople. That the facts of the case were fully stated in the Report of Mr. Burrell, the Acting Judge of Her Majesty's Consular Court, and in his letter to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, which form Inclosures 1 and 2 in Mr. Layard's despatch No. 81 of the 3rd December last.

Case of Perdecari and Cangellari.

That Mr. Burrell, in his Report, referred to most of the documents which it was necessary to peruse in considering the question, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to draw our attention more particularly to the Judgment of the Italian Consular Court (Translation No. 17), in which the Judge, while admitting that the rule, "Actor sequitur forum rei," should prevail in the administration of justice among the various foreign nationalities in the Levant, attempted to justify his proceedings in the present case on the ground that Perdecari, the plaintiff in the British Consular Court, became the actor in the Italian Consular Court from the date of the application made by the British Court (Translation No. 10), in pursuance of which the seals of both Courts were affixed on the premises containing the property in dispute, and that Perdecari, though not an Italian subject, was thereby brought under the jurisdiction of the Italian Court in the proceedings instituted therein by Spiridione Cangellari, and to which he was made a party, judgment being eventually passed against him by default; and to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the two questions raised by Mr. Burrell at the close of his Report, and also with any observations which we might desire to make on the case, especially with reference to the course which should be followed with a view to the settlement of the difficulty which had arisen.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the proceedings before the Italian Consular Court were either in aid of, and incidental to, the principal cause before the British Consular Court, or those proceedings were distinct from the case before the British Court.

If the first of these alternatives be right, then the intervention of Spiridione did not alter the relation of the parties to the original or principal cause, and the Italian Consular Court had no jurisdiction, and could not proceed in a cause in which a British subject was the defendant.

The British subject was defendant.

If the latter alternative be right, then the heading of the Judgment of the Italian Court and the title of the causes, "Nella causa vertente infra Spiridione Cangellari possidente e commerciante suddito Italiano residente in questa citta contra Costantino Cangellari, protetto Britannico, e Giovanni Perdicari, suddito Russo," shows that the actor was Spiridione and the rei as defendants were respectively British and Russian subjects, in which case also the Italian Consular Court would have no jurisdiction.

Italian Court has no jurisdiction.

In answer, therefore, to the two questions raised by Mr. Burrell, we are of opinion that the Italian Consular Court was mistaken in considering Perdecari as plaintiff and Spiridione as defendant in the proceedings before that Court.

Her Majesty's Government, we suggest, may properly endeavour to come to a settlement of the question with the Italian Government, and it would be only as a last resort that the matter should be referred for arbitration.

That Lord Tenterden was to inclose a memorandum prepared by Mr. Hertslet of instances in which blockades have been suspended during an armistice, by express declaration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Use influence to prevent capture of vessels.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government may properly use their influence to prevent British or other ships laden with cargoes for England, and sailing from Odessa and other Black Sea ports, in the event of an armistice, from being seized at the Bosphorus.

Armistice generally suspends blockade. If exception is intended, it should be notified.

An armistice by sea and by land will, as a general rule, suspend the operation of a blockade; and if the general rule is not accepted, the intended exception should, for the information of neutrals, be stated in the terms of the armistice.

Blockade of Albanian coast abandoned.

Coast interdicted to neutral vessels.

Government have abandoned the intention of establishing a blockade inter gentes of a portion of the Albanian coast, but have adopted the course of notifying that access to the part of the coast lying between Spizza and the mouth of the Boyana, though still (so far as Her Majesty's Government have been able to ascertain) in the possession and under the control of the Porte, was interdicted to neutral vessels, and that all such vessels approaching the coast within the limits above specified would be warned off by the Turkish cruisers, but would not be otherwise interfered with unless they should carry contraband of war, in which case the note stated that the contraband goods would be seized, and the vessel would be released "avec les mêmes formalités que s'il avait été rencontré en pleine mer."

Contraband of war to be seized; vessel released.

That the words above cited were somewhat obscure, inasmuch as a neutral vessel captured on the high seas for carrying contraband of war was not released, but taken to a Prize Court for adjudication.

That it would seem, however, that the whole course of action indicated in the note was of a municipal character, and not founded on the law of nations in relation to blockade and contraband of war; that a question therefore appeared to arise of a similar kind to that which was considered in 1861 with reference to the closing of the ports of New Grenada (Volume of Law Officers' Reports for that year No. 172, p. 152) and to the proposed closing of the Confederate ports by Act of Congress during the civil war in America (ibid., No. 142, p. 132); and to request that we would take Mr. Layard's despatch and its inclosure into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the intended action of the Porte, as signified in the note of Server Pasha, was open to any objection on the part of Her Majesty's Government, or whether its substance might properly be published in the "Gazette."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Course open to objection.

That the intended action of the Porte, as signified in Server Pasha's note to Mr. Layard, is open to objection.

Closing of ports unfriendly.

The Sultan may, no doubt, unless prevented by the provisions of Treaties, close the ports and coasts in the possession and occupation of the Porte to the ships and commerce of other nations. The so closing of the ports and coasts would, however, be a most unfriendly act, and should not, we think, be submitted to without remonstrance.

Seizure of goods at will of Turkish commander is contrary to practice of nations.

The measures to be taken against ships carrying contraband of war are possibly meant to be a modification in favour of neutrals of the extreme penalties for carrying contraband of war, but amount in effect to authorizing the confiscation of goods said to be contraband of war by and at the mere will of the commander of the Turkish cruiser, and are contrary to the practice of nations.

Mr. Layard may, we are of opinion, properly be instructed to inform the Porte to this effect.

The substance of the note should not be published in the "Gazette."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands I have the honour to report—

I am unable to concur in the opinion entertained by the Solicitor-General and Dr. Deane. In my opinion Musurus Pasha may be informed—

Consular Courts have jurisdiction, but cannot compel such persons to appear.

That the Consular Courts of Her Majesty in the Ottoman Empire have jurisdiction to try a British subject for an offence against section 4 of the Foreign Enlistment Act. The Court would not, however, be able to compel any person in the service of His Majesty the Sultan to appear before it for the purposes of trial; and this being so, the jurisdiction in question ought not to be exercised in such case.

My Lord,

British subjects in service of the Porte.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 2nd October last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter which had been addressed to your Lordship by the Turkish Ambassador, in which his Excellency took exception to a statement made by Mr. Bourke in the House of Commons on the 14th August last in reply to a question addressed to him by Sir George Campbell, as to whether British subjects entering the naval or military service of the Porte during the present war contrary to the provisions of the 4th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act were liable to be tried and punished for that offence before Her Britannic Majesty's Consular Courts in the Levant, and whether instructions had been sent to Her Majesty's Consuls in Turkey to enforce the penalties of the Act in the case of British subjects offending against the provision above referred to.

Breaches of Foreign Enlistment Act.

Liability to trial in British Consular Courts.

That Lord Tenterden was also to transmit to us a printed memorandum on the jurisdiction of Her Britannic Majesty's Courts in the Levant and on the question raised by the Turkish Ambassador, together with a copy of the Capitulations and of the Parliamentary papers therein referred to, and that he (Lord Tenterden) was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be sent to his Excellency's communication.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the question upon which our opinion is in this case asked is, whether Her Majesty's Consuls in Turkey can there try a British subject who has entered into the military or naval service of the Porte, contrary to the provisions of the 4th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870.

The memorandum* for the guidance of Her Majesty's Consular servants in the Levant with reference to the exercise of jurisdiction under the Order in Council of the 19th June, 1844, contains two passages which, we think, are very material in considering this question—

"The right to exercise jurisdiction depends on the extent to which that right has been conceded by the Sultans of Turkey to the British Crown, and therefore the right is strictly limited to the terms in which the concession is made.

"And Christian Powers in taking advantage of this concession are bound to provide as far as possible against any injurious effect resulting from it to the territorial Sovereign."

Such persons are under protection of territorial Sovereign.

So long as the British subject is in Turkey and in the military or naval service of the Porte, he is under protection vi et jure of the territorial Sovereign. As a matter of fact, he cannot be in person brought before the Consular Court, for the power to enforce the process of the Court would not exist.

As a matter of right the jurisdiction of the Consular Court is barred by a condition which we think is implied in and underlies the Capitulations, and is well expressed by the latter passage cited from the memorandum, that no injurious effect shall result to the territorial Sovereign in the exercise of a foreign jurisdiction.

Consular Courts have no jurisdiction, and should not exercise it if they had.

We are therefore of opinion that Her Majesty's Consular Courts in the Levant have no jurisdiction to there try a British subject who has entered the military or naval service of the Porte. And if we thought such jurisdiction might, under the strict letter of law applicable, be deemed to exist, we are clearly of opinion, considering the difficulty of exercising such jurisdiction, that no attempt should be made to exercise it.

We think all questions of neutrality and extradition are immaterial, and we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that his Excellency the Turkish Ambassador may, in reply to his letter, be informed that Her Majesty's Consuls in the Levant will be instructed not to exercise any jurisdiction against British subjects who may have offended under the 4th section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870.

My Lord,

British and Italian Consular Courts, Constantinople. Conflict of jurisdiction.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in a letter from Mr. Lister of the 4th May instant, stating that the Earl of Derby communicated to Her Majesty's Ambassador at Rome the substance of our Report of the 25th January, on the case of a conflict of jurisdiction which had arisen between the British and Italian Consular Courts at Constantinople in the suit of "Perdicari v. Cangellari," with a request that his Excellency would move the Italian Government to cause the proceedings of the Italian Court to be annulled.

"Perdicari v. Cangellari." Italian Government cannot annul Consular Court decision, but suggest appeal to Court at Ancona.

That the accompanying despatch from Sir Augustus Paget would show us that the Italian Government replied that they could not annul administratively a sentence of the judicial authority, and that the proper remedy was by appeal to the Superior Court at Ancona.

That we should observe that they did not attempt to defend the Judgment impugned, and that they offered to instruct the Public Prosecutor to watch the appeal in the interests of justice; and Mr. Lister was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take the reply of the Italian Government into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it should be accepted as conclusive under the circumstances, and whether the course therein indicated should be followed by the parties interested.

That the previous papers in the case were also sent therewith for facility of reference, if required.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Agree. Italian advocate must be engaged by B Ambassador.

That the reply of the Italian Government may, in our opinion, be accepted, and the course indicated in that reply may be followed by the parties interested.

But as the case is upon the facts stated, one in which the Italian Consular Court has greatly mistaken its way, we respectfully suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that Sir A. Paget might properly be instructed to obtain the services of some leading Italian advocate, so that the interests of the British-protected subject may be fully supported before the Tribunal at Ancona.

My Lord,

Draft Slave Trade Convention.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying draft of a proposed Anti-Slave Trade Convention between Her Majesty and the Emperor of the Ottomans, and he was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to its sufficiency to carry out the object in view.

We were also honoured with Sir Julian Pauncefote's further letter of the 29th instant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Provision should be made for:—
Possession of slaves without certificates;

That we think some provision should be made in Article I for the punishment of persons who may be found in possession of slaves, and of masters of ships carrying slaves who are leaving the Ottoman territories without the certificates.

And that such uncertificated slaves should be set free.

Free blacks without passports;

We also think that provision should be made for the case of free blacks leaving Ottoman territories without passports.

Slaves without passports.

In Article VI the case of slaves who are not furnished with passports is not provided for, and this omission should, we think, be supplied.

In other respects the Convention is, in our opinion, sufficient to carry out the object in view.

Draft Convention.

Draft Convention.

HER Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and His Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans, being mutually animated by a sincere desire to co-operate for the extinction of the Traffic in African slaves, have resolved to conclude a Convention for the purpose of attaining this object, and with this view have named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say:—

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honourable Henry Austen Layard,

And His Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans,

Who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers found in good and due form, have agreed upon and concluded the following Articles:—

ARTICLE I.

His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans engages to prohibit absolutely from henceforward the importation of African slaves into any part of the Ottoman dominions or its dependencies, or their transit through Ottoman territories, whether by land or sea; and to punish severely, in the manner provided by Ottoman law, or in such manner as may hereafter be determined, any person or persons amenable to Ottoman jurisdiction, who may be found engaged, directly or indirectly, in the Traffic in African slaves. His Majesty further engages to prohibit absolutely any African slaves already existing in the Ottoman dominions from leaving Ottoman territories, except when accompanying their masters or mistresses as domestic servants, in which case each slave shall be furnished with a certificate stating his or her age, and otherwise describing them, and stating the particular capacity in which they accompany their master or mistress; and all free blacks leaving the Ottoman territories shall be furnished with passports certifying that they are free and at liberty to dispose of themselves without restriction or reserve.

ARTICLE II.

Any person or persons not being Ottoman subjects, who may be found engaged in the African Slave Traffic, either directly or indirectly, within the Ottoman dominions, or on board Ottoman vessels, shall, together with their accomplices, if any, be handed over for trial according to the laws of his country to the competent Tribunal, with the depositions (procès-verbaux) drawn up by the Ottoman superior authority of the place where the traffic has been proved; and all other documents or evidence ("éléments de conviction") handed over by the said authority, and destined to serve as proofs at the trial of the offenders, so far as those laws may admit of such proof.

All African slaves found in the possession of a dealer in slaves shall be liberated and dealt with in conformity with the provisions of Article      of the present Convention.

ARTICLE III.

Taking into consideration the impossibility of sending back to their homes African slaves who may be captured from slave-dealers and liberated, without exposing them to the risk of perishing from fatigue or want, or from falling again into slavery, the Ottoman Government engages to adopt adequate measures to insure the freedom of such captured Africans, and to see that they are properly cared for.

ARTICLE IV.

His Imperial Majesty engages to pursue as murderers all persons who may be found engaged in the mutilation of, or traffic in, children. If such persons are amenable to Ottoman jurisdiction, they shall be punished according to Ottoman laws; if not, they shall be handed over to the competent Tribunals, to be dealt with according as the law of their country directs, together with the depositions (procès-verbaux) and other documents or evidence ("éléments de conviction"), as laid down in Article II.

ARTICLE V.

With the view to the more effectual suppression of the Traffic in African slaves in the Red Sea, His Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans agrees that British cruisers may visit, search, and, if necessary, detain, in order to hand over to the nearest or most convenient Ottoman authority for trial, any Ottoman vessel which may be found engaged in the Traffic in African slaves, as well as any Ottoman vessel which may fairly be suspected of being intended for that Traffic, or which may have been engaged in it on the voyage during which she has been met with.

This right of visit and detention may be exercised in the Red Sea, in the Gulf of Aden, on the coast of Arabia, in the Persian Gulf, and on the East Coast of Africa, and in Ottoman maritime waters where no constituted authorities exist; and any vessel which may be detained by a British cruiser under the provisions of this Convention shall, together with her cargo and crew, be handed over for trial to the nearest or most convenient Ottoman authority.

Should there be good reason for believing that Ottoman or Egyptian vessels which may be found in Ottoman harbours or waters have African slaves on board for purposes of traffic or have been employed in the African Slave Traffic during the voyage on which they have been last engaged, such vessels, on being denounced by the Commander or other commissioned officer of a British cruiser, or by a British Consular Officer, shall be immediately searched by the Ottoman authorities, and any slaves who may be found on board shall be released and manumitted, and the vessel, her master, and crew handed over to the proper authorities, to be dealt with in accordance with Ottoman laws for the suppression of Slave Traffic.

All African slaves captured by a British cruiser on board an Ottoman vessel shall be at the disposal of the British Government, who undertake to adopt efficient measures for securing to them their freedom; and the vessel and her cargo shall be handed over for trial to the nearest or most convenient Ottoman authority.

Nevertheless, in all cases where it may not be possible for the commander of the cruiser making the capture to forward the captured slaves to a British depôt, or where from any other circumstance it may appear desirable and, in the interest of the captured slaves that they should be handed over to the Ottoman authorities, His Imperial Majesty engages, on application being made to his authorities by the Commander of the British cruiser, or by an officer deputed by him for that purpose, that they shall take over charge of the captured slaves, and secure to them their freedom, with all the other privileges stipulated for on behalf of African slaves captured by the Ottoman authorities.

1878

Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland agrees, on her part, that all vessels navigating under the British flag in the Red Sea, in the Gulf of Aden, on the coast of Arabia, in the Persian Gulf, and on the East Coast of Africa, or in the inland waters of the Ottoman Empire and her dependencies, which may be found engaged in the Traffic in African slaves, may be visited, seized, and detained by the Ottoman authorities; but it is agreed that the vessel and its cargo shall, together with its crew, be handed over to the nearest British authority for trial.

The captured slaves shall be released by the Ottoman authorities, and shall remain at their disposal.

If the competent Tribunal should decide that the seizure, detention, or prosecution was unjustifiable, the Government of the cruiser making the capture will be liable to pay to the Government of the prize a compensation appropriate to the circumstances of the case.

ARTICLE VI.

With the view to put a stop to the Traffic in African slaves which is notoriously carried on to a very large extent during the pilgrim season, and with the view also to occasion as little inconvenience as possible to persons who may be engaged in making the pilgrimage to Mecca or to the other holy cities in Arabia, it is hereby agreed that such persons may be accompanied on their pilgrimage by their slaves, being bonâ fide domestic servants, who shall be furnished with passports stating their sex, age, and containing such other description as may enable them to be identified; and it is further agreed that on returning from their pilgrimage they shall be accompanied only by those domestic slaves who landed with them in the first instances, and should any other African slaves be found in their company, such slaves shall be forfeited and manumitted, and the parties in whose possession they shall have been found shall be proceeded against as the law directs for engaging in Slave Traffic.

ARTICLE VII.

With the view to avoid any undue interference on the part of British cruisers engaged in the suppression of the Slave Trade with Ottoman vessels whose crews may be composed in whole or in part of African slaves, it is hereby agreed that every Ottoman vessel manned wholly or partly by African slaves shall be furnished with papers stating the voyage or employment on which she is engaged, and the number and description of the slaves on board, and any larger number of African slaves found on board than is authorized by the ship's papers shall render the vessel liable to detention and to be sent for adjudication before a competent Tribunal.

ARTICLE VIII.

His Majesty the Emperor of the Ottomans engages to publish such laws as may be necessary for giving effect to the present Convention, and for adequately punishing the parties who may be convicted of violating its provisions; and the two High Contracting Parties mutually agree to concert such further measures as experience may prove to be necessary for the complete attainment of the objects of the present Convention.

ARTICLE IX.

The present Convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Constantinople as soon as possible.

It shall come into operation                                        after the exchange of the ratifications.

In witness whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms.

Done at Constantinople this              day of              , one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

Extract from Porte's intended Circular to the Foreign Embassies at Constantinople.

S'IL y a lieu de procéder à l'arrestation d'un étranger pour imputation de crime ou de délit ou de pénétrer dans son domicile pour y procéder à des perquisitions ou à l'arrestation des personnes qui s'y seraient réfugiées, l'autorité Consulaire compétente devra prêter immédiatement son assistance à l'autorité militaire Ottomane qui lui en ferait la demande motivée. S'il n'est pas immédiatement satisfait à sa demande, l'autorité militaire pourra passer outre. Toutefois, pour pénétrer dans le domicile de l'étranger le délégué de la dite autorité devra se faire assister par trois habitants notables du voisinage, qui devront signer le procès-verbal de l'opération. Les personnes de nationalité étrangère sont justiciables des Conseils de Guerre régulièrement institués pour les crimes et délits contre la sûreté de l'État, contre l'ordre et la paix publique. Elles pourront être assistées de leurs Drogmans.

L'autorité militaire peut exiger des personnes de nationalité étrangère la remise de toute arme et munitions que ces personnes auraient en leur possession.

À l'effet de constater l'existence de ces objets et d'en assurer la remise, la dite autorité peut faire toutes réquisitions en procédant comme il est dit ci-dessus. Dans le cas où le territoire placé sous le régime de l'état de siège, ou une localité de ce territoire, sera exposé à une invasion immédiate de l'ennemi ou aura été le théâtre de troubles graves, l'autorité militaire pourra inviter les personnes de natonalité étrangère y demeurant de se transporter ailleurs dans un délai déterminé. Passé ce délai les étrangers qui seront restés n'auront à compter que sur la protection que l'autorité locale sera en mesure de leur accorder eu égard aux circonstances.

My Lord,

Foreigners and martial law. Porte's Circular.

WE were honoured with the commands of the Earl of Derby signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 11th December last, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us therewith the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople (No. 1296, November 4), forwarding copy of a Report of the Legal Advisers of the Porte as to the proceedings to be adopted towards foreigners in places under martial law, together with a letter from Mr. Burrell, the Acting Judge of the Supreme Court at Constantinople, to whom the Report was referred by Mr. Layard.

That the former papers bearing on the question were annexed for convenience of reference,* and Lord Tenterden was to transmit to us a copy of the Protocol of the 28th July, 1868, referred to in the Report of the Legal Advisers of the Turkish Government (as being dated 1867), and also the text of the Règlement of $\frac{12}{24}$th October, 1867, for drinking shops, referred to in the Report of Mr. Burrell, the Assistant Judge of Her Majesty's Consular Court.†

That an extract from the draft of the Circular which the Porte proposed to issue, with reference to the position of foreigners in districts where martial law was proclaimed, was inclosed in Mr. Layard's despatch No. 1087 of the 17th September last, and the only instructions which had been sent to Mr. Layard on the subject, were contained in Lord Derby's despatch to his Excellency No. 544A of the 21st of the same month.

No provision for Treaty privileges.

That with reference to the last paragraph of that despatch, Lord Tenterden was to refer us to Article 21 of the Règlement, relating to drinking shops, which secured to foreigners accused of offences against its provisions the same rights and privileges as they enjoyed in other cases under existing Treaties,—a provision which did not appear in the proposed Circular of the Porte relating to martial law.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take all those papers into consideration, and favour the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs with our opinion on the proposed Circular, and as to the instructions which should be given to Mr. Layard in reference thereto.

In obedience to the commands of the Earl of Derby we have the honour to report—

Circular justified by state of siege, &c.

That, in our opinion, the existence of a state of siege and of martial law will justify the measures indicated in the proposed Circular; and Mr. Layard should be instructed, in reference to that Circular, to direct British Consular authorities to comply, without delay, to any demand which may be made upon them for their presence by a competent Turkish official.

My Lord,

Illegal sentence passed by British Consul at Jeddah on a British Indian subject.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he was directed by the Secretary of State to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, and its inclosure, from Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge at Constantinople (Mr. Fawcett, No. 84), regarding a judgment pronounced on a British Indian subject by Her Majesty's Consul at Jeddah.

And its illegal reversal at Constantinople without appeal.

That it appeared to the Secretary of State that both Her Majesty's Consul at Jeddah and Her Majesty's Consul-General at Constantinople have exceeded their legal powers in this matter; the former by the sentence which he passed, and the latter by attempting to reverse that sentence by a mere letter, without a regular appeal having been preferred, and judgment thereon having been pronounced in open Court as provided by section 307 of the Order in Council.

That it would seem, however, to be now too late to proceed regularly under that section, and having regard to the illegal infliction of corporal punishment on the prisoner, perhaps a preferable course might be to set him at once at liberty.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was, however, to request that we would take that case into our consideration, and favour the Secretary of State at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Sentence was illegal. Remainder must be remitted.

That inasmuch as the sentence was illegal; but the punishment has already been in a measure suffered, the only course open, we think, in the circumstances, is to remit the remainder of the punishment.

My Lord,

Military bridge at Ibraila.

Damage done by Messrs. Carnegie's tug.

Claim of Russian authorities.

As to free navigation of Danube.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by the Secretary of State to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Galatz, inclosing copies of correspondence relative to a claim preferred by the Russian authorities against Messrs. Carnegie for damage stated to have been caused by a tug and lighters to the Russian military bridge at Ibraila.*

That we would perceive that the question raised in that case was that the military bridge was alleged to be so constructed and situated as to form an impediment to the free navigation of the Danube, contrary to the Treaty rights of foreign States, and that it was scarcely possible to avoid collision in passing through.

That Lord Tenterden was to request us to favour the Secretary of State with our opinion on the case, and especially as to the instructions which should be sent to Her Majesty's Consul.

That since the receipt of Mr. Sanderson's above-named despatch, the telegram, of which a copy was inclosed therewith,† had been forwarded by him, which Lord Tenterden was to request might be taken into consideration with the rest of the correspondence on that subject.

We were also honoured with your Lordship's further commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a telegram received from Her Majesty's Consul at Galatz relative to the liability of vessels with respect to damages caused to the Danube bridge.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No question of Treaty rights, but of position of bridge and proper navigation of tug, &c.

That the questions in dispute between the Russian authorities and Messrs. Carnegie do not, in our opinion, depend upon any principle or Treaty rights, but are of fact—

1. Whether the military bridge is so placed and constructed that it interferes with the free navigation of the river;
2. Whether the tug and barges in tow were properly navigated.

Upon these facts the Russian authorities and Messrs. Carnegie differ, and we have no evidence beyond the assertions of each; and we are, therefore, unable to form any opinion upon the case.

It appears, however, from Mr. Consul Sanderson's telegram of the 5th July, that the Russian authorities will change the positions, opening the bridge. To some extent this would show that there was something wrong in the previous opening, and might relieve Messrs. Carnegie of all blame.

Case should be placed before Danube Commission.

We submit that Mr. Consul Sanderson may properly be instructed to follow the course suggested by himself, and place the whole correspondence before the European Commission of the Danube, informing the Russian authorities that he has done so, that the facts may be ascertained and the merits determined by that Commission.

In reference to Mr. Consul Sanderson's further telegram of the 10th July, 1878, we do not know what further regulations the Russian authorities may have issued; upon what grounds or in what circumstances these new regulations assume that vessels will be liable for damage done to the bridge.

Subsequent regulations cannot affect previous cases.

These regulations, however, cannot affect cases occurring before the new regulations, and in any event the new regulations should also, in our opinion, be submitted to the European Commission.

Turkish dhow "Aloni," with slaves, captured by Her Majesty's ship "Wild Swan."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 3rd July instant, stating that he was directed by the Secretary of State to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Jeddah (No. 4 of the 15th May), reporting the capture by Her Majesty's ship "Wild Swan" of a Turkish dhow named "Aloni," near Souakim, with seventy-seven slaves on board. That those slaves having been handed over to the Egyptian authorities at Souakim, the dhow, with her crew, was taken to Jeddah and there handed over to Her Majesty's Consul, by whom they were given up to the Turkish authorities.

No Slave Trade Treaty with Turkey.

That we were doubtless aware that no Treaty existed between this country and Turkey for the suppression of the Slave Trade, and Mr. Lister was to request that we would take that case into our consideration and inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, the Commander of the "Wild Swan" was justified in seizing that dhow under Turkish colours.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Capture not justified.

That, in our opinion, the Commander of the "Wild Swan" was not justified in seizing the dhow under Turkish colours. We assume that the dhow had the right to sail under these colours.

that we would take that despatch into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should now be addressed to Mr. Consul Sanderson on the subject.

That the former papers were therewith annexed for convenience of reference.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Should not be enforced.

That Mr. Consul Sanderson may properly be instructed to state officially, and through the right officials, to the Administrator-General of the points of passage on the Danube that the Regulations, assuming the responsibility of the shipping, for any damage done to the bridge and establishing a Tribunal and manner of assessing the extent of the damage should not be enforced at present.

Mr. Consul Sanderson should also be instructed to obtain and send to your Lordship the opinions of his colleagues, whose nation's shipping may be affected by these Regulations.

Arbitrary assessment of damages. Call attention of Russian Government.

We suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that the attention of the Russian Ambassador in London may fitly be called to the Regulations, with the view of their being modified as to the assumed responsibility and the arbitrary mode of finding the value of the damage.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received August 9.)

Temple, August 8, 1878.

My Lord,

Case of the "Harriet Agnes." Whether unseaworthy because loaded a trifle over the disc mark.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th June last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us papers on the subjects of two Judgments delivered in the case of the "Harriet Agnes" by the Judge of Her Majesty's Supreme Consular Court at Constantinople.

Master fined by Consul-General Fawcett.

That we should perceive that in one of them Mr. Fawcett had laid down that a vessel "which passed by ever so little the disc mark is unseaworthy:" (see inclosures to Board of Trade letters), and that in the other he fined the master of the vessel 10*l.* for taking her out to sea from Nicolaieff, laden a trifle deeper than the disc mark, and that he dealt with the case summarily as an offence against section 239 of "the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854."

That it appeared to your Lordship if the two Judgments given by Mr. Fawcett on the 9th and 22nd of April were correctly reported in the inclosures to the letters from the Board of Trade and the General Shipowners' Society, they were erroneous in point of law on the following grounds:—

1. A vessel is not unseaworthy "by reason of her being laden 'ever so little' above the disc line, as stated by Mr. Fawcett in his Judgment of the 22nd April (see inclosures to Board of Trade letters).

2. "The taking a vessel to sea laden above the disc line is not a wilful breach or neglect of duty tending to her immediate loss, &c., or danger to life, within the meaning of section 239 of 'the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854,' and that section therefore does not apply to the offence charged which is only cognizable under section 4 of 'the Merchant Shipping Act, 1876.'

Jurisdiction of Constantinople Consular Court, vessel having sailed from Nicolaieff.

3. "If the act of the Captain of the 'Harriet Agnes' constituted an offence against section 239 of 'the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854,' that offence was committed at Nicolaieff where the ship put to sea, and consequently it was not within the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Consular Court at Constantinople. (See Order in Council 12th December, 1873.)"

That we should also observe that Mr. Fawcett directed a preliminary inquiry before the Assistant-Judge with a view to a prosecution of the agents of the vessel under section 4 of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1876, but as the vessel was sent to sea from Nicolaieff, it would appear that his Court had likewise no jurisdiction to try the case under that Act.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points above stated, and also with any remarks we might have to offer on the complaint made of Mr. Fawcett's language on the bench.

---

* Consul Sanderson, No. 10, Commercial; ditto, Telegraphic, July 5, 1878.

That, if we should be of opinion that the master of the "Harriet Agnes" was not legally liable to the fine imposed upon him, Sir Julian Pauncefote was further to request that we would be good enough to advise your Lordship as to the action which should be taken in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not necessarily unseaworthy, under Merchant Shipping Acts.

That, in our opinion, a vessel which passes by ever so little the disc mark is not necessarily unseaworthy within the provisions of 39 and 40 Vict., cap. 80. And the construction put by Mr. Fawcett on the 4th section of that Act is, in our opinion, erroneous.

The construction put by Mr. Fawcett on 17 and 18 Vict., cap. 104, sect. 239, is, in our opinion, wrong. That section applies to the discipline of masters, seamen, and apprentices; and not to taking to sea a ship laden below the load-line.

Fine to be returned.

The amount of the fine imposed upon and, we presume, paid, by the master, should be returned to him.

Within Constantinople jurisdiction, notwithstanding original offence at Nicolaieff.

At the time of the inquiries it would seem that the ship was within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Consular Court, and under the control of agents who were about to send her to sea, and we are of opinion that notwithstanding she may have sailed from Nicolaieff, the act of attempting to send her to sea from Constantinople in an unseaworthy condition was an offence cognizable by the Supreme Court.

We consider, therefore, that if the ship was unseaworthy when sent to sea, and remained unseaworthy when brought within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Consular Court, the fact that the original offence was committed at Nicolaieff would not have prevented the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Consular Court.

We have, &c.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received August 14.)

Temple, August 14, 1878.

My Lord,

Case of the "Wave," arrested by warrant of Consul-General Fawcett.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 2nd August instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence* regarding the action taken by Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge at Constantinople in arresting and fining the British steam-ship "Wave," on the ground of an alleged offence against the Merchant Shipping Act of 1876; and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to whether Mr. Fawcett had power to issue a warrant to arrest and detain a British ship for an offence against the above-mentioned Act, or otherwise than in exercise of the Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction vested in the Supreme Consular Court by the Order in Council of 12th December, 1873.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was also to request that we would favour your Lordship with any observations which we might desire to offer on the case generally.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration and have the honour to report—

No power to arrest except in exercise of Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction.

That Mr. Fawcett had not the power, in our opinion, to issue a warrant to arrest and detain a British ship for any offence against "the Merchant Shipping Act, 1876," or otherwise than in exercise of the Vice-Admiralty jurisdiction vested in the Supreme Consular Court by the Order in Council of 12th December, 1873.

As to breaches of law referring to grain cargoes.

We may add that, in our judgment, bearing in mind the information given by Mr. Fawcett as to the frequent breaches of the law committed by grain-carrying vessels from the ports of the Black Sea, it would be advisable that the Board of Trade should be informed of the statements made by Mr. Fawcett with a view to some steps being taken if considered right by that Department to prevent the recurrence of such offences in the future.

Egyptian Mixed Tribunals.

Suit between two natives, one being a United States' protected subject.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd ultimo, and transmitting to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Alexandria relative to a Judgment recently pronounced by the Court of Appeal of the Mixed Tribunals in Egypt, in a suit between two natives, one of whom (the plaintiff) was under United States' protection. The Court below had given judgment for the plaintiff, but the defendant raised on appeal the question of the competency of the Mixed Tribunals to entertain the suit, on the ground that though the plaintiff was under American protection both parties were nevertheless local subjects. That it would be seen that in the Court of Appeal the respondent (the protected subject) obtained judgment by default, but execution was stayed until it should be decided by the Governments of Egypt and of the United States whether the protected subject was to be considered an "étranger" within the meaning of Article 9 of the Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire. That Mr. Cookson, the British Consul and Judge at Alexandria, took exception to the judgment, on the grounds stated in a memorandum which was forwarded by Mr. Vivian.

That Mr. Lister was to observe that in 1859 a question arose of extending British protection in Egypt to a Mr. Giro, a native of Lemnos. That it was decided that "bearing in mind the peculiar relations between Egypt and the Porte, he might properly receive British protection in Egypt unless the Egyptian authorities objected."

That the Judgment of the Court of Appeal apparently did not decide that local subjects protected by foreign Governments could not sue or be sued by other local subjects not enjoying such protection, but only that proof must be adduced by them of the assent of the Local Government to such protection and to the rights which flowed therefrom.

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was anything in the Judgment of the Court of Appeal which militated against the rights of foreign Powers in relation to protected native subjects.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Judgment does not militate against rights of foreign Powers relating to protection.

That, in our opinion, there is nothing in the Judgment of the Court of Appeal which militates against the rights of foreign Powers in relation to protected native subjects.

European Commission of the Danube.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a despatch from Her Majesty's Commissioner for the navigation of the Danube,* requesting to be furnished with instructions in regard to the bearing of the Treaty of Berlin of the 13th of July last, on the Commission of which he was a member, and particularly as to the modifications which would be required in the Public Act for the navigation of the Danube of the 2nd November, 1865.

As to alterations in Public Act, &c., on Turkey being replaced by Roumania.

That a memorandum on the subject was inclosed therewith, together with copies of all papers therein referred to, and of other papers relating to the navigation of the Danube, but bearing less directly upon the point in question.

That the following appeared to be the principal points for consideration:—

Roumania was not a party to the Public Act, nor to the Treaty of Berlin.

Under that Treaty (Articles XLVI and LI) the Isle of Serpents, the Delta of the Danube, and the right bank of the river up to a certain point, and all the rights and obligations of the Porte, "in regard to undertakings of public works and others of a like nature," were transferred from the Porte to Roumania, and by Article LIII the European Commission on which Roumania was to be represented was henceforth to exercise its duties as far as Galatz in complete independence of the territorial authorities. As the Public Act then stood (Article VIII) the exercise of the navigation of the Lower Danube was placed under the authority of an Inspector-General and of the captain of the port of Sulina, both of whom were to be appointed by the Porte, and the sentences emanating from their authority were to be pronounced in the name of His Majesty the Sultan, and Her Majesty's Order in Council, empowering Her Majesty's Consuls to deal with offences by British subjects against the regulations made in pursuance of the Public Act, was confined in its terms to the dominions of the Ottoman Porte.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request our opinion as to whether any act of accession or other formality was necessary on the part of Roumania for the purpose of carrying out the changes effected by the Treaty of Berlin in the condition of affairs relating to the European Commission and the navigation of the Danube, and also whether any alterations or additions in the Public Act and in Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 9th April, 1866, or any other measures were required for the same purpose.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Roumania should accede to Danube Articles of Treaty of Berlin.

That, in our opinion, Roumania should accede to those Articles of the Treaty of Berlin which effect any changes in the matters relating to the European Commission and the navigation of the Danube.

Act and Order in Council should be altered to meet altered circumstances.

And since Article LI of the Treaty substitutes Roumania for the Porte, as regards the rights and obligations of the latter throughout the territory, ceded to the former with regard to public works and other enterprises of a like nature, the Public Act should be altered so that the Porte may no longer have these rights and obligations, and Roumania may have them transferred to her.

Furthermore, such of the provisions of this Act as are inconsistent with Article LIII of the Treaty of Berlin, which provides that the European Commission shall exercise its duties in complete independence of the territorial authorities, should be modified.

The Order in Council of the 9th April, 1866, should also, in our opinion, be so altered that, in the reciting part, the requisite Articles of the Treaty of Berlin relating to Roumania should be introduced, and in the enacting part the words "Principality of Roumania" should be, where necessary, substituted for the words "Dominions of the Sublime Ottoman Porte."

With reference to other measures, the inclosure in No. 1 by Sir J. Stokes suggests modifications in the Public Act, in which we fully concur.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 19th instant, stating that a question had been raised by Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople as to the liability of British subjects in Turkey, and being holders of real property there to the payment of a forced loan levied under a recent law upon real property in the Ottoman dominions.

That Mr. Lister was to transmit to us the documents marked in the inclosed list,[*] together with a memorandum by Sir E. Hertslet, the Librarian of the Foreign Office, and to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instruction which should be sent to Sir H. Layard upon that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

They are liable:

That, in our opinion, owners of real property within the Ottoman Empire, being British subjects, are subject to all charges and contributions, including forced loans, which may be imposed on real property in Turkey. (See Imperial Rescript of the 18th June, 1867, and Protocol of the 28th June, 1868—Hertslet's Treaties, &c., Great Britain and Turkey, pp. 73–75 and p. 164.)

There is nothing in the Treaties and Capitulations which would enable British subjects to claim exemption from charges on real property in Turkey owned by them.

unless exemption is allowed to other Powers.

But if the subjects of any other foreign Power are allowed an exemption from such charges Sir H. Layard may, we think, properly be instructed to claim a similar exemption on behalf of Her Majesty's subjects under the 1st Article of the Convention of 1861 (Hertslet, p. 42).

European Commission of the Danube.

Alterations in Public Act.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 26th October ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 4th of that month requesting our opinion as to the measures which might be necessary to give effect to those provisions of the Treaty of Berlin which bear upon the Public Act for the Navigation of the Danube, he had the honour to transmit to us, by your Lordship's direction, the inclosed despatch from Sir John Stokes, formerly Her Majesty's Commissioner for the navigation of the Danube,[†] giving a very clear account of the manner in which the future position of the European Commission was affected by the Treaty, and to request that we would take that paper into our consideration with those which had already been forwarded in his letter above-mentioned.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Agree in Sir J. Stokes' suggestions.

That, in our opinion, the alterations in the Public Act of the European Commission of the Danube suggested by Sir J. Stokes are proper and consistent with the stipulations of the Treaty of Berlin.

My Lord,

Liability of Government for acts of its agents. "Jane Francis" case.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 2nd May ultimo, stating that on the receipt of our Report of the 5th November last[†] the Earl of Derby addressed to Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas an instruction, draft of which was inclosed,[‡] relative to the question of the liability of a Government for losses caused to foreigners by the officers or agents of such Government in the discharge of their public duties.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was now to transmit to us a despatch from Mr. Middleton in reply,[§] inclosing copies of further correspondence on the subject between himself and the Venezuelan Minister for Foreign Affairs, and to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we were of opinion that the precedents cited by General Saluzzo supported the contention of his Excellency, that the Venezuelan Government was relieved from liability to make compensation in the case which gave rise to the discussion.

That the previous papers were inclosed for convenience of reference, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state that the opinion of Mr. Cushing in the case of the "Serene," which turned upon the liability of the United States' Government to compensate the owner of that vessel, an American subject, for her sale under an illegal order of the United States' Consul at Acapulco, was contained in vol. vi, p. 617, of "Opinions of Attorneys-General of the United States," and was headed by a summary to the effect that the United States were not responsible for any act of malfeasance of their Consuls in office, a proposition which was not warranted by Mr. Cushing's opinion.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Refuting Venezuelan arguments.

That, in our opinion, the precedents cited by General Saluzzo do not support the contention of his Excellency, that the Venezuelan Government was relieved from liability to make compensation in the case which has given rise to the discussion.

The precedent of the pilot is inapplicable, since as pointed out in the opinion cited neither the pilot nor the marshal came within the class of officials representing the interests of the Government.

And the case of the Consul differs from that which gave rise to the discussion, in that the Consul there ordered the sale of a ship, an act entirely beyond his authority and not within the scope of his agency.

That Government is liable for its Consul's wrongful acts.

But in the case under discussion the Consul's duty is, as appears from the papers, to grant clearances. In so doing the Consul is representing the interests of his Government; he comes within the class of officials for whose acts Mr. Cushing says Governments do judge themselves responsible because their actions are executed for the advantage of the Government.

The Venezuelan Government would not allow a foreign ship to enter a Venezuelan port without a Consular clearance.

The foreign master pays for this clearance so obtained from the agent of the Venezuelan Government, as an indispensible condition of entering the Venezuelan port.

In granting the clearance the Consul is acting within the scope of his authority, and discharging one of the duties imposed upon him by his own Government.

If the Consul from ignorance or other cause grants an imperfect or misleading clearance, in consequence of which the foreign owner suffers loss when he reaches a Venezuelan port, that Government may properly be called upon to indemnify the foreigner.

Approve despatch to Lord Lyons, but should not threaten French Government when asking a favour. (Despatch to Lord Lyons annexed.) Her Majesty's Government hope Mr. Millar will be compensated, &c. | 27 |
| 35 | Law Officers | 31, | "Certificats de Coutume." As to Registrar's certificate in cases of transfer of stocks on appointment of new trustees. As to Treasury Solicitor being authorized to issue certificates. Treasury Solicitor cannot issue them | 29 |
| 36 | Lord Chancellor | Aug. 12, | "Certificats de Coutume." Certificates required by French Government may be issued by Queen's Proctor. Government cannot guarantee accuracy of the certificates he gives | 30 |
| 37 | Law Officers | 26, | Arrest of Mr. Millar at Espezel. Her Majesty's Government does not disclaim right to demand redress for outrages, but would have to grant reciprocity. Principle of action should be defined. Quoting cases of outrages in Italy. As to responsibility of Governments for acts of their agents, and as to "adequate legal remedy." Report: Foreigners have no claim to greater protection than natives. Actions for assault, &c., may be brought in the country. Exceptions in uncivilized countries, and in cases of negligence, &c., on part of Government or its agents. "No adequate legal remedy" is when aggressor cannot compensate, and Government cannot be prosecuted (as in England). Case for diplomatic action. Legal proceedings should first be taken by injured parties | 30 |

GERMANY.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 38 | Law Officers | Jan. 29, 1879 | Duke of Connaught's Marriage Treaty. Approving | 32 |
| 39 | Lord Chancellor | Apr. 9, | Collisions on high seas. British territorial claim not limited to three miles. Distance necessary for defence. Mixed administration of criminal law not admissible within three-mile limit. Jurisdiction not wantonly exercised. Secretary of State's certificate requisite in cases of foreigners in foreign vessels, &c. Understanding with foreign Powers as to uniform standard of criminality. Objections to mixed jurisdiction on high seas. As to composition of Mixed Court. Importation of foreign jurymen to form mixed jury, &c. | 33 |
| 40 | Law Officers | May 27, | Slave Trade Treaty of 1841. Accession of Germany in place of Prussia. As to assent of Austria and Russia by note. No objection | 34 |
| 41 | Law Officers | 30, | Destruction of property of M. Eggert, a German, at Besika by British marines. Compensation due | 34 |

HAYTI.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 42 | Law Officers | July 31, 1879 | Violation of Consular privileges in Hayti. Danish request for support of Her Majesty's Government. Consuls are amenable to civil and criminal jurisdiction. Arrest of Danish Consul (Mr. Daguin) is no infraction of law of nations. If Hayti gives [? privileges] to Consuls, Her Majesty's Government may support claim of Denmark | 35 |
| 43 | Law Officers | Sept. 22, | Claim of Mrs. Maunder. "Acte de Naissance" for proving illegitimacy of Joseph Maunder. Cannot on present evidence treat it as a forgery. Insist on payment of 22,000*l.* on account, pending result of award, &c. Refusal of Hayti will justify coercive measures. | 35 |

ITALY.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 44 | Law Officers | Apr. 4, 1879 | Difficulties as to Extradition Act in Malta, there being no Habeas Corpus law. As to making a General Ordinance similar to that relating to extradition between Malta and Italy. It would not effect the object in view | 37 |
| 45 | Law Officers | Aug. 8, | Ill-treatment of Rev. Mr. Pullen by carabinieri. Slight punishment of guilty parties. No further action necessary | 37 |

JAPAN.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 46 | Law Officers | Jan. 17, 1879 | Opium smuggling. Case of J. Hartley. Japanese appeal against Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments. The Judgments were wrong. Treaty does not distinguish between smoking and medicinal opium | 38 |
| 47 | Law Officers | July 10, | Opium smuggling. Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments in Hartley case, and as to right of Japanese Government to issue Regulations for importation of opium. Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments wrong in law. Japan retains power to prevent importation of opium, to secure monopoly of trade, and make Regulations for its sale. Foreigners sacrifice no rights in submitting to them | 39 |
| 48 | Law Officers | 28, | Coasting trade. Money deposited as security by Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., and not reclaimed within six months. Japanese are within strict Treaty rights in refusing to refund | 41 |
| 49 | Law Officers | Sept. 22, | Importation and sale of medicinal opium by foreigners. Hartley case. Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments were wrong. Penalties to be recovered in Japanese Courts cannot be enforced against British subjects | 41 |
| 50 | Law Officers | 22, | Japanese Pilotage Regulations. Enforcement on British subjects by British Regulations under Order in Council. Employment of pilots. Licence to British pilots. Penalties, &c. Breach of Japanese law. British subjects can only be punished for: (1) If offence is punishable in England; (2) If made punishable by a British Regulation under Order in Council. Approving above view and Regulations | 43 |
| 51 | Law Officers | Oct. 3, | Japanese Quarantine Laws. No legal objection to. Convention. Article IV says British ships in Japanese ports must conform to Japanese laws. Governments have right to make Quarantine Regulations. Not necessary to have laws approved by British Minister and turned into British Regulations before enforcing them on British subjects. Consequences under Convention to breach of laws. View as to "non-enforcement by British Courts of Japanese laws, as such," is correct in one sense. Should not object to Japanese Regulations, but claim to enforce them through British Consuls | 44 |
| 52 | Law Officers | Nov. 5, | Quarantine Regulations. British ships in Japanese ports must conform to Japanese law. Sir H. Parkes does not give due weight to Article IV of Convention. Approve his Regulations for carrying out those of Japanese Government, but not his reply to Japanese protest | 47 |

1879

LIBERIA.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 53 | Law Officers | Nov. 27, 1879 | Liberian Boundary Commission. Decision that country claimed does not exist. Liberian protest. Strange that Liberia should claim what does not exist. Think there must be some mistake as to names, &c. Her Majesty's Government cannot refuse to reopen question. Caution as to recognizing territory which may be claimed by some other Power | 48 |

MISCELLANEOUS.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 54 | Law Officers | Jan. 21, 1879 | Proposed abolition of Consular shipping fees, and substitution of uniform tonnage fee. Act of Parliament necessary to carry out proposed change. (Preceded by Foreign Office letter to Law Officers) | 50 |
| 55 | Law Officers | Mar. 21, | Laughlan and Purdy Islands. Guano licences to Mr. Roberts. Islands unoccupied, but not claimed as part of British dominions. Caution necessary in granting licences. Islands must be occupied and ownership declared. Reference to Lacepede and Chesterfield Islands. Approve reply to Messrs. Pickford that licensees must hoist Union Jack. As to title of Crown by discovery. They must be declared to be British territory. As to identity of Mr. Roberts, &c. | 51 |

MOSQUITO.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 56 | Lord Chancellor | Sept. 29, 1879 | Mosquito Arbitration. Treaty of 1860 is ambiguous. British Case must be founded on the spirit in which it was framed. As to interpretation of "free port." Duty on goods for consumption in Mosquito. Mines, timber, lands, &c. Mosquito may not alien them, &c. | 52 |

NETHERLANDS.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 57 | Law Officers | Apr. 29, 1879 | Extradition from Straits Settlements. Approving draft Order in Council, with additions respecting appeal of criminal on committal to prison, &c. | 53 |
| 58 | Law Officers | Oct. 29, | Cartridges at Curaçao; compulsory landing of, from British ship "Bolivar," bound for Panama. Refusal to allow them to be re-exported, on ground that export of arms, &c., was prohibited. No right to stop through carriage of cargo. Her Majesty's Government may remonstrate | 54 |

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 59 | Law Officers | Jan. 21, 1879 | Convention with Navigators' and Friendly Islands. Ex-territorial jurisdiction. Order in Council. As to Western Pacific Order being unsuited. A new Order in Council is necessary | 54 |

PERU.

60 | [Nil. Reports on subjects arising out of the war between Peru and Chile will be found under the heading of Chile.]

PORTUGAL.

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 61 | Law Officers | Mar. 1, 1879 | Extradition between Hong Kong and Macao. Portugal requires promise that sentence of death shall not be carried out. As to Governor of Hong Kong having discretionary power to surrender criminals to Macao. Macao would then reciprocate, except in murder cases. No objection; but no promise to commute capital punishment must be given | 56 |
| 62 | Law Officers | May 28, | "City of Mecca" and "Insulano" collision. International Regulations for prevention of collisions at sea. Appeal to Supreme Court. If appeal fails, Her Majesty's Government might claim indemnity for losses arising out of misinterpretation of Rules | 56 |
| 63 | Law Officers | July 29, | "Decima Industrial" tax. Complaint of Messrs. Noble and Murat. Breach of Treaty engagement. Their case rejected by Courts on ground of informality. They must ask leave to amend before considering whether Her Majesty's Government can interfere to avert consequences of their own negligence | 57 |
| 64 | Law Officers | Oct. 6, | "City of Mecca" and "Insulano" collision. Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere. The Portuguese judgment is not founded on International Sailing Rules, but on fact that "City of Mecca" did not stop, &c. Decision seems wrong, but the mistake of a Law Court is not a subject for diplomatic interference; and the omission to protest will prevent such interference | 58 |
| 65 | Law Officers | Nov. 10, | Arrest of British vessel "Lucretia." Collision with Spanish vessel "Gongora" on high seas. As to Admiralty jurisdiction of Portuguese Courts. If claim to jurisdiction is founded on quasi-territorial rights, diplomatic intervention would be justified; but Portugal only claims three miles limit. Her Majesty's Government cannot protest at present against exercise of jurisdiction by Portuguese Courts | 59 |
| 66 | Law Officers | Dec. 4, | "City of Mecca" and "Insulano" collision. Court claims more jurisdiction than is admitted by international law. Decision of Court proceeds upon a misconception of the International Sailing Rules. Intervention of Her Majesty's Government necessary. As to manner of conducting it | 60 |

RUSSIA.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| 67 | Law Officers | Jan. 17, 1879 | Responsibility of Government for defalcations of its agents. As to general rule of irresponsibility of Crown. Where the agent is made by the Government the proper person to receive money, or where the law requires that private individuals shall deposit money with him, the Government is responsible in event of the agent making default. Reference to Report of the 10th August, 1878 | 61 |
| 68 | Law Officers | July 28, | Messrs. Watts and Milburne's claim. Lighters sunk in Danube during war. Award of Mixed Commission. Russian Government disclaims liability, on authority of Bluntschli. Case quoted does not apply to seizure of neutral ships. Bluntschli lays down rule for compensation in such cases. (Reference to sinking of vessels in the Seine.) Russia must compensate | 62 |

SPAIN.

| No. | | Date. | Subject | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 69 | Law Officers | Feb. 3, 1879 | New Treaty between Spain and Sulu, recognizing Spanish sovereignty over the Archipelago and its dependencies. Claim to territory on coast of Borneo. Dent and Overbeck Concession. Her Majesty's Government cannot protest against the Treaty as regards the Archipelago. Old British Treaties with Sulu not binding on Sultan. Treaty of 1849 not ratified. If territory in Borneo is a dependency of the Archipelago, it passes to Spain under new Treaty. Rights ceded by Mr. Dent should be confirmed by Spain; but if Great Britain asks this, she recognizes rights of Spain. Dent must take his own course | 63 |
| 70 | Law Officers | July 12, | Collision at Santander between British vessel "Eurydice" and Spanish vessel "Miguel Saenz." Spanish protest against competency of British Admiralty Court to try. Her Majesty's Government cannot stop proceedings in Admiralty Court | 65 |
| 71 | Law Officers | 31, | British vessel "Gunga" putting into Manila in distress. Fine for accidental omission to declare portion of cargo. Boarding of vessel without notice to British Consul. (Reference to case of the "Erl King.") Governments may impose what conditions they please on foreign vessels, &c.; foreign Governments can only protest. Reports on "Erl King" are applicable to present case. Her Majesty's Government cannot appeal to Treaties | 66 |
| 72 | Law Officers | Nov. 5, | Seizure of the "Sultana" in Sulu Archipelago. Claim of Victoria Trading Company of Labuan. If "Sultana" was condemned by proper Prize Court, Her Majesty's Government cannot press claim | 68 |

TUNIS.

| No. | | Date. | Subject | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 73 | Law Officers | Nov. 14, 1879 | Estate of Padre Agostino. Claim of Propaganda at Rome to it. Transfer of case to Supreme Court at Constantinople. Transfer of "contentious" case to Constantinople is proper by section 217 of Order in Council. Better be tried there instead of sending Assistant Judge to Tunis. Inform petitioners that estate will be administered at Tunis, and tell Supreme Court that there are claimants to the estate in Tunis, &c. | 68 |

TURKEY.

| No. | | Date. | Subject | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 74 | Law Officers | Jan. 16, 1879 | Consular Court, Constantinople. Probate jurisdiction, &c. Deceased British subject not resident or dying in Turkey. Heirs must apply in England to revoke Letters of Administration. The property in Turkey may be protected under Order in Council | 70 |
| 75 | Law Officers | Mar. 4, | Tidjaret Court. Valmas v. the North British Mercantile Insurance Company. Competency of Court. Valmas, a Greek subject. His house burnt. Company refuse to pay. He lodges protest in British Consulate. Then becomes Turkish subject and sues Company in Tidjaret. Suit begun in Consulate cannot be afterwards instituted in Tidjaret. Refusal of British Consular Judge to allow defendant to appear. Her Majesty's Ambassador cannot object to jurisdiction of Tidjaret. Suit was not commenced in Consulate; only protest lodged. Case may proceed in Tidjaret | 71 |

| No. | | Date. | Subject. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 76 | Lord Chancellor | Apr. 1, 1879 | Kustendji Railway Arbitration. Treaty of Berlin substitutes Roumania for Porte, but the claimants were no parties to the Treaty. They claim from the Porte. Porte may recoup itself from Roumania. Kustendji Company cannot be turned over to seek redress from Roumania. Instancing a parallel case of an agreement between two Railway Companies. Kustendji Company may stand on its rights and claim Turkey as a debtor, if they prefer her to Roumania. Treaty of Berlin does not destroy those rights. Her Majesty's Government must not admit that Porte's liability has ceased | 72 |
| 77 | Law Officers | 12, | Inquests on British subjects dying in Turkey. Judge of Consular Court at Constantinople may perform functions of Coroner under Order in Council | 73 |
| 78 | Law Officers | 18, | Cases of the "Harriet Agnes," "Wave," and "Beaconsfield." Their detention by Consul-General Fawcett. Compensation claimed. Question of legality of Consul-General's Judgments respecting "unseaworthy ships." His protest against Law Officers declaring his Judgments illegal. Practice of Consular Judges applying to Foreign Office for advice, and of Foreign Office exercising proper vigilance over their judicial proceedings. Following are illegal:—Mr. Parry's appointment and fees; arrest of "Wave;" proceedings as to the "Beaconsfield;" arrest of master of "Wave" for contempt of Court. Further information wanted as to Mr. Pitts' case. Compensation due to owners of "Wave" and "Beaconsfield" | 73 |
| 79 | Law Officers | 30, | Danube navigation. Trading between new Russian frontier and Kilia branch. Russia may prohibit notwithstanding Treaties of Paris and Berlin | 76 |
| 80 | Law Officers | May 3, | Prohibition of foreign trade between Russian ports on Danube. Russian Government may prohibit it | 76 |
| 81 | Law Officers | 8, | Danube navigation. Alterations in Public Act to suit Treaty of Berlin. Russian opposition. Proposed Supplemental Act. Not necessary to recite Articles of Treaty of Berlin. Better have a declaration that the Act shall be read as modified by Treaty. Agree to provision as to permanent character of Regulations made by European Commission. Form of ratification of Act by Conference of the Powers | 77 |
| 82 | Law Officers | 30, | Possession of liquorice roots near Smyrna. MacAndrews, Forbes, and Co. v. Heracles Varipati, a Greek. Greek Minister maintains that local Turkish Court has no jurisdiction to try case between two foreigners. British Consul-General says Consular Court cannot decide questions of real property. No question of real property is involved. Police should give up roots to British firm on their giving security to answer any civil claim | 78 |
| 83 | Lord Chancellor | June 12, | Kustendji Railway Company. Effect of cession of territory on immovable property and nationality of inhabitants. Existing money claims do not pass with territory ceded, unless all parties agree. Roumania takes place of Porte from date of transfer. Roumania not bound by award, being no party to arbitration. If she declines to admit claim of the Company, she is justified by Treaty of Berlin, and the claim must be pressed against the Porte | 79 |
| 84 | Law Officers | July 12, | Danube. European Commission. Jurisdiction over Kilia branch questioned by Russia. Austrian "Avant-Projet." Rights of the Commission should be maintained, though not to full extent claimed by Austria | 79 |
| 85 | Law Officers | 21, | Bishop of Jerusalem. Licence for consecration of Rev. J. Barclay. Approving | 80 |
| 86 | Lord Chancellor | Aug. 5, | Rustchuk-Varna Railway Company. Whether claim lies against Porte or against Bulgaria. Xth Article of Treaty of Berlin. Porte was the Company's debtor before the Treaty, and remains so, unless other arrangement is made by the three parties concerned | 80 |

1879

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 87 | Law Officers | Aug. 8, 1879 | Nationality of Mrs. Saverden, widow of an alien who died since Naturalization Act was passed. Cannot accede to her request to be recognized as a British subject and registered in British Consulate at Smyrna. She might be placed under British protection | 81 |
| 88 | Law Officers | Dec. 2, | Piracy in the Persian Gulf. Maritime police and protectorate of trade undertaken by England. Establishment of Turkish authority on the Guttur Coast. Naval action against pirates within Turkish jurisdiction authorized by Government of India. Her Majesty's Government cannot, consistently with international law, pursue pirates in Turkish waters, or destroy strongholds on Turkish mainland | 82 |

UNITED STATES.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 89 | Law Officers | Jan. 14, 1879 | Forgery of United States' paper currency. It is an offence punishable by British law | 84 |
| 90 | Law Officers | 16, | Fortune Bay fishery disputes. Instructions to be given to British magistrate. They are consistent with Treaty of Washington, but it would be better to arrange first with United States' Government so as to avoid misunderstandings | 84 |
| 91 | Law Officers | 29, | United States' frigate "Constitution." Motion for arrest of for salvage services rendered by steam-tug "Admiral." Motion dismissed by Admiralty Court | 85 |
| 92 | Law Officers | May 30, | Boarding of United States' vessel "Laconia" in Zanzibar Harbour by Her Majesty's ship "London," on suspicion of slave-trading. Removal of three negroes. Propose to disavow act, and express regret. Agree with Mr. Rothery's Report. (Report by Mr. Rothery annexed) | 86 |
| 93 | Law Officers | Aug. 15, | Messrs. Notter and Co. Assumption of character of United States' Consular officers (in connection with "crimping" cases). No offence against law to personate a foreign Consul, unless personator thereby obtains property, &c. | 89 |

VENEZUELA.

| No. | | Date. | SUBJECT. | Page |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 94 | Law Officers | Apr. 18, 1879 | Closing of port of Puerto Cabello by Venezuelan Government, it being in hands of the insurgents. Government must judge as to necessity of closing its ports. Her Majesty's Government cannot remonstrate | 90 |
| 95 | Law Officers | 18, | Insurrection in Venezuela. German proposals. De facto Government must be recognized and its laws respected by foreign nations. As to closing of Puerto Cabello. If open, insurgents might seize customs duties and otherwise involve de facto Government in future embarrassments. Cannot recognize one party as belligerent. Better put up with closing of port. Presume it is closed to all nations | 91 |

REPORTS BY THE LAW OFFICERS OF THE CROWN: 1879.

Belgium.

No. 1.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received February 5.)

My Lord, Temple, February 4, 1879.

Collision. "Parlement Belge" and "Daring."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of yesterday's date, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letters from the Belgian Minister at this Court, and from Messrs. Lowless and Co., Solicitors, representing the owners of the British steam-tug "Daring," notifying that an application was to be made this day, the 4th instant, to the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice, on behalf of the owners of the "Daring," for a warrant of arrest to issue against the Belgian mail-packet "Parlement Belge," in a suit for damage by collision.

Privileges of mail-packets.

That the Belgian Minister claimed for that vessel the privileges and immunities of a vessel of war under Article VI of the Postal Convention between Great Britain and Belgium, a copy of which was inclosed.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that, as in the recent case of the "Constitution," we would be good enough to take such steps as the urgency of the case might require, with a view to the application being opposed on behalf of the Crown, should we be of opinion that that course was desirable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we thought it proper that Her Majesty's Government should be represented on the motion for judgment, and for a warrant of arrest to issue against the Belgian mail-packet "Parlement Belge."

Convention of 1876.

The Judge of the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice this morning ordered the motion to stand over to this day fortnight, in order that the question of jurisdiction should be argued, and whether the privileges under Article VI of the Convention of 1876 were not forfeited by Article X.

As to carrying of merchandise.

The argument raised on Article X was that the carrying of merchandise took away the privileges under Article VI. Your Lordship, we respectfully suggest, should direct that full information should be obtained and furnished whether any and what Agreement has been come to between the post-offices of Great Britain and Belgium.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received November 19.)

Temple, November 17, 1879.

My Lord,

National Arms and Ammunition Company.

Annulment of their patent by Belgian Government.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 29th October ultimo, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the correspondence noted in the margin,* relating to the complaint of the National Arms and Ammunition Company of the annulment by the Belgian Government of their rights in Belgium on patentees of the Martini rifle.

That the reason assigned for that action was, that the Company had not complied with the provisions of the Belgian law respecting the continuous working of the patent in that country.

That a precise statement of the grounds on which the justice of that Arrêté Royal was impugned was contained in the letter dated the 26th September from Messrs. Stibbard, Gibson, and Co., the legal advisers of the Company.

That as we would perceive from their letter of the 13th October, that by Belgian law the power of annulling a patent was vested in the Executive exclusively, and that the patentee had no power of appeal to a Court of Law.

That it appeared also from their letter of the 1st October that in the case of Rolbe's patent the German Ambassador interfered, and the patent, which had been threatened with annulment on the same grounds, was upheld.

Mr. Lister was pleased to request that we would take all these papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there were sufficient grounds to justify an official or unofficial representation to the Belgian Government for a reconsideration of their decision in the present case.

We were also honoured with a note from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 7th instant, inclosing further papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is a material difference between the case of Rolbe's patent and the patent of the National Arms and Ammunition Company. In the former case the German Ambassador interfered before the patent was annulled; in the latter case the Decree of the Government annulling the patent has been signed by the King and published.

Unless, therefore, some fraud or surprise has been practised upon the Belgian Government, and of this we find no evidence, there are in our opinion no grounds which would justify an official representation to the Belgian Government.

Her Majesty's Government may support them unofficially.

An unofficial representation might, however, be made, if your Lordship considered that there was any prospect of the Belgian Government cancelling an act of State done after deliberation.

We have, &c.

*Mr. Lister to the Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane.

Foreign Office, November 28, 1878.

Gentlemen,

St. John del Rey Mining Company

Negroes detained in slavery by.

As to transfer of bonds to Messrs. Gordon, Buchanan, and Birchall.

WITH reference to your Report of the 13th May last in the case of the Directors of the St. John del Rey Mining Company, who have held in slavery a number of blacks who, by the terms of the Agreement under which they came into possession of the Company, should have been manumitted some years since, I am directed by the Marquis of Salisbury to transmit to you the accompanying despatch from the Acting British Consul at Rio de Janeiro, reporting the circumstances under which the agents in Brazil of the St. John del Rey Company applied to the Brazilian authorities for the transfer of certain bonds of the Public Debt now standing at the "Caixa de Amortização" in the names of Messrs. Gordon, Buchanan, and Birchall, the last-named gentleman being a lunatic, confined in an asylum, and not expected to live.

Bonds belong to blacks detained in slavery.

The accompanying letter from Mr. Lennon Hunt, late Her Majesty's Consul at Rio, who has recently retired from the service, contains a history of the bonds for the transfer of which Messrs. Gordon and Buchanan have applied to the Brazilian authorities; and I am to request that you will peruse these papers, and advise Lord Salisbury as to any instructions which it may be proper to give to Mr. Austin, the Acting Consul at Rio, in regard to the application which has been made to him to sanction the transfer of the bonds in question, which, it would seem, represent a trust fund, a considerable portion of which belongs to the blacks now detained in slavery by the St. John del Rey Company.

Acting Consul Austin's despatch will be found at No. 38 in the accompanying printed correspondence relating to the St. John del Rey case.

I have, &c.
(Signed) T. V. LISTER.

P.S.—The previous correspondence (printed) in the case of the St. John del Rey Company is also sent for convenience of reference, if required.†

T. V. L.

Report.

Consul must prevent transfer of the bonds.

That Mr. Austin may, in our opinion, be properly instructed to prevent, by all the means in his power, the transfer of these bonds to Messrs. Gordon and Buchanan, and to refuse his sanction to the transfer.

Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin,* relative to the case of the Recife Drainage Company.

Recife Drainage Company's lawsuit with A. G. Netto.

Sentence of Provincial Court against former carried out, although reversed by Supreme Court.

That we would see from those papers that the Company in question became involved in legal proceedings with a Brazilian named the Commendador Antonio Gomez Netto; that when the Provincial Court of Pernambuco gave a Judgment adverse to the Company, that Judgment was enforced immediately and with great rigour, although the Company had protested and appealed to the Supreme Tribunal; but that the decision of the Provincial Court having been reversed and annulled by a Judgment of the Supreme Court ("Tribunal do Relação") of Rio de Janeiro, the Company were unable to obtain execution of that Judgment, which was stated to be final and without appeal; and that in reply to the representations of Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires the Brazilian Government had declined to interfere in the matter, on the ground that it was subject to the judiciary power, and dependent on the decision of the same.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the action that should be taken by Her Majesty's Government in consequence of this denial of justice.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the delay seems to have been caused—at least, in some measure—by Commendador Netto's availing himself of some technical means known to Brazilian law, and also perhaps to some extent by what seems to be the fact, that the sentence of the Court of Appeal was to be carried out by the Court appealed from.

May remonstrate with Brazilian Government.

But whatever may be the reason or pretext for the delay, Mr. St. John or Mr. Ford may properly be instructed to press upon the Brazilian Government the discredit which the administration of law in Brazil must suffer if the sentences of its highest Tribunals are not respected and executed.

Chilean fleet in Peruvian waters.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 25th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying papers, as marked in the margin,† relative to the injury which was being caused to the interests of British subjects by the action of the Chilean fleet in Peruvian waters.

Interference with British Guano trade.

That we would see that the Chilean naval forces were said to have destroyed the platforms at the guano ports, and to have ordered vessels to leave those ports in two days; and as a great proportion of the guano was being shipped by British subjects under contract with the Peruvian Government (in connection with the claims of the holders of Peruvian bonds), it was clear that the Chilean proceedings would inflict great loss upon British subjects.

That, in these circumstances, he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in making any remonstrance against the proceedings of the Chilean naval forces.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Prevention of neutral trade by sufficient force is allowable.

That Her Majesty's Government would not, in our opinion, be justified in making any remonstrance against the proceedings of the Chilean naval forces, which seem to us to be confined to the destruction of jetties in Peruvian territory and the prohibition of neutral trade with Peru by a force on the spot sufficient to effect that purpose.

May ask for protection of British interests, &c.

Her Majesty's Government may, however, properly state to the Chilean Government the expectation that, in carrying on military or naval operations against Peru, Bombardment of Valparaiso, &c. German instructions in event of.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a copy of the instructions sent by the German Government to their Minister at Santiago, in Chile, dated the 19th May, 1879, instructing him to take steps for the protection of German subjects in the event of a bombardment of Valparaiso by the Peruvian naval force.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote also inclosed, for our information, the correspondence laid before Parliament in 1866, in which we would find an account of the bombardment of that town in 1866 by the Spaniards, and the loss incurred by British and other merchants, which might, perhaps, have been averted had timely measures been taken to facilitate the removal of their property, and secure such consideration on the part of the belligerents for the interests of neutrals as the circumstances would permit.

That your Lordship was anxious to have our opinion as to the instructions which should be sent to Her Majesty's Representatives in Chile and Peru in the present instance, as well as to Her Majesty's naval commanders on those stations, with reference to the protection of British life and property during the existing conflict.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

British merchants in Chile and Peru must be warned to remove goods to place of safety.

That Her Majesty's Ministers in Chile and Peru should, in our opinion, be instructed to inform British merchants and residents in any place exposed to hostile operations, that they must be ready to remove themselves and their property out of the reach of bombardment to some place of comparative safety.

And that they should lose no time in removing their property and goods from the Custom-houses and other public buildings.

They will receive no protection from British naval forces.

British merchants and residents should further be informed that they must not expect any active intervention for their protection from Her Majesty's naval forces.

Facilities for removal of goods may be asked of Chile and Peru.

Her Majesty's Ministers may properly be instructed to obtain from the Chilean and Peruvian Governments, in the event of any threatened bombardment, the permission to remove British property without payment of duty to some place of safety, on security being given for the payment of duty as in the German Minister's instructions, "that all may be so arranged as to facilitate any transfer of goods with the least difficulty, and at the least expense to the merchants concerned.

Assignment of a neutral place for goods.

"Should it be possible to assign a neutral place for the goods in the town or harbour threatened, Her Majesty's Ministers and naval commanders should give energetic support to all negotiations for that purpose between the belligerents, as well as take the initiative themselves in a proposition of that kind."

British naval forces to protect British life and property, and ask delay of bombardments till goods are removed.

Her Majesty's naval commanders may be instructed to take every measure, short of actual intervention by force, for the protection of British life and property, and particularly to use every endeavour to bring about the delay of any threatened bombardment until a sufficient time has been allowed for the removal of British property.

Cases and boiler belonging to a torpedo-boat for Chile.

As to detention under Foreign Enlistment Act.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit the inclosed letter from Her Majesty's Customs reporting that an application had been made to their Collector at Hull by the Peruvian Consul at that port for the detention of certain cases and a boiler belonging to a torpedo-boat, destined for the Government of Chile.

That we should perceive that, in pursuance of the opinion contained in the Report of the Solicitor to the Customs, they had given orders for the detention of the articles in question pending a reference of the case to the decision of Her Majesty's Secretary of State.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take that matter into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether that shipment could lawfully be detained under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870, referred to by the Solicitor to the Board of Customs, or under any other provisions of the law.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 15th instant, forwarding a letter from the Treasury on the above subject, and requesting that that letter might be taken into consideration in conjunction with the other papers then before us relative to the same.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Responsibility rests with Government. Cases should be searched, and detained or not according to result of search.

That, as it is uncertain whether the cases contain parts which would form a torpedo boat, the responsibility of detaining the cases for the purpose of examining their contents must rest with the Government.

The detention will be justifiable or not, according to the result of the examination.

But, in the circumstances, we think the cases should be detained and at once examined.

Bolivian privateers. (Chilean property in neutral vessels.)

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th instant, stating that information had reached Her Majesty's Government that Bolivia had decreed the issue of Letters of Marque and authorized privateers to seize Chilean property of any description on board neutral vessels, and that agents had been sent to the United States to further that project.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to inclose a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima reporting his conversation with the Peruvian Government and his Bolivian colleague on the subject, from which we should perceive that the latter denied all knowledge of any such Decree.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was also to inform us that the attention of the United States' Government had been called to that matter.

That Bolivia had no facilities for fitting out privateers from her own sea-board, which comprised but one insignificant port; and, having regard to the legislation of the United States on the subject, Her Majesty's Government did not apprehend that Bolivian privateers could easily be fitted out in that country; but that it was possible that they might be fitted out in some other States, and even in Peruvian ports, though Peru had acceded to the Declaration attached to the Treaty of Paris of 1856, whereby privateering was declared to be abolished.

Bolivia has not acceded to Declaration of Paris.

That Bolivia had not acceded to that Declaration, and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether special instructions should be sent to Her Majesty's Naval Commander-in-chief on the Pacific Station with reference to Bolivian privateers, and, if so, what those instructions should be.

1879

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot object.

That, apart from the Treaty of Paris, the issue of Letters of Marque and privateering were admissible; Bolivia was no party to, and has not, we believe, since come within, that Treaty, and is, therefore, not bound to observe its conditions.

We are therefore of opinion that no instructions need be sent to Her Majesty's Naval Commander-in-chief on the Pacific Station with reference to Bolivian privateers.

British property must be protected against.

The Commander-in-chief may, however, properly be instructed to exercise great watchfulness for the protection of British subjects and property against the attacks of vessels which are furnished with regular Letters of Marque.

Bolivian Decree. Privateers and seizure of Chilean property in neutral vessels.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 12th instant, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration, the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago,* inclosing copy and translation of the Decree lately issued by the Bolivian Government authorizing the issue of Letters of Marque and the seizure by Bolivian privateers of Chilean property in neutral vessels.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion on the question referred to us in Sir Julian Pauncefote's above-mentioned letter, especially as a telegram had been received from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris stating that the French Government were desirous to be informed what course Her Majesty's Government intended to follow with regard to Bolivian privateers, and desired to give their cruizers the same instructions on the subject as might be issued to Her Majesty's ships.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we had reported to your Lordship, in answer to Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th instant, before receiving Sir Julian's letter of the 19th instant, inclosing the Decree issued by the Bolivian Government and a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Santiago.

Warn Bolivia to respect British flag, &c.

There is nothing in these inclosures which leads us to alter the opinion which we had the honour of submitting to your Lordship upon the right of the Bolivian Government to issue Letters of Marque. But in reference to the Articles in the Decree (the 5th Article authorizing the seizure of Chilean property on board neutral ships) and the suggestion of Her Majesty's Minister, that agents have been sent to the United States for the purpose of carrying out this intention of fitting out privateers, we suggest that the French and English Governments might properly warn the Bolivian authorities that the two Governments expect their flags to be respected on board their merchant-vessels.

Call attention of United States' Government to fitting out of privateers.

And that the French and English Ministers in the United States might be instructed officiously to call the attention of the United States' Government to the alleged intended proceedings of Bolivian agents in the United States.

No. 12*.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor respecting Bolivian Privateers.

I PREFER the policy of the draft B to that of draft A.

Bolivian privateers

2. If draft A is adopted, Her Majesty's Government recognize the right of the Bolivian Government to issue "letters of marque" to privateers. If this right is conceded the privateer must be entitled to exercise whatever right of visit, search, &c., a national ship of the same Government could exercise. This would then narrow the whole case to the question whether Chilean goods, not being contraband of war, could be seized in a neutral ship. Whatever arguments might be adduced to show that they ought not to be seized, the practice of this country has, I think, always been, in a similar case, to insist on their liability to seizure, and it would hardly be safe to make this now our sole ground of objection.

Violation of Declaration of Paris through a non-acceding Power, &c.

3. Draft B would proceed on a refusal to recognize the validity of the Bolivian Decree under all the circumstances of the case. These circumstances are (1) that Bolivia and Peru are making war in partnership, and Peru has acceded to the Declaration of Paris, and ought not indirectly to violate it through Bolivia; (2) that the Decree is not bonâ fide, as coming from a Power which has no navy, and an insignificant seaboard, no part of which is now in her own possession; (3) the extravagant claims of the Decree as to seizing neutral goods may be added as an additional ground for objecting to the whole.

4. I would suggest that, if B is adopted, the second paragraph should run thus: "Under the peculiar circumstances of the case, Her Majesty's Government are not prepared to recognize the validity of this Decree, and in view of the losses and damages to which neutral commerce may be exposed from some of its provisions, as well, &c."

Draft of a Letter from the Marquis of Salisbury to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

My Lords, Foreign Office, August , 1879.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Valparaiso, inclosing a Decree issued by the President of Bolivia, announcing the intention of the Government of that Republic to issue letters of marque to privateers under the Bolivian flag, and laying down rules for the guidance of vessels furnished with such letters of marque during the war now being carried on between Bolivia and Peru on the one hand and Chile on the other.

Her Majesty's Government have carefully considered this Decree, and although, in view of the fact that Bolivia has never acceded to the Declaration of Paris respecting privateering, they are not disposed to question the right of that State to issue letters of marque, they nevertheless feel it to be their duty to take measures to protect British commerce from the injury that would be inflicted upon it by the carrying out of Article 5 of the Decree, which authorizes the privateers of the Republic to seize any cargo, being Chilean property, which they may find on board of any neutral vessel, whether or not the same may be contraband of war.

I have therefore the honour to request that your Lordships will send directions, with as little delay as possible, to the Commander-in-chief of Her Majesty's naval forces in the Pacific, directing him to issue orders to the officers under his command to do all in their power to prevent the seizure, by Bolivian privateers, of Chilean property, not being contraband of war, which may be found on board British vessels, and to resist by force, if necessary, any attempt that may be made to effect such seizure in the presence of one of Her Majesty's ships.

Her Majesty's Government are informed by the French Government that instructions in this sense have already been given to the commanding officers of French ships

Draft of a Letter from the Marquis of Salisbury to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

My Lords,

Foreign Office, August , 1879.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Valparaiso, inclosing a Decree issued by the President of Bolivia, announcing the intention of the Government of that Republic to issue letters of marque to privateers under the Bolivian flag, and laying down rules for the guidance of vessels furnished with such letters of marque during the war now being carried on between Bolivia and Peru on the one hand and Chile on the other.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the case, Her Majesty's Government are not prepared to recognize the validity of this Decree; and in view of the losses and damages to which neutral commerce may be exposed from some of its provisions, as well as from lawless acts on the part of Bolivian privateers, Her Majesty's Government have determined, in concert with the Government of France, to resist the execution of the Decree, so far as concerns British and French vessels respectively. I have, therefore, to request that your Lordships will send instructions, with as little delay as possible, to the Commander-in-chief of the naval forces in the Pacific, directing him to issue orders to the officers under his command to do all in their power to prevent the visitation, search, or capture of British vessels by Bolivian privateers, and to resist by force, if necessary, any such acts, or any interference whatever by Bolivian privateers, with vessels under the British flag.

Her Majesty's Government are informed that instructions in this sense as regards the action of Bolivian privateers against French vessels have already been sent to the commanding officers of the French ships of war in the Pacific, and it is the desire of Her Majesty's Government that Her Majesty's naval forces shall act in this matter, as far as possible, in concert with those of France.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, bearing date the 2nd instant, inclosing a further letter from the Treasury on the same question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Chilean war. Injury to British property by Chilean ships of war.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches, as marked in the margin,* from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima, relative to the injury caused to British subjects by the proceedings of Chilean naval officers during the war now being carried on between Chile on the one side and Peru and Bolivia on the other.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the information contained therein was sufficient to warrant Her Majesty's Government in preferring a formal demand for indemnity in any of the cases reported by Mr. St. John.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the cases particularly referred to in Mr. St. John's despatch are:

Shelling of Mollendo;

1. The damage done at Mollendo, an unfortified town, by firing shot and shell upon the town in return for some rifle shots fired upon Chilean man-of-war boats.

Destruction of Pisagua;

2. The destruction of a very considerable part of the town of Pisagua by the fire from the ship in return also for some rifle shots fired upon Chilean man-of-war boats.

In both these cases some excuse may be urged for the conduct of the Chilean officers, in the fact that their boats were first fired on, and that provocation was given by the townspeople, or persons on shore, who should have remonstrated in a peaceable and not in a hostile way against the proceedings of the Chilean officers in sending their boats to seize property in or near the shore.

In excess of legitimate warfare.

But, in our opinion, the extremities to which the Chilean officers resorted in both these cases were carried far beyond the calls of legitimate warfare between civilized nations.

Seizure of "Alice Kitson" unjustifiable.

3. The seizure of the "Alice Kitson" was, in our opinion, unjustifiable. Mr. St. John does not say what has become of the ship, or whether she has been restored.

Firing upon train.

4. The firing upon the train at Iquique was, in our opinion, without any justification.

Support Mr. Fry's claim.

5. Mr. Fry's claim may, in our opinion, properly be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

Demand indemnity in all above cases.

We are therefore of opinion that in all the cases referred to by Mr. St. John, and in which a British subject or British property has been injured, a formal demand for indemnity may properly be preferred.

Chilean war. Destruction of British launches by Peruvian ships of war.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Valparaiso, relative to the destruction, by Peruvian ships-of-war in Chilean ports, of launches belonging to British subjects.

Forcible use of British launches by Chileans to land stores, &c.

That in the case reported in despatch No. 43 (Inclosure 1) the owners of the launches destroyed by the "Pilcornayo" at Tocopilla stated that the Chilean authorities on several occasions had taken their launches by force to land stores, &c., for their army, and they seemed to attribute to that circumstance the action of the Peruvian Commander.

Launches owned by Mr. Sheriff, an English Company, and Messrs. Odgers.

That in the cases reported in despatch No. 44 (Inclosure 1) four of the launches destroyed by the "Huascar" in the Bay of Chânâral were the property of a Mr. Sheriff, and of the four launches destroyed by the same vessel of war at Pan de Agucar one was the property of Mr. Sheriff, and three were the property of a company "composed of British subjects residing in England," and known as the "Carizzalillo Mining Company," but it was not stated whether the national status of the company was Chilean or British. That as regarded the launches belonging to Messrs. Odgers and Co., and the launches of Mr. Sheriff destroyed in the Bay of Chânâral, the Peruvian Commanders had been previously warned that they were British property. That the commander of the "Huascar" said that his instructions were imperative, and he referred to the destruction of foreign launches and other property by the Chilean Fleet in Peruvian ports.

That in the present cases no actual hostilities were going on at the time of the destruction of the British launches.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the facts stated therein would justify Her Majesty's Government in preferring a claim of indemnity against the Peruvian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

May claim indemnity from Peru.

That, in our opinion, the facts stated in the despatches and inclosures from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Valparaiso would justify Her Majesty's Government in preferring a claim to indemnity against the Peruvian Government.

Chilean war. Capture by "Huascar" of "Adriana Lucia," property of Mr. Peede, a British subject, sailing under Nicaraguan flag.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th October instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a despatch (No. 120) from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima, reporting the capture by the Peruvian iron-clad "Huascar" of the "Adriana Lucia," a vessel belonging to a British subject, but sailing under the Nicaraguan flag.

That it appeared that in consequence of the difficulties experienced in South America of sending vessels to any English Colony to obtain a British certificate of registry, British subjects purchasing foreign vessels place them under the Nicaraguan flag.

Nicaraguan Government repudiate such granting of registers.

That, accordingly, some years ago a British subject in Chile, named Peede, purchased a vessel called the "Adriana Lucia," and placed her under the Nicaraguan flag. That Mr. St. John reported that, without previous notice, the Nicaraguan Government had repudiated the action of their Diplomatic and Consular officers, and declared registers granted by them to be of no value.

Seized for having no lawful papers.

That before information of that measure had reached Chile, Mr. Peede had despatched the "Adriana Lucia" to the Bay of Chânâral (on the coast of Chile) to load ores, and she was then seized by the Peruvian iron-clad "Huascar," and sent to Callao as a prize, on the ground that she carried no lawful papers.

That the case was now before a Peruvian Prize Court, and that your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether any action should be taken by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere.

That, in our opinion, no action can be taken by Her Majesty's Government.

Prosecution of British vessel "Taiwan" by Chinese Customs. Article XXXVII of Treaty.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Chinese Minister at this Court, together with a copy of the Treaty of Tientsin and a correspondence as marked in the margin,* relative to the prosecution of the master of the British steam-ship "Taiwan" on behalf of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs for an alleged offence against Article XXXVII of that Treaty.

That the facts of the case were stated in the Chinese Minister's letter and also at p. 5 of the Printed Chinese Customs Correspondence transmitted by him; and at p. 60 of the same volume we would find the Articles of the Treaty which bore upon the point under discussion.

That the question turned on the interpretation of the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty, and the Chinese Government took exception to the Judgment pronounced by Her Majesty's Consul at Foochow who heard the case against the British shipmaster under the Rules agreed on between the two Governments for the prosecution of offences against the Customs. That a copy of those Rules appeared at p. 61 of the same volume.

That the British Consul held that the master had committed no offence under Article XXXVII, and that view was concurred in by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Peking, by the Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Supreme Court at Shanghae, and by the Foreign Office.

Liability of master for articles smuggled on board.

That the Chinese Government, however, had been advised by the Counsel whom they had consulted in this country (see printed case submitted to Counsel), that the Judgment was wrong, and that on the proper construction of Article XXXVII the master of a British vessel must be held to have committed the offence of omitting to give "a full and true account of the particulars of the cargo on board," if it should be discovered that any person had, without the knowledge of the master, and notwithstanding all reasonable precautions on his part to prevent smuggling, surreptitiously taken on board and concealed in his clothing or bedding any article liable to duty, with a view to defraud the Chinese Customs.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state that, for an offence against Article XXXVII of the Treaty, the master was liable to a fine of 500 taels, and (Article XLVIII) the vessel might be prohibited from trading in China.

Terms "cargo" and "manifest."

That we would observe that, in the opinions of the legal advisers of the Chinese Government, reference was made to the liability of the owners and master of a British vessel, under the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, in the case of goods concealed on board, and stress was laid on the legal interpretation of the words "cargo" and "manifest" in that statute.

That it was submitted, however, that the two cases were not analogous, and that in considering the real intention and meaning of the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty of Tientsin, the conditions of trade in China and the surrounding circumstances at the time when the Treaty was made must be taken into account.

That the British steamers of the class of the "Taiwan," which run between Hong-Kong and the Treaty ports of China, were manned by Chinese sailors, and carried a large number of Chinese passengers (who usually smoke opium during the greater part of the voyage), and in spite of the greatest vigilance on the part of the master, they sometimes contrive amongst them to secrete small parcels of opium in their clothing, bedding, or boxes.

That it could hardly be supposed that Lord Elgin, who negotiated the Treaty, could have intended to impose on the owners and master of a British vessel the duty of searching the persons and luggage of their Chinese passengers, or to make them responsible in heavy penalties for an offence committed on board by a Chinese subject without the knowledge of the master and in spite of all reasonable precautions on his part to prevent it.

Intention of framers of Treaty.

That it would seem more consonant to reason and justice and to the probabilities of the case that the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty was only intended by the Contracting Parties to secure the honest declaration by the British shipmaster of all merchandise taken by him on board the vessel, or with his knowledge, or the existence of which on board his vessel he must have discovered by the exercise of reasonable vigilance.

That the words, "full and true account of the cargo," in their ordinary acceptation, were consistent with that construction, which was that placed upon them by the British authorities in China, and with great deference to the eminent Counsel who had expressed a different view, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to submit that the words of a Chinese Treaty should not be strained beyond their natural meaning, on the ground that similar words in a British statute applicable to the conditions of trade in this country might have received a more extended and technical interpretation.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, having regard to the considerations above expressed, Her Majesty's Government, in the interest of British shipping in China, might properly decline to accept the interpretation placed by the Chinese Government on the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty.

That, in conclusion, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that, though the decision of the British authorities in the "Taiwan" case had been approved, the Rules under which an appeal was carried to Peking were at variance with Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan, which, by section 84, provided for the trial thereunder of offences against Treaties, and did not sanction any other appeal in such cases than that prescribed by the Order.

That copies of the proceedings in the case and of the Judgment would be found in Mr. Fraser's despatch No. 170 of the 21st September, 1878.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Such articles do not form part of cargo. Dissent from Chinese view.

That in our view goods concealed, as were the goods in question, and not carried upon the vessel by the authority of the owners, or their authorized agent, do not form part of the cargo, we are therefore of opinion Her Majesty's Government, in the interest of British shipping in China, may properly decline to accept the interpretation placed by the Chinese Government on the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty.

Prosecution of the "Taiwan."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th instant, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 21st June, in regard to the prosecution of the master of the British steam-ship "Taiwan," for an alleged offence against the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty of Tientsin, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the further correspondence noted in the margin.*

Interpretation of Article XXXVII of Treaty of Tientsin.

That the Chinese Minister at this Court, in reply to your Lordship's letter to him of the 13th July, transmitted a copy of an opinion of Sir Henry James and Mr. Alexander Young commenting on that letter, and expressed a hope that Her Majesty's Government and that of China might arrive at an understanding relative to the interpretation of the Article in question.

That the legal advisers of the Chinese Legation appeared to have so far modified their former opinion as to relieve the owners and master of a ship of responsibility where the Article attempted to be smuggled by a passenger or seaman "was under his sole control and in his immediate possession," a fact clearly established in the case which gave rise to the present discussion, the opium having been concealed in the passenger's luggage, and not being "at large" in the ship.

That the position taken up by the British authorities in China was that the liability of the owner or master depended on the fact whether reasonable vigilance had been exercised on their part, and that your Lordship was disposed to think that if any new rule should be agreed to between the two Governments to settle the question in dispute, it might be equitable to concede that the master should be held liable to a fine under Article XXXVII, in cases where the absence of reasonable vigilance had been clearly proved against him. Your Lordship, however, would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on that point and, generally, with our observations on the reply of the Chinese Minister.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose the papers previously submitted to us in the case, for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are unable to see any difficulty in the XXXVIIth Article of the Treaty, or in its application to the facts of the case on board the "Taiwan."

Meaning of word "cargo."

The word "cargo" in the Treaty represents, as said in the opinion of Counsel forwarded by the Chinese Minister to your Lordship, all articles of commerce placed on board the ship for the purpose of being carried, and which were intended, or ought, to be within the general custody of the ship and its officers.

But the opinion admits that an individual may have some article in his immediate possession which would not be cargo, and we suggest, as an instance, opium carried by a passenger in his private luggage.

No new rule requisite. Exercise of vigilance by ship-master.

In our opinion the Treaty requires the exercise of all due vigilance on the part of the master of the ship, and we see no reason for any new rule; but some rule may be suggested by the Chinese Minister which your Lordship might properly accept.

The Chinese Minister may, we think, properly be answered to this effect.

British protection to Anglo-Chinese in China.

Sir T. Wade's Circular.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 7th August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the correspondence, together with a printed memorandum,* respecting British protection to Anglo-Chinese in China. That since that memorandum was prepared, despatch No. 19 of the 9th June, 1879, had been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Peking, who transmitted therein a copy of a Circular which he had addressed to Her Majesty's Consuls in China on that subject. That Sir Thomas Wade urged that if persons of Chinese parentage who had been born within the British dominions, and were therefore British subjects, could not claim the status and privileges of British subjects while in China, no time should be lost in declaring this to be law.

That we should observe that in his minute, a copy of which was appended to the above printed memorandum, Sir Thomas Wade proceeded on the assumption that such persons "are as much under the protection and control of the British authorities in China as any other British subjects." That, on the other hand, he stated in his despatch above referred to that the Chinese Government emphatically deny the right of any person of Chinese descent to any other national status than that of his progenitors.

That the question of the right of Her Majesty's Government to protect such persons as British subjects while they were within Chinese territory, as against the Chinese authorities who claim their allegiance, was discussed in the printed memorandum inclosed, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon, and as to the necessity of a Convention with China to settle the controversy, and of the sanction of the Chinese Government to any modifications in the existing arrangements as published in Sir Rutherford Alcock's notification of the 6th October, 1868.

---

* Confidential Paper, No. 3865.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot insist upon protecting them.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government ought not to insist upon extending British protection to persons of Chinese descent whilst they are within Chinese territory.

They have no special claim.

That, as a matter of policy, we take the liberty of suggesting, for your Lordship's consideration, that, as the parents of these persons came for their own purposes within British territory, and the persons themselves go into China for objects of their own, they have no special claim for British protection, and the assertion of the right to protect them will lead to great complications and difficulties.

Circular should be withdrawn. No Convention necessary.

We are therefore of opinion that the Circular of Sir Rutherford Alcock may with advantage be withdrawn, and that the Chinese Government, with whom no Convention seems to us necessary, should be informed that the Circular has been withdrawn.

Ships owned by natives of Cyprus.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 14th February ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus, touching the position of ships owned by natives of that island, and requesting instructions on the subject.

That your Lordship proposed, with our concurrence, to inform Sir Garnet Wolseley that natives of Cyprus, not being British subjects, they are not entitled to have their ships registered as British ships under the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854, 17 and 18 Vic., cap. 104, sec. 18, and consequently that their ships remain Turkish ships, and (subject to our reply to a subsequent question) as such must carry the Turkish flag.

That your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether we concur in the above reply to Sir Garnet Wolseley's inquiry, and also to be favoured with our opinion as to how far the Legislature of Cyprus was competent to deal with ships owned by natives of Cyprus; for instance, whether a local Ordinance could properly be passed in the nature of a Cypriot Merchant Shipping Act, which should regulate the registration of Cypriot vessels, and assign to them a distinctive flag, and contain suitable provisions as to the transfer of ownership, discipline, and other matters usually dealt with in Acts and Ordinances for the regulation of merchant shipping; whether such legislation would require the assent of the Porte; whether the Ordinance could render justiciable by the Courts of Cyprus offences committed on board Cypriot ships on the high seas or beyond the limits of Cyprus, irrespectively of the nationality of the offender; and whether British protection could be extended to Cypriot ships with the consent of the Porte, in Turkish waters, and with or without the consent of the Porte in all other parts of the world.

Sir Julian Pauncefote in a postscript stated that he was to transmit to us a copy of the Convention of the 4th June last, assigning Cyprus to be administered by Great Britain, and of an Agreement giving Her Majesty the Queen legislative and other powers, and a copy of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 14th September, 1878, establishing the Legislature of Cyprus.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not to be registered as British ships. Must carry Turkish flag.

That we concur in your Lordship's opinion that natives of Cyprus are not entitled to have their ships registered as British ships, and that they remain Turkish ships, and must carry the Turkish flag.

Cannot pass Merchant Shipping Ordinance to operate outside the island. Distinctive flag, &c.

Referring to Conventions of the 4th June and the 14th August, 1878, and the Order in Council of the 14th September, 1878, we are of opinion that an Ordinance purporting to operate outside the island cannot properly be passed in the nature of a Cypriot Merchant Shipping Act regulating the registration of Cypriot vessels, assigning them a distinctive flag, or containing any provisions as to the transfer of ownership, discipline, and other matters.

Cypriot ships, in our opinion, remain Turkish ships, and any change in reference to them which the British occupation and administration of Cyprus may make desirable should be made by the Porte.

Offences in Cypriot waters on board Cypriot ships are justiciable by Court of Cyprus.

Offences committed by any person on board Cypriot vessels within the waters of Cyprus may be rendered justiciable by the Court of Cyprus, since those offences concern the peace, order, and good government of the island, and the island could not be administered unless offences so committed were justiciable by the constituted courts of the island.

Not offences on high seas, &c.

But offences committed on board Cypriot vessels on the high seas, or outside of Cypriot waters, will not be justiciable by the Courts in Cyprus.

British protection cannot be extended to ships

And British protection cannot, we think, in any case be extended to Cypriot ships.

Supreme Court, &c., for Cyprus.

Judicial reform.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th February last, stating that the question of judicial reform and reorganization for the Island of Cyprus had for some time past occupied the attention of Her Majesty's Government, and that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed printed memorandum* which had been drawn up for the purpose of submitting in a more convenient form, for our consideration and advice, a project of legislation, to make provision for the establishment of a Supreme Court in Cyprus, and of district Courts in the several divisions of the island, and for regulating the law to be administered therein, and the procedure to be followed. That a list of the papers accompanying that letter was inclosed, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the various proposals referred to in the memorandum.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, as unfortunately, whilst the papers relating to the Ordinance for the "Establishment of a High Court of Justice in Cyprus" were under our consideration, a statement was made in the House of Commons that the Ordinance was issued, and copies of it were laid before both Houses of Parliament, it will be now of no avail to suggest that any alterations should be made in the provisions which such Ordinance contains.

Objection to Ordinance.

We may, however, observe, that the only serious objection, founded on principle which can, in our opinion, be made to the Ordinance, arises upon the 10th paragraph.

Conflict with Capitulations.

Upon the subject of that paragraph and the alteration involved in it, it is impossible not to observe that two very different views may be entertained. In favour of it, it would probably be urged that the Capitulations are not to be regarded so much as actual Treaties between nation and nation as licences granted by the sovereign power of the Porte, and necessarily determinable when that Government parted with legislative and judicial authority. On the other hand, it would be contended that Her Majesty has no right to subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts in Cyprus the subjects of States having Capitulations or Treaties with the Sultan.

* See Confidential Paper No. 3841.

Her Majesty takes over existing obligations.

It will be urged that the Sultan himself could not, in breach of his obligations, have assumed the jurisdiction now sought to be imposed upon the natives of foreign States, and that by transferring the administration to Her Majesty he gives no new power, and that Her Majesty must take the administration of the island, subject to existing obligations.

We do not think it can be said that either view can be laid down with absolute certainty, though the former view alone is that upon which the 10th paragraph could be justified.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury —(Received June 11.)

My Lord,

Temple, June 11, 1879.

Pioneer regiment for Cyprus.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that he had the honour to lay before us, by direction of your Lordship, papers with reference to a project for the formation of a regiment of Turkish infantry for service in Cyprus.

That we should observe that Sir G. Wolseley in his despatch No. 122 of the 7th November, 1878, which contained all the details of the scheme, proposed that that force should be called "The Cyprus Regiment of Pioneers," that the men should be commanded by English officers, and should take the oath of allegiance to the Queen; and further, that they should be enlisted to serve Her Majesty in Cyprus or elsewhere for a term of six years.

That the cost of this force, should the scheme be carried out, was to be defrayed out of Imperial funds, but the charge would not be included in the Army Estimates.

That assuming that no objection existed on the part of the Porte to the recruiting in its dominions of Ottoman subjects with a view to their serving as British soldiers, and taking the oath of allegiance to Her Majesty, it became important to consider whether the scheme, as explained in Sir G. Wolseley's despatch, could be carried out consistently with British law, and, if not, what modifications were required therein for that purpose.

That the first question which arose was whether, having regard to the terms of section 4 of the Mutiny Act (41 Vic., cap. 10), the force in question would come under the provisions of that Statute.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a copy of the Act of the Legislature of the Cape Colony (No. 9 of 1878), establishing the force of "Cape Mounted Riflemen."

That it would be observed that, by sections 4 and 5 of that Act, that Colonial force was under the command of officers holding warrants of appointment from the Governor, and did not therefore, it was presumed, come within the terms of section 4 of the Mutiny Act, which referred to troops "under the command of any officer having any commission immediately from Her Majesty."

That the next question which arose was whether, assuming the proposed corps of Cyprus Pioneers to be established on the same footing as the Cape Mounted Riflemen, by an Ordinance of the Legislature of Cyprus, such an Ordinance could legally provide for the enlistment of men thereunder to serve anywhere but in Cyprus, the power of the Local Legislature being confined by Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 14th September, 1878, to the making of Laws and Ordinances for the peace and good order of the island.

That, assuming that the proposed force—constituted by local ordinance, as before mentioned—would not come within the terms of section 4 of the Mutiny Act, the next question which arose was whether a Turkish subject enlisting therein would "enlist as a soldier in Her Majesty's service" within the meaning of section 2 of the Act 1 Vic., c. 29, or, in other words, whether the disability of aliens "to enlist or serve as a soldier in Her Majesty's service," which that Act partially relieved, had reference only to enlistment and service in the British army under the provisions of the Mutiny Act, or whether it was such a disability as would affect the legality of the proposed Ordinance.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion on the particular questions above submitted, and generally as to whether the scheme of Sir G. Wolseley for the raising of the proposed force of Cyprus Pioneers could be legally carried out with or without modification.

That it was specially desirable that such a force should be raised and maintained in Cyprus, without the necessity of applying to Parliament for any legislation beyond the vote in supply.

That in considering the questions submitted to us, your Lordship would be much obliged if, in case the present project seemed to us to involve the necessity of such legislation, we would point out to your Lordship by what modifications in the plan that necessity might be avoided.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Force would come under Mutiny Act. Ordinance cannot provide for service out of Cyprus.

That the proposed force would come under the provisions of the 41 Vic., c. 10.

An Ordinance of the Legislature of Cyprus could not, in our opinion, legally provide for the enlistment of men to serve anywhere but in Cyprus.

"Soldiers in Her Majesty's service."

Any Turkish subject enlisting in the proposed corps would enlist "as a soldier in Her Majesty's service" within the meaning of section 2 of 1 Vic., c. 29, since the number of foreigners proposed to be enlisted would be in excess of the proportion allowed to serve in any regiment, battalion, or corps under 1 Vic., c. 29, sec. 2.

As to employment as civilians, &c.

The only modification, if it can be called a modification, is that the requisite number of men should be hired and employed as civilians in the making of roads, and other labour necessary for the public service, such as preservation of peace and good order in Cyprus.

Arms and uniform, &c.

These men should not be dressed, armed, or officered as soldiers.

The scheme is unconstitutional.

Our opinion, as your Lordship will gather from the above report, is against the proposed scheme, which we consider could not be carried out consistently with constitutional law.

We have, &c.

HARDINGE S. GIFFARD.

Doubt if force comes under Mutiny Act.

I agree with this Report, with the exception that I strongly doubt whether the force in question would come within the terms of section 4 of the Mutiny Act, or within the Mutiny Act at all.

Pioneer regiment for Cyprus.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 18th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acknowledge the receipt of our letter of the 11th instant on the subject of a proposed regiment of Cyprus pioneers, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state to us in reply that, in view of the opinion expressed therein, it was proposed to modify extensively the proposal which was originally sent home by Sir G. Wolseley.

Draft Ordinance.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote inclosed therewith a draft of an Ordinance which it was proposed that the High Commissioner of Cyprus should lay before his Legislative Council.

That we would observe that in the framing of that Ordinance the precedent of Ordinance V 1872 of the Parliament of the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope, establishing a "force for the better protection of life and property in the Colony, to be called the Cape Mounted Rifles," had been closely followed.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to take the inclosed papers into our consideration and to inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, there was any illegality in the proposed Ordinance.

That the papers sent with Sir Julian Pauncefote's previous letter were returned for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we observe the men proposed to be embodied to serve as an armed force are to act "as a military force for the defence of the island" and "discharge military duties in connection therewith when called upon so to do." They are, in fact, to be soldiers, armed, trained, clothed, equipped, and commanded by officers as soldiers, and not merely to act as civilians in a police force.

Force to act as military and police.

Illegal. Cypriots not British subjects. Cape Mounted Rifles no precedent.

In our opinion the proposed Ordinance would be illegal under the 1 Vict., cap. 29, sec. 2. The Cypriots are not British subjects as the men enlisted at the Cape were, and in other respects the case of the Cape Colony is so different that it affords no precedent for the creation of the proposed force in Cyprus.

The Cape Colony force was established by the Act of the Legislature of the Colony, and the pay of the men and officers was provided for out of the Colonial revenue. In the case of Cyprus the pay is, we presume, to come out of the estimates, and the force is created by the Ordinance.

No provisions for pay, discipline, &c.

The Ordinance contains no provisions for the pay, enforcing discipline, or anything beyond the formation of a military corps.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No power to comply under Order in Council.

That the High Commissioner has not under the Order in Council the power to comply with the wishes of the Porte as regards preventing the landing in Cyprus of the native of Lebanon or with the request of the Governor of Rhodes in regard to the apprehension of the military deserter from that island.

The High Commissioner may, however, have such power under some Ordinance with which we are not acquainted.

Ordinance must be passed, if not already done.

If no such Ordinance exists we submit, for your Lordship's consideration, whether it would not be expedient that an Ordinance should be passed enabling the High Commissioner to prevent the landing of persons against whom reasonable suspicion may exist.

Forests Ordinance. Question of validity of.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 27th August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Colonel Greaves, lately administering the Government of Cyprus, forwarding copies of "The Forests Ordinance" No. 25 of 1879 which passed the Legislative Council of that island on the 21st day of April, 1879, while Sir Garnet Wolseley was still Her Majesty's High Commissioner.

That as the terms of Colonel Greaves' despatch did not appear quite clear on the subject, your Lordship caused inquiry to be made of General Biddulph—the present High Commissioner—whether there existed in the island a copy of the Ordinance, as passed by the Legislative Council signed by Sir Garnet Wolseley in token of his assent thereto in the name of Her Majesty and on her behalf, as provided by section 17 of the Cyprus Order in Council of the 14th September, 1878.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose his answer, from which we would see that no such copy of the Ordinance existed. That "The Forests' Ordinance" was put in force in Cyprus, notwithstanding, Colonel Greaves having apparently been under the impression that the affixing of his own signature to the copies which he transmitted in his despatch above referred to was a sufficient compliance with Article 17 of the Order in Council.

That the copies of the Ordinances which were transmitted to the Secretary of State under Article 17 of the Royal Instructions were duly authenticated transcripts of the original; but in the present case the original had not been assented to and signed by Sir Garnet Wolseley.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion—

Can Ordinance passed by a High Commissioner be signed by his successor.

1. As to whether, before an Ordinance of the Legislature of Cyprus could take legal effect, it must have been assented to in the name of Her Majesty and on her behalf, and signed in token of such assent by the High Commissioner or officer administering the Government of the island by whom the Ordinance was passed under the power contained in Article 5 of the Order in Council, or whether the formalities prescribed by Article 17 might be legally performed and fulfilled by any succeeding High Commissioner or officer administering the Government of the island.

2. Whether in the case of the Forests Ordinance it was necessary that a new Ordinance should be passed to give it validity from the date when it was passed or first put in force.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose copies of the Cyprus Order in Council and Royal Instructions and of the Forest Ordinance in question, and he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our Report at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No. A new Ordinance must be passed to give it validity.

That the Article 17 of the Order in Council is so worded that, in our opinion, the signature of the High Commissioner assenting must be on the Ordinance, and the formalities required cannot be fulfilled by any succeeding High Commissioner or officer administering the Government of the island.

And a new Ordinance should be passed to give effect to the validity of the Forests' Ordinance from the time when it was passed or first put in force.

Domestic slavery in Cyprus.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us despatches from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus respecting the alleged existence of domestic servitude in that island. That from those despatches it appeared that it was the practice of the Courts of Justice, when any person alleged to be a slave applied to them to decree his freedom, and this, as of course and without condition; but that it was not clear on what legal basis that practice rested, and it further appeared that a Vizirial Circular Order addressed to the Governor of Cyprus which might be taken as having the force of law in Turkey and which prohibited slavery could not now be found, either in original or in copy.

Ordinance to legalize freeing of slaves.

That under those circumstances your Lordship, in a despatch which was also inclosed, suggested to the High Commissioner that it would be well to remove all doubt as to the illegality of slavery, by passing an Ordinance on the subject.

That General Biddulph accordingly submitted a draft of an Ordinance for that purpose which would be found in the accompanying despatch, but which appeared to your Lordship to be open to objection. That another draft Ordinance had therefore been prepared, by your Lordship's directions, which was therewith transmitted to us, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion as to whether it would meet the circumstances of the case, and whether it was such that it could properly be laid before the Legislative Council in Cyprus.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to point out that the 1st section of the draft in question was taken from the Act of the United States' Congress abolishing slavery in the district of Columbia which would be found at p. 376 of the accompanying volume, and that the remaining sections were from the Indian Act respecting slavery, No. 5 of the 7th April, 1843, copy of which was inclosed. That the 1st section of the latter Act had been omitted as being unsuitable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we beg to suggest the substitution for clause 4 of the draft Ordinance the following:—

Approving, with amendment.

"No one shall be excused from the consequences of doing any act amounting to a penal offence on the ground that the person to, upon, or against whom the act was done, was, or was believed to be, in a state of slavery."

Subject to this alteration, we are of opinion that the draft Ordinance will meet the circumstance of the case, and may properly be laid before the Legislative Council in Cyprus.

Force of constabulary. Ordinance for raising.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th instant, stating that with reference to our Report of the 21st June last he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying copy of a draft Ordinance for enabling Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus to raise a force of constabulary which was needed owing to the reduction of the military garrison in that island, and for meeting the expenses of which a vote was taken during the last Session of Parliament. A copy of the vote in question was inclosed for our information.

Vote taken for expenses.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take that draft into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether it was sufficient to carry out the object in view, and in other respects could properly be transmitted to the High Commissioner for submission to the Legislative Council of the island.

That as it was desirable that that force should be raised as soon as possible, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that our opinion might be given at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No objection.

That, in our opinion, the draft Ordinance is sufficient to carry out the object in view, and we see no legal objection to its being transmitted to the High Commissioner for submission to the Legislative Council of Cyprus.

No. 29.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received December 29.)

Temple, December 29, 1879.

My Lord,

Trial for murder. Alleged Greek subject, Sawas.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th December instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the trial and conviction before Her Majesty's High Court of Justice in Cyprus of a man named Sawas Christodoulos (commonly called Sawas), who was alleged to be a Greek subject.

That that man was charged with the murder of a Turkish zaptieh or officer of police. That the trial took place before the Judicial Commissioner with assessors, as provided by section 16 of the High Court of Justice Ordinance, and the accused, having been found guilty, was sentenced to death.

Sentenced to death.

Objection of Greek assessors.

That the two assessors, who were Greek subjects, objected to the finding and sentence of the Court, and their objection was recorded in the Minutes of the Proceedings, as provided by section 7 of the Ordinance.

That the Greek Vice-Consul at Larnaka raised various objections to the regularity of the trial, and urgent representations having been addressed by the Greek Minister in London to your Lordship to obtain a respite of the sentence pending further inquiry, your Lordship instructed the High Commissioner to suspend its execution, and to transmit forthwith a Report on the case for the consideration of Her Majesty's Government, in the manner prescribed by section 33 of the Ordinance.

That at that time it was assumed that Sawas was a Greek subject. That the High Commissioner's Report had now been received, and though the Minutes of Proceedings at the trial and the Notes of Evidence were not yet transmitted, the covering despatch of the High Commissioner (No. 188 of the 26th November), and a previous despatch from Colonel Edridge, the acting High Commissioner (No. 173 of the 15th November), gave rise to grave doubts as to whether, apart from the merits of the case and the representations of the Greek Government, the trial was not altogether illegal, having regard to the provisions of the Ordinance defining the limits of the jurisdiction to be exercised by the High Court of Justice.

Sawas a natural-born Ottoman.

That it appeared from the High Commissioner's despatch No. 188 that Sawas was a natural-born Ottoman subject, and that he was claimed as a Greek subject on the ground that he obtained Greek naturalization; but by Turkish law such naturalization was inoperative without the sanction of the Turkish authorities, and no proof had been adduced of such sanction having been obtained by Sawas. That it was presumed, therefore, that he must be treated as a Turkish subject for all purposes while within Turkish territory. That on that point he was to refer us to Colonel Edridge's despatch No. 171 of the 12th November.

Question of legality of trial.

Improper transfer of case from Ottoman Court to High Court.

That it appeared also from the High Commissioner's despatch No. 188 that the proceedings against Sawas were originally instituted in the proper Ottoman Court, but the Greek Vice-Consul having claimed him as a Greek subject by reason of his alleged Greek naturalization, the trial was transferred to the High Court by the Judicial Commissioner, proprio motu, and not by the High Commissioner, on the petition of the accused, as provided by section 108 (b) of the Ordinance.

That the reason of that proceeding appeared from Colonel Edridge's despatch No. 173, in which we would find a minute on the jurisdiction of the High Court by Mr. Phillips, the legal adviser of the Government of Cyprus, who also discharged the functions of Judicial Commissioner, and who, in that capacity, presided at the trial of Sawas.

That in that minute the legal adviser stated that he had adopted a construction of section 10 of the High Court of Justice Ordinance at variance with the views expressed in the Foreign Office despatch No. 45 of the 14th July, 1879.

That in the case of Sawas Mr. Phillips, acting upon his own interpretation of the Ordinance, concluded that the accused, having been claimed as a Greek subject, must be tried before the High Court of Justice, and he therefore transferred the trial to that Court.

That the jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice was defined by section 10 of the Ordinance as follows:—

---

* High Court of Justice Ordinance; to Colonel Greaves, No. 45, July 14; Colonel Edridge, No. 171, November 12; ditto, No. 173, November 15; Major-General Biddulph, No. 188, November 26, 1879; Ferand-Giraud, vols. i and ii.

"All jurisdiction, criminal and civil, over all persons, and in all cases other than such as would have been under the sole jurisdiction and authority of the Ottoman Courts if the said Convention had not been made, shall, subject and according to the provisions of this Ordinance, be vested in and exercised by the High Court."

Transfer of cases from Ottoman Courts to High Court.

That by section 108 provision was made for the transfer of cases from the Ottoman Courts to the High Court, and vice versâ, in the manner therein prescribed, but the same section contained an express saving of the jurisdiction of the Ottoman Courts, and enacted (sub-section c) that, subject to the provisions therein contained as to the transfer of cases, the jurisdiction of the Ottoman Courts should continue over all persons and in all cases that would have been subject to their jurisdiction if the Convention between Great Britain and the Porte of the 4th June, 1878, had not been made.

That before the British occupation of Cyprus, crimes committed by foreigners against Turkish subjects were within the sole jurisdiction and authority of the Ottoman Courts in the sense that they were not justiciable as of right by any other Court (see Ferand-Giraud, vol. ii, p. 350).

That the exercise of that jurisdiction as regarded British subjects was regulated by Article 42 of the British Capitulations (see Sir E. Hertslet's Treaties on Trade, Turkey, p. 20).

That Mr. Phillips contended (paragraphs 8 to 11 of his minute) that, as the Ottoman Courts could not proceed in such a case without the presence of the Consular Representative of the National concerned, the case was not "under their sole jurisdiction and authority" within the meaning of section 10 of the High Court of Justice Ordinance, and therefore that crimes committed by foreigners against Turkish subjects were primâ facie justiciable by the High Court, notwithstanding the saving clause contained in section 108.

That the first question which presented itself was whether, under the circumstances above stated, the legal status of Sawas in Cyprus was that of an Ottoman subject. That, if so, his trial before the High Court without a formal transfer of the case under section 108 of the Ordinance would seem to have been unwarranted by law.

That the next question was whether, assuming Sawas to have been properly treated as a Greek subject, the case was one which, previously to the British occupation of Cyprus, would have been "under the sole jurisdiction and authority of an Ottoman Court" within the meaning of section 10 of the Ordinance taken in conjunction with section 108. That, if so, the trial would likewise seem to have been unwarranted by law.

That he was to request that we would take all the accompanying papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the above questions, and, if we should be of opinion that the trial of Sawas before the High Court of Justice was not warranted by law, that we would advise your Lordship as to the steps that should be taken in reference thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If Sawas is a Turk, his trial is illegal.

That, assuming the facts to be correctly stated in the High Commissioner's despatch No. 188 of the 26th November, Sawas is an Ottoman subject, and, in our opinion, his trial before the High Court of Justice was not warranted by law.

Ottoman Court must try.

Under sections 10 and 108 of this Ordinance the Ottoman Courts had the sole jurisdiction over the case, and, since the High Court of Justice had no jurisdiction over Sawas, he must be left for the Ottoman Courts to deal with.

Suez Canal. Vessels where ship-spaces deducted from tonnage have been employed for freight.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith papers relative to the course of action which had been recommended by the British directors of the Suez Canal Company in the case of vessels passing through the Canal where the ships' spaces specified in the certificates as being deducted from tonnage were employed for freight-earning purposes.

Proposal to allow no deduction to such vessels in future.

That we should observe that the British directors refer to the recommendation contained in the Report of the International Tonnage Commission of the 18th December, 1873; that in cases of the above nature the space employed in the manner above indicated should be added to the net tonnage, and be never more allowed as a deduction; and that the directors suggested that the Canal Company should make a Report to the Government of the offending vessel, requesting the alteration of the certificate in accordance with paragraph 17 of the Report.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to state that it appeared to your Lordship, that whatever legal powers (if any) must be conferred on the Suez Canal directors to carry out the proposed arrangement, the Board of Trade could not make any endorsement on the certificate of a British ship, resulting in a disqualification to enjoy any privileges abroad, common to other British ships, without the authority of an Act of Parliament; but, that, before returning an answer to the directors, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with any observations we might have to offer on that point, and that Sir J. Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would, with that view, take the accompanying papers into our consideration.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Course cannot be adopted in present state of law.

That, in our opinion, the course of action recommended by the British directors of the Suez Canal Company in the case of vessels passing through the Canal, where the ships' spaces specified in the certificate as being deducted from tonnage are employed for freight-earning purposes, cannot be adopted as the law now stands in this country.

Consult Maritime Powers as to prevention of fraud.

We think that the maritime Powers may properly be communicated with, with the view of arriving at some means of preventing, and of punishing a fraud which may have been committed, or attempted, on board ships under their respective flags.

But at present, and so far as English ships are concerned, we are of opinion that neither the Board of Trade, nor the officers of the Suez Canal Company, can deal with the ship's register.

Suez Canal Company must take legal steps in each case.

And that the officers of the Company must take whatever legal means may be open to them for preventing the success of the fraud in each case.

Memorandum by Lord Cairns.

(Confidential.)

EGYPTIAN COMMISSION OF LIQUIDATION.

Commission of Liquidation.

I SHOULD have been glad if, before expressing any opinion on this difficult and intricate question, I had had the advantage of conferring with Mr. Reilly and Major Baring, who are so well acquainted with its minute details. As time, however, will not admit of this, it will be desirable that my Memorandum should be submitted to them for consideration, and I shall be ready, if it should be necessary, to attend to any observation they may make upon it.

Mixed Tribunals constituted by Khedive's authority.

Order in Council only suspends Consular jurisdiction.

2. I assume that the Règlement under which the Mixed Tribunals were constituted was made by the Khedive, like any other law, edict, or statute of Egypt, by virtue of his legislative and sovereign power, and that its force and vigour, and the authority of the Judges, are derived from this power. What was done by England in 1876 seems to make this clear. The Order in Council did not profess to confer any jurisdiction on the Mixed Tribunals. It suspended the Consular jurisdiction so long as the Mixed Tribunals existed, or until further order. It treated them as existing by virtue of Egyptian law. It is true that both before and after the Règlement was passed there were diplomatic arrangements and engagements between the Khedive and the other Powers binding him, diplomatically, as to the character and jurisdiction of the Courts. But whatever might be his obligations to other Powers, the source and limit of the territorial power of the Courts and Judges was the sovereign authority of the Khedive.

As to Edict for creating Commission of Liquidation, and its submission to the Powers.

3. I assume also that there will now be made, in apt and carefully considered words, a new edict, creating the Commission of Liquidation, and declaring that its enactments are to have the force of law, and are to be noticed and obeyed by all Courts and Judges, and are to have effect given to them in all suits between foreigners and others and the State, notwithstanding any provisions of the Règlement or the Codes, and, especially, that if Articles 10 and 11 of the Règlement, or Articles 6, 7, and 12 of the Code Civil would interfere with the enactments of the Commission, those Articles are to be held, pro tanto, as repealed or modified.

4. I assume, further, that this new edict will be submitted to the Great Powers, and will have, diplomatically, their assent or approval, and will also be communicated, diplomatically, to the United States and the other Powers, so that it may have, either at once or in process of time, the adherence of some or all of them.

5. I may add with regard to the preceding paragraph, that, bearing in mind the form of authorization conferred by the Senate on the Executive of the United States, it seems possible that to such an edict as I have supposed, the Executive of the United States might give its adherence without any recurrence to the Senate. But on this point I am, of course, unable to speak with any confidence.

6. The edict and the diplomatic adherence to it of the consenting Power would be communicated to the Judges.

Judges should be bound by Edict of Liquidation.

7. If, after this was done, a process should come before the Tribunals in which a claim was made against the Government for the full nominal amount of some item of the public debt, it would, in my opinion, be the duty of the Judges to conform themselves to and obey the edict of liquidation. It is, of course, impossible to say with certainty what view may be adopted by Judges who are enabled to decide without appeal. But I cannot see how they, as Judges, can trace their authority to any higher source than the sovereign power of the Khedive expressed in the Règlement, a source no higher than that of the edict of liquidation which will control the Règlement.

8. But suppose the Judges to disregard the edict, and to award a Judgment as if no edict of liquidation had been made, what would be the result?

Otherwise the Executive might disregard their Judgments.

9. The Egyptian Executive would decline to enforce, and would practically disregard, the Judgment. If the Judgment was in favour of a subject of one of the Great Powers, he would apply to his own Government for diplomatic intervention. But he would be told that his Government had concurred in, or had approved of, the policy of the edict, and could not intervene. The plaintiff might, indeed, be a subject of a Power which had not assented to the Commission of Liquidation. And there is, of course, the possibility that subjects of the assenting Powers might assign their securities to subjects of non-assenting Powers for greater facility of litigation, although I observe that Major Baring does not look on this as likely to happen in practice. But even if a non-assenting Power took the view that the edict of liquidation was not within the competence of the Khedive, and was a breach of his diplomatic engagements, it is not likely that such a Power would make the matter a casus belli. The most it would do would be to protest, and possibly repudiate and withdraw its adherence to the scheme of Mixed Tribunals, and return to the old Consular jurisdiction, which return, however, would not interfere with the liquidation.

Effect on non-assenting Powers.

Never mind opposition of Mixed Tribunals.

10. On the whole, assuming that the Great Powers are agreed on the policy of a

1879

Commission for liquidation, I think the danger of any interference by the Mixed Tribunals may be faced.

Condemned on three counts for one transaction.

That, from that Report it would appear that the two prisoners were jointly indicted on three counts :—(1st) for breaking into a church and stealing, &c. ; (2nd) for breaking out of a church and stealing, &c. ; (3rd) receiving stolen goods. That the evidence related to one and the same transaction, yet a verdict was recorded of "Guilty on three counts."

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, in view of the evidence, and in the absence of previous convictions against the prisoners, the sentence of ten years' penal servitude was too severe, and if so, what portion of it can properly be remitted.

My Lord,

"Certificats de Coutume" for transfer of stocks, estates of deceased British subjects.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a note which your Lordship had received from the French Chargé d'Affaires at this Court,† raising a question as to the validity of the "Certificats de Coutume" now in use for the purpose of obtaining the transfer of French stocks and shares belonging to the estate of deceased British subjects.

That we would gather from the despatch No. 1 of the 20th January, 1870, to Her Majesty's Consul in Paris, which, together with the correspondence therein alluded to, was to be found in the accompanying volume, what was the nature of the arrangement come to in 1870 with regard to that matter. That, in pursuance of that arrangement, it had been usual for an English solicitor to certify that the personal representative claiming the transfer of the stock or shares was legally entitled thereto according to English law. That that certificate constituted the "Certificat de Coutume," and before it could be acted upon the British Consul was called upon to attach to it a further certificate in the terms cited in M. de Kergolay's letter. That it appeared, however, that according to the requirements of French law or practice, the "Certificat de Coutume" must issue from a person who was officially authorized ("qui a qualité") to perform that act, and not merely from a person who might be professionally qualified for that purpose. That the French Government accordingly pointed out that an English solicitor, though he might be professionally qualified to issue such a certificate, was not "officially authorized" to do so. That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured, at our early convenience, with our opinion as to whether the Registrar, or other officer of the Court of Probate, or the Conveyancing Counsel of the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court of Judicature, or any other persons, could, without any legislative provision in that behalf, be officially appointed and authorized by the Lord Chancellor or any of the Judges to grant these "Certificats de Coutume," so as to obviate the objection raised by the French Government, and if not, your Lordship would be glad to learn what course you would suggest to meet the difficulty.

---

* Colonial Office, August 11; Dr. Arpa, No. 15, Judicial.

† June 14, 1878.

French law requires issue of certificate by person "officially authorized."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Ask French Government to accept certificate of Registrar of Court of Probate.

That we submit for your Lordship's consideration that, since all grants of Probate and Administration are made under the authority of the Court of Probate in England, and that of similar Courts in Ireland, Scotland, and elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions, the French Government should be asked to accept as a "Certificat de Coutume," the certificate of the Registrar of the Court out of which the Probate or Administration may issue, stating that by law the person or persons named in the Probate or Letters of Administration is or are the person or persons entitled to receive the property of the deceased.

And as to identification of person named therein.

There may be a difficulty in identifying the person or persons who produces or produce this certificate as the person or persons named in the certificate. We think the French Government may properly be asked to say what means the French law has which may obviate this difficulty, or what evidence from this country will satisfy the French authorities.

The matter, however, is one which is entirely in the hands of the French Government; and we think that whatever course may be proposed by your Lordship, that course should be communicated to the French Government before any steps are taken in this country to follow it out. For the French authorities may raise and maintain objections which may either modify the suggested plan, or show that, from the French point of view, it is entirely inadmissible.

Temple, July 12, 1879.

My Lord,

Mr. R. Millar's arrest and ill-treatment at Espezel for having no passport.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, inclosing copies of a correspondence which his Excellency had had with Mr. Robert Millar, a British subject, and with the French Government respecting the arrest of Mr. Millar by French gendarmes at Espezel, in the south of France, in the month of September last, in consequence of his not having a passport about him, a condition which the French Government have not for some time past required of persons visiting that country, and notwithstanding that Mr. Millar did produce papers sufficient to establish his identity.

As to compensation in addition to punishment of gendarme, &c.

That it was apparent, therefore, that the hardships and indignities to which Mr. Millar was subjected, which were fully described in the accompanying correspondence, were altogether illegal and unjustifiable, whilst the representations of the British Embassy on that gentleman's behalf, though they had elicited an expression of regret from the French Government, the punishment of the offending gendarme, and an engagement on the part of the Government to take measures to prevent the repetition of such an occurrence, had failed to obtain for Mr. Millar the personal compensation for which he had applied.

Cannot formally claim indemnity.

That whilst, on the one hand, Her Majesty's Government felt that they could not, with a conviction that such a course would result in failure, recommend Mr. Millar to seek his remedy in the Courts of the country, they also felt that they were unable, consistently with the principle which they themselves maintained in corresponding cases, to press Mr. Millar's claim for indemnity in any formal manner upon the French Government.

That they were, however, of opinion that the very exceptional circumstances of the case warranted them in making a renewed effort to induce the French Government to take a favourable view of Mr. Millar's claim, and that, under those circumstances, your Lordship had caused the accompanying draft of an instruction to Her Majesty's Ambassador to be prepared.

That before sending it forward, however, your Lordship would be glad if we would take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion whether the proposed Instruction to Lord Lyons was right and proper, and such as fairly met the exigences of that particular case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approving instruction to Lord Lyons.

That, assuming as Sir Julian Pauncefote states, that the claim of Mr. Millar to compensation cannot be put forward as a right, the proposed Instruction to Lord Lyons is right and proper.

But should not wind up with a threat when asking a favour.

However, we respectfully submit, for your Lordship's consideration, whether, in the view of the case as assumed, and looking to the Instruction as a means of obtaining as a favour some compensation for Mr. Millar, it would not be better to conclude the Instruction with an appeal to the high sense of liberality and justice of a great nation whose subordinate officials may have inflicted a gross outrage upon, and caused personal suffering to, the innocent subject of a friendly country, rather than with a threat of the feeling of irritation which may be produced in this country if those sufferings and humiliation are left unredressed.

We have, &c.

(No. 914.)

My Lord, Foreign Office, July 15, 1879.

Instruction.

I have had under my consideration, and have referred to the Law Officers of the Crown, your Excellency's despatch No. 606 of the 5th ultimo, inclosing copies of a correspondence which you have had with Mr. Robert Millar and with the French Government respecting the arrest of that gentleman by French authorities at Espezel, in the Department of the Aude, in the month of September last, in consequence of his being unable to produce a passport at the moment, and notwithstanding that he did produce papers sufficient to establish his identity.

I have to express to your Excellency my entire approval of the steps which you have taken in bringing Mr. Millar's representation before the French Government, and in endeavouring to obtain for him a reasonable indemnity for the hardships and indignities to which he has been subjected in consequence of the misconduct of the French gendarmerie.

These steps, it appears, have resulted in an expression of the personal regret of the French Government to yourself and to Mr. Millar at the occurrences in question; in the punishment of the gendarme; and in an undertaking to adopt such measures as shall prevent a recurrence of such an incident in future; but the French Government appear to treat altogether in silence the claim for compensation which Mr. Millar has advanced.

Her Majesty's Government glad of reparation made;

Under these circumstances, I have to request that your Excellency will state to M. Waddington that Her Majesty's Government have received with satisfaction the expression of regret conveyed by his Excellency to yourself and to Mr. Millar personally at the misconduct of the French gendarmerie on the occasion in question, as well as the assurance that the offender has been punished; and that stringent instructions have been issued to obviate the recurrence of such an outrage upon a peaceful traveller, whose actions, language, manner, or appearance afforded no ground whatever for suspicion.

Your Excellency will state that Her Majesty's Government must, nevertheless, express their regret that the appeal made by your Excellency on behalf of Mr. Millar has been throughout the correspondence so completely ignored.

But hope Mr. Millar will be compensated.

It would be futile in such a case to refer the victim of such an outrage to the Civil Tribunals for compensation, and the case is one which commends itself so strongly to the favourable consideration of the French Government, and is fortunately so exceptional in its character, that Her Majesty's Government confidently appeal to the high sense of liberality and justice of a great nation whose subordinate officials have inflicted a gross outrage upon, and caused personal suffering to, the innocent subject of a friendly country; and they trust that, on further consideration, the French Government will do justice to Mr. Millar's complaint in all respects, by awarding to him such compensation as they may deem reasonable under the circumstances.

I am, &c.

My Lord, Temple, July 31, 1879.

"Certificats de Coutume."

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, on the receipt of our Report of the 20th January last, your Lordship addressed to the French Ambassador at this Court a note, inclosed therewith, suggesting, with a view to meet the objections which had been raised by the French Government, that "Certificats de Coutume" for the transfer of French stocks and shares belonging to the estates of deceased British subjects should in future be issued by the Registrar of the British Court, out of which the probate or administration might issue.

As to Registrar's certificate in cases of transfer of stocks on appointment of new trustees.

That Her Majesty's Government had not then been informed whether the French Government were prepared to adopt that suggestion, but that, in the meanwhile, it had been brought to the notice of your Lordship, in the correspondence which Lord Tenterden was to inclose, that although the course proposed might meet the requirements of French law with regard to the proof of the validity of the title of executors and administrators under probates and letters of administration, the certificate of the Registrar would hardly be applicable in cases where the transfer of French stocks and shares was necessary on the appointment of new trustees under the usual powers contained in wills and settlements.

As to Treasury Solicitor being authorized to issue certificates.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether, in order to meet such cases, there would be any objection to the Treasury Solicitor being authorized, as a public functionary, to issue such certificates on payment of a fee. That the Treasury Solicitor, being invested with such authority by the Lords Commissioners, would probably come within the meaning of the expression "a qualité" used by the French Government when they objected that a private solicitor had no official authority to issue such certificates, though otherwise competent to do so.

That, if we should see no objection to the course proposed, your Lordship would be glad to be further informed whether, in our opinion, the certificates required might properly be issued, in all cases, by the Treasury Solicitor without recourse to the Registrar even in matters of probate and administration.

That Lord Tenterden was to inclose, for convenience of reference, the papers which accompanied his letters to us on the 8th January last.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the question now raised by the French Government is a much larger one than that originally stated by the Count de Kergolay in his letter of the 14th June, in which reference was made only to the cases of "héritiers et légataires."

Now, the whole matter of transmission of property has to be dealt with.

No doubt it is desirable that the evidence which the French authorities require for the purpose of a transfer, whether inter vivos or otherwise, should, if possible, be produced by the same official in this country.

Treasury Solicitor cannot issue them.

We are of opinion, however, that the Solicitor for the Treasury cannot, in strictness, be invested by the Lords Commissioners with authority to supply the certificates which the French Government requires.

1879

Memorandum by Lord Cairns as to "Certificats de Coutume."

"Certificats de Coutume."
May be issued by Queen's Proctor."

THE only suggestion that I am able to make on the subject of these papers is that the certificate which the French authorities desire to be supplied with should be given by the Queen's Proctor, he being of course allowed to charge a proper fee.

2. The Queen's Proctor is an officer of the Testamentary Court, and so far as regards certificates relating to testacy or intestacy, no person can more properly be selected to give them. It appears that he will be further required to certify as to the transmission of property from old to new trustees, and in other similar cases; but his duty in this respect will be analagous to that which he will discharge in giving certificates as to testacy or intestacy.

3. At present the office of Queen's Proctor is filled by the gentleman who is Solicitor to the Treasury; but the two offices are quite distinct, and may come to be held by different persons.

Government cannot guarantee the accuracy of the certificate he gives.

4. I observe that the Law Officers state that in their opinion the Solicitor for the Treasury cannot in strictness be invested by the Lords Commissioners with authority to supply the certificates which the French Government requires. This form of expression suggests to me to point out that the Government ought not, in selecting the Queen's Proctor as the person who may give these certificates, to make itself responsible, or, in other words, to guarantee the accuracy of the certificates which he gives. In practice I have no doubt that his certificates may be implicitly relied on; but the Government ought not to be called on to give any guarantee of their accuracy.

No. 37.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received August 26.)

Temple, August 26, 1879.

My Lord,

Arrest of Mr. Millar at Espezel for having no passport.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the          July last, stating that on the 12th of that month we were good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion upon a draft instruction with which it was proposed to furnish Her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris in regard to the case of Mr. Robert Millar, who had been arrested by French gendarmes at Espezel in France, in consequence of his not having a passport about him.

Her Majesty's Government does not disclaim right to demand redress for outrages, but would have to grant reciprocity.

That that instruction, Lord Tenterden was to inform us, had been forwarded to Lord Lyons, amended in the sense suggested in our Report. That with reference, however, to the passage in his letter of the 1st July, in which it was stated that Her Majesty's Government felt that "they were unable, consistently with the principle which they themselves maintained in corresponding cases, to press Mr. Millar's claim for indemnity in any formal manner upon the French Government," he was directed by your Lordship to explain that it was not intended to disclaim the right of Her Majesty's Government to demand indemnity in this or similar cases, but that it appeared to your Lordship desirable to avoid asserting this right, having regard to the persistent refusal of Her Majesty's Government to accept any reciprocal obligation in respect of such claims, as shown in the inclosed memorandum, drawn up by the Librarian of the Foreign Office.*

That your Lordship, however, considered that in future Her Majesty's Government should observe reciprocity in the class of cases under consideration, and should be prepared to grant to foreigners in this country the same measure of relief which they claim and obtain for British subjects abroad. That it was important, therefore, that the principles which should guide the Foreign Office in dealing with outrages committed on British subjects abroad by police officers should be as clearly defined as the nature of the question permits, and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the points to which he would presently refer.

---

* Confidential, No. 3279.

Principle of action should be defined.

Quoting cases of outrages in Italy.

That in the correspondence relating to police outrages committed on British subjects in Italy, of which he was to transmit a copy, the Italian Government maintained the doctrine that where a British subject in Italy had been injured by an Agent of the Government, such subject ought to sue the individual inflicting the wrong in the Italian Courts, and ought not to seek any compensation from the Government (see Chevalier Cadorna to Earl Granville, pp. 3-4; Count Menabrea's memorandum, p. 93, especially "conclusion;" Sir A. Paget to the Earl of Derby, No. 126 of the 10th April, 1877, p. 153).

That our predecessors in their Report of the 13th April, 1874 (Correspondence, p. 5), which had reference to Mr. Mercer's case, and to the Chevalier Cadorna's letter above cited, advised that as the Italian Minister maintained that the law of Italy had been properly administered by the Italian Tribunals, a claim for compensation for the suffering and injury caused to Mr. Mercer could not be pressed against the Italian Government. That that Report would seem to admit the doctrine contended for by the Italian Government, and accordingly Mr. Mercer's claim to compensation was abandoned. But that in the subsequent cases of Messrs. Tourrier and O'Neill, the Rev. Mr. Kay, and the Rev. Mr. Allies, the same question again arose, and the same doctrine was again urged by the Italian Government (see Count Menabrea's memorandum above cited).

Responsibility of Governments for acts of their Agents.

That in our Report of the 12th September, 1876, on the above cases (Correspondence, p. 100), we expressed our dissent from that doctrine, and we advised that if a British subject whilst he was in a foreign State received an injury from the Government of such a State, or from an Agent for whose acts the Government was responsible, and no adequate remedy was provided by the municipal law of such foreign State, it was not only the right, but it might be, according to circumstances, the duty of Her Majesty's Government to obtain by diplomatic intervention the payment of compensation to the British subject for the injury inflicted upon him.

As to "adequate legal remedy."

Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with an explanation of the precise meaning of the qualification expressed in the words "and no adequate remedy is provided by the municipal law of such foreign State," as it appeared doubtful whether they apply to the absence of any legal remedy against the offender or against the Government, or to the inability of the offender, even if proceeded against in the Local Tribunals, to make adequate compensation for the injury sustained.

That, whichever may be the correct inference to be drawn from the words of our Report above referred to, it was presumed that before any indemnity could be claimed from the foreign Government it was necessary that legal proceedings should have been instituted by the complainant, so as to establish judicially the commission of the offence, if this should be a requirement of the local law. Lord Tenterden was further pleased to state that another instance had recently occurred in Sicily of outrageous conduct on the part of Italian carabinieri towards an English clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Pullen. That this case would be the subject of a separate reference to us, and would necessitate the consideration of the points which Lord Tenterden had had the honour to lay before us in connection with the treatment of such cases in general.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Foreigners have no claim to greater protection than natives.

That, as a general rule, foreigners have no right to greater protection from, or compensation for, injuries received than the subjects or citizens of the country in which the foreigner may happen to be.

Actions for assault, &c., in this country.

In this country actions for assault, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, and so forth, are the remedies open to the foreigner, and he or his Government, on his behalf, cannot insist upon any exceptional favour being shown to him because he is an alien.

Exceptions in uncivilized countries.

To this general rule there are exceptions, for instance, in barbarous and uncivilized countries, where the future safety and good treatment of strangers may properly require that the rulers of the country should be made responsible and suffer for the misconduct of the inhabitants.

1879

Exception in cases of negligence, &c., of Government or its Agents.

Another exception to the general rule also arises in cases where in civilized countries the injury has been occasioned by the acts and directions or the negligence of the Government or of Agents for whose conduct the Government is responsible.

"No adequate legal remedy" when aggressor cannot compensate, and Government cannot be prosecuted. Case for diplomatic action.

By the qualification expressed in the words of our Report (12th September, 1876, p. 100 of Correspondence), "and no adequate remedy is provided by the municipal law of such foreign State," we desired to intimate that in our view, if owing to the circumstances of the persons inflicting injury upon the foreigner or other causes no sufficient compensation could be obtained from such persons by resort to the Tribunals and by the law of the country where the outrage occurred, no claim (as is the case in England) could be enforced against the Government, a case for diplomatic interference would arise.

Legal proceedings should first be taken by injured parties in certain cases.

With reference to the question, whether before any indemnity can be claimed from the foreign Government it is necessary that legal proceedings should have been instituted by the complainant so as to establish judicially the commission of the offence complained of, we certainly think that where the facts are in dispute such proceedings ought to be taken, for it is obvious that no claim for compensation can be fairly made against a Government for the wrongful acts of its Agents unless it has been established that such wrongful acts have been committed.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor on Count Münster's Proposal as to Collisions on the High Seas.

Collisions on high seas.

Territorial claim not limited to three miles.

Distance necessary for defence.

IT may be desirable, in order to prevent mistake, to observe that the Memorandum supplied by the German Government appears somewhat to misapprehend the right claimed by this country, to which effect was given by the Territorial Waters Act, 1878. We have never limited our claim to three miles from the coast. The argument of the German Memorandum is quite sound, that the improvement in modern artillery and other circumstances may entitle a country to protect, and exercise rights over, a larger margin of the high seas. The Act of 1878 affirmed that this right existed "to such a distance as is necessary for the defence and security of the Queen's dominions." So far as concerned the procedure introduced by the Act, the power taken was limited to the three-mile line, but this in no way abandoned the larger claim.

2. The suggestions now thrown out by the German Government are somewhat vague, and it is difficult, unless they were formulated with more precision, to reply to them.

Mixed administration of criminal law not admissible within three-mile limit.

3. As regards the three-mile limit within which we have taken powers to administer our criminal law (a limit which is blended with and includes bays, harbours, estuaries of rivers, &c., where the jurisdiction never was doubted), I do not think it would be possible to consent to any mixed administration of the criminal law, or any interference with our own mode of administering the criminal law. It would be an entire abandonment of the principle we have contended for if, on the one hand, we claimed the right to exercise jurisdiction within a certain area seaward, and, on the other hand, were to concede, by a sort of capitulation, a right to a foreign Power to interfere or join in the exercise of that jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction not wantonly exercised. Secretary of State's certificates in cases of foreigners, &c.

4. We have taken care that in any extreme case where it would be a violent act to put in force our jurisdiction; for example, to punish one foreign sailor for an act done to another foreign sailor in a foreign ship passing along our coast, to place a check upon our officials by requiring, before prosecution, the certificate of the Secretary of State, and this ought to satisfy foreign Governments that our jurisdiction will never be wantonly exercised.

Understanding with foreign Powers as to uniform standard of criminality.

5. Nothing in what I have said would be inconsistent with friendly communications with foreign Powers for the purpose of arriving, as far as possible, at a uniform standard of criminality and punishment as to offences arising out of collisions between ships of different nations within the territorial limit.

Objections to mixed jurisdiction on high seas.

As to composition of Mixed Court, importation of foreign jurymen, &c.

6. As to the high seas beyond the territorial limit, to which the German Memorandum also refers, I see still greater difficulty in the proposal. At present this country can punish its own subjects for any criminal offence committed on the high seas in English ships against fellow subjects or foreigners, and other countries have similar rights on the high seas as to their own subjects. But I do not think the English Legislature would be likely to assent to a measure by which an Englishman, for an offence on the high seas, would become liable to be tried not by a Court of the Queen, but by a Mixed Tribunal composed of Judges deriving authority partly from the Queen and partly from foreign Sovereigns. Moreover, the difficulty of detail would be very serious. Where is the Court to sit? Is it to be a perpetual Court, and are there to be constant judges, or is it only to be set up now and then when an offence on the high seas requires it? Then is there to be trial by jury, and if so, is it to be a mixed jury, and are the jurymen, when the trial takes place in country A., to be imported in part from country B., to make the proper admixture?

7. In truth, the proposal, at all events in its present form, appears to me to be a visionary one, and not to have been thoroughly thought out by its originators.

Slave Trade Treaty of of 1841.

Accession of Germany in place of Prussia.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 20th May instant, stating that with reference to our Reports of the 26th October, 1877, and the 26th February, 1878, on the subject of the accession of the German Empire instead of Prussia into the Treaty of the 20th December, 1841, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a translation of a note from the German Ambassador in London,* stating that the German Government had made arrangements for submitting for the assent of the Reichstag the Convention on that subject concluded with this country on the 29th March, 1879.

Assent of Austria and Russia by note.

That his Excellency stated that with regard to the fulfilment of the reservation made in Article III, it would, in the opinion of his Government, be sufficient if the Governments of Austria and Russia declare their consent to the Convention by note, and that it might not in that case be necessary to conclude separate analogous agreements with those two States so long as they do not fit out cruizers against the Slave Trade, and he requested to be informed of the views of Her Majesty's Government in regard to that point.

That a copy of the Convention of the 29th March, 1879, was also inclosed, and he was to request that we would take Count Münster's note into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion at our early convenience as to the answer which should be returned thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken this matter into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would be good enough to favour you with our opinion upon the claim preferred by the German Ambassador in the inclosed note for compensation for the destruction at Besika in September 1877, by a force of marines belonging to the British fleet, of goods belonging to a German subject named Eggert.

That all the information relating to the matter in the possession of the Foreign Office would be found in the Ambassador's note and the memorandum accompanying it, and in the despatch from Vice-Admiral Hornby, which was also inclosed with its covering letter from the Admiralty.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Compensation due.

That, in our opinion, the claim preferred by the German Ambassador is well founded and cannot properly be resisted.

The amount of the claim seems very large, but the conduct of the British party employed, first, in breaking open the doors, and then in destroying the spirits and the beer, was so illegal that we doubt whether any discussion on the amount of the claim would be advisable.

Violation of Consular privileges in Hayti.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 28th instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by desire of your Lordship, the papers noted in the margin,* and to submit for our consideration and advice the case stated in the inclosed memorandum, and relating to an alleged violation by the local authorities in Hayti of the privileges claimed by foreign Consuls in that Republic.

Request of Denmark for support of Her Majesty's Government.

That the protest and reclamations which the Danish Government had addressed to the Haytian Government, and which Her Majesty's Government were invited to support, purported to be based, in a great measure, on the law of nations, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take all the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to the request of the Danish Government. That as the mail for Hayti would leave on the 1st proximo, your Lordship would be glad to receive our Report, if possible, in time to transmit instructions to Her Majesty's Representative by that opportunity.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Consuls are amenable to civil and criminal jurisdiction.

That, as a general rule, Consuls are amenable to the civil and criminal jurisdiction of the country in which they reside, and their property and effects are subject to the recourse of execution and process of the local Courts.

Arrest of Danish Consul not breach of law of nations.

We are not therefore prepared to agree with the view of the Danish Government, that the proceedings against and the arrest of Mr. Daguin are infractions of the law of nations.

The official notification published in the "Moniteur Haytian" on the 7th February, 1852, is not very clearly expressed, and the meaning of paragraphs 2 and 3 may be doubtful.

If Hayti gives [? privileges] to Consuls, Her Majesty's Government may support Denmark.

If, however, the Haytian Government have, by that notification, agreed to give to Consuls in matters relating exclusively to Consular functions, as, for instance, the boarding and lodging of shipwrecked seamen, as in Mr. Daguin's case, then we think the Danish Government may be informed that Her Majesty's Government will be prepared to support the claim made against the Haytian Government.

Claim of Mrs. Maunder.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st July, 1879, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by directions of your Lordship, the printed correspondence and papers noted in the margin† relating to the claim of Mrs. Maunder against the Haytian Government, which on several occasions had been referred to us for our consideration and advice.

---

[*] Count Münster, July 4; Jan de Büler, July 21 and 23, 1879; Foreign Office Memorandum, 1870; draft to the Marquis d'Harcourt, November 14, 1877; draft to Baron von den Brincken, July 21.

[†] Printed Correspondence, No. 3581; ditto, in continuation of No. 3581; ditto, in continuation of No. 3813; Memorandum by Sir J. Pauncefote; Mr. Byron, No. 14, June 26, 1879.

That he was to inclose a memorandum explaining the present position of the case, and submitting the following three questions:—

1. Are Her Majesty's Government justified in disregarding the "Acte de Naissance," now produced by the Haytian Government as proof of the illegitimacy of Joseph Maunder?

2. Are they justified in insisting on the payment on account to Mrs. Maunder of 22,000*l.* as a condition of arbitration?

3. Would the refusal of the Haytian Government to comply with the demands of Her Majesty's Government justify coercive measures, such as a blockade?

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion on the above questions, and with any suggestions we might be able to offer as to the best mode of bringing the case to a satisfactory conclusion.

That the Haytian Government do not seem to understand that the payment of 22,000*l.* which had been demanded as a preliminary to arbitration was not in satisfaction of any particular item, but on account generally, and was based on the fact that Mrs. Maunder had admittedly sustained a loss to that amount, which was about one-sixth of her total claim.

That your Lordship, however, would be disposed to reduce the demand to 10,000*l.*, or even to agree to the amount agreed upon being paid into the Bank of England to await the result of the award; but your Lordship much doubted whether any concession whatever would induce the Haytian Government to take any serious measures for the satisfaction of Mrs. Maunder's long pending claim.

That since the inclosed memorandum was printed the further despatch (Mr. Byron, No. 14, June 28, 1879) had been received from Her Majesty's Representative in Hayti, and was transmitted therewith for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

"Acte de Naissance." Illegitimacy of J. Maunder. Cannot treat it as a forgery on present evidence.

That the immediate question seems to be the credit which should be given to the "Acte de Naissance" now produced by the Haytian Government.

1. Suspicious as are all the circumstances connected with this document, we are not prepared to advise your Lordship that upon the present evidence it can be treated as a forgery, or altogether passed over and disregarded.

Insist on payment of 22,000*l.* on account, pending result of award, &c.

2. In our opinion, Her Majesty's Government will be justified in insisting on the immediate payment of the 22,000*l.* into the Bank of England to await the result of the award, and as a preliminary to arbitration.

The Haytian Government should at the same time be informed that this sum of 22,000*l.* is not in satisfaction of any particular item, but on account generally, and that the 22,000*l.* will be returned by Her Majesty's Government if the illegitimacy of J. Maunder be established.

We see no reason for reducing the payment from 22,000*l.* to 10,000*l.*

Refusal of Hayti will justify coercive measures.

3. This claim has been so long pending, and the conduct of the Haytian Government in the whole business has been so unsatisfactory, that the refusal of the Haytian Government to comply with the demands of Her Majesty's Government will, in our opinion, justify coercive measures such as a blockade.

Difficulties as to Extradition Act in Malta. No Habeas Corpus. As to making an Ordinance similar to that relating to extradition between Malta and Italy.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 18th February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office (21st January), inclosing a memorandum by Sir Adrian Dingle, the Crown Advocate of Malta, calling attention to the difficulty which arose in carrying out the provisions of section 2 of the Extradition Act, 1870, in that Colony, by reason of the absence of any provision in the laws of Malta, corresponding to the writ of Habeas Corpus. That, in order to remedy that inconvenience, it was proposed to bring into operation as a General Ordinance sections 7 to 15 of the Malta Ordinance No. 3 of 1874, therewith inclosed, which had reference only to extradition between Malta and Italy, and which had not yet been brought into operation owing to some difficulties having arisen which were still under discussion.

That it was stated in the Colonial Office letter that that General Ordinance would be confirmed by Order in Council, and Sir M. Hicks Beach desired to be informed whether your Lordship saw any objection to the course above indicated.

That Lord Tenterden was to observe that, while your Lordship presumed that there was no legal objection to the passing of a local Ordinance to remedy the inconvenience complained of, and that such Ordinance should be dealt with under section 18 of the Imperial Act, it appeared to your Lordship that sections 7 to 15 of the Malta Ordinance No. 3 of 1874 were too restricted in their terms to carry out the object in view, inasmuch as the right of appeal was limited to the case of the fugitive taking exception to his surrender, on the ground that the offence was not one of those for which he could, by law, be surrendered.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be sent to the Colonial Office.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

It would not effect the object in view.

That, in our opinion, the sections 7 to 15 of the Malta Ordinance No. 3, 1874, are not sufficient to carry out the object in view.

The Colonial Office may be answered to the above effect.

My Lord,

Opium smuggling. Case of J. Hartley.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 28th December last, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 12th June relative to a case in which one John Hartley was charged with attempting to smuggle opium into Japan, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan (Sir H. Parkes, No. 167), together with its inclosures, relative to a second charge of a similar nature brought against the same individual, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the Judgment in the case, delivered in Her Britannic Majesty's Court at Kanagawa, a copy of which formed Inclosure 5 in Sir H. Parkes' despatch, could be upheld.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was further pleased to state that the grounds on which the soundness of the Judgment was disputed by the Japanese Government were stated in the letter of the Japanese Minister to your Lordship of the 12th July last, and to request that we would inform your Lordship whether the full report of the Judgment given by Mr. Wilkinson, in the first case brought against John Hartley, and which we would find at p. 53 of Inclosure 4 in Sir H. Parkes' despatch, modified in any way the opinion expressed in our Report of the 2nd July last, that in the construction of the Import Tariff attached to the Convention between Great Britain and Japan, of the 25th June, 1866, "medicinal opium, unless expressly named in Class 4, amongst drugs and medicines, is a prohibited article under Class 3, and cannot be distinguished from smoking opium."

Japanese appeal against Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments.

That, as we were aware, from the correspondence inclosed in his letter of the 12th June relating to that case, Mr. Wilkinson arrived at a contrary conclusion, and it appeared that the Japanese Government have taken steps with a view to appealing to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council against both the Judgments above referred to.

That they were disposed, however, to proceed no further with the appeals if Her Majesty's Government should concur in their view, that the conclusions at which Mr. Wilkinson arrived in both cases were erroneous in point of law, having regard to the terms of the Convention and Tariff.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that since the date of the Judgments a new British Court had been established in Japan, under Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 14th day of August, 1878, and that the exercise of jurisdiction by Mr. Wilkinson as acting Law Secretary in the cases in question was not warranted by the terms of Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan of the 9th March, 1865, by reason of the absence of any special delegation from the Chief Judge to try them. That, on this point, he was to refer us to our Report of the 10th May, 1878, on the judicial powers of the Law Secretary to the Supreme Court of China and Japan.

The documents, as noted in the margin, were inclosed.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Judgment delivered at Kanagawa, and a copy of which is Inclosure No. 5 in Sir H. Parkes' despatch, cannot be upheld.

Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments were wrong. Treaty does not distinguish between smoking and medicinal opium.

The full report of Mr. Wilkinson's Judgment in the first case brought against Mr. Hartley does not induce us to modify the opinion expressed in our Report of the 2nd July last. There may, however, be some ambiguity in that Report, which states that medicinal opium cannot be distinguished from smoking opium. In thus stating our opinion, we did not refer to the qualities of the two kinds of opium as not distinguishable the one from the other, but to the terms of the Convention applicable to opium generally.

Temple, July 10, 1879.

My Lord,

Opium smuggling. Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments in Hartley case.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 26th May last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to lay before us the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan (Sir H. Parkes, No. 56, March 20, 1879), and to request that we would advise your Lordship on the following questions raised therein:—

That, in the first place, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to our Reports of the 10th May and the 2nd July, 1878, and of the 17th January, 1879, in relation to the judicial powers of Mr. Wilkinson, Her Majesty's Acting Consul at Yokohama, in his capacity of Acting Law Secretary of the Supreme Court for China and Japan, and to certain Judgments delivered by him which had caused dissatisfaction to the Japanese Government, and against which they had intimated their intention to apply to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for leave to appeal, on the ground that the ruling of the Acting Law Secretary was at variance with their Treaty rights as regarded the importation of opium.

That those Judgments were pronounced in two prosecutions instituted by the Japanese Customs against a British subject named Hartley.

That in our Report of the 10th May we advised that the arrangement made on the departure of the Acting Chief Judge from Japan, under which Mr. Wilkinson was left as Acting Law Secretary in charge of the Supreme Court at Kanagawa, was not warranted by the Order in Council.

That in our Report of the 2nd July, on the subject of Mr. Wilkinson's Judgment in the first prosecution against Hartley, we advised that medicinal opium was a prohibited article under Class III of the Japanese Tariff, and could not be distinguished from smoking opium.

That in our Report of the 17th January, 1879, we confirmed that opinion, and we further advised that Mr. Wilkinson's Judgment in the second prosecution against Hartley could not be upheld.

That Sir H. Parkes was informed that, in our opinion, neither of those Judgments could be upheld, and he now desired to be informed whether that opinion was based only on the ground that Mr. Wilkinson's judicial proceedings were not warranted by the Order in Council. That on that point your Lordship proposed, with our concurrence, to state to Sir H. Parkes that, as regarded the first Judgment, our opinion was founded on the correct interpretation of the Treaty, but your Lordship would be glad to know what reply should be returned to the same inquiry regarding the second Judgment.

Power of Japanese Government to issue Regulations for importation of opium.

That the most important question, however, on which Sir H. Parkes applied for information and for instructions, had relation to the claim asserted by the Japanese Government to issue their own Regulations respecting the importation of medicinal opium by foreigners as well as natives, and to enforce the same by certain provisions, which appeared to Sir H. Parkes to trench upon the exterritorial jurisdiction which Her Majesty enjoyed over British subjects in Japan.

That it having been conceded that the importation of medicinal opium was prohibited by the Treaty, the Japanese Government were invited by Her Majesty's Government to agree to some arrangement for the importation of that indispensable drug under proper conditions, the observance of which by British subjects would be enforced by rules to be issued by Her Majesty's Minister under sections 85 and 90 of Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan. The Japanese Government, however, declined to enter into any Convention or Agreement, but insisted on the right to issue their own Regulations on the subject.

That your Lordship apprehended that in that respect they were acting within their strict rights, as we could not compel them to supplement the existing Treaty by a further agreement; but Sir H. Parkes conceived that they could not pass a law affecting foreigners without the assent of the foreign Governments, and he disputed accordingly the validity of the Regulations issued by the Japanese Government, copies of which formed Inclosures 4 and 5 in his despatch.

That it would be observed that those Regulations were in the nature of a Japanese municipal law of general application, subjecting all persons who might avail themselves of their provisions to strict control, supervision, and interference by the Japanese authorities, and also to severe penalties.

That Sir Harry Parkes, in his despatch, stated the grounds on which he conceived that foreigners could not avail themselves of those Regulations without sacrificing their Treaty rights; and he pointed out that the attitude of the Japanese Government on that question was prompted by the strong desire which animated all Japanese officials to break down the barrier of exterritorial jurisdiction.

That it appeared, therefore, to your Lordship, that foreign Governments might reasonably point out to the Japanese Government that those municipal Regulations, however suitable they might be in their application to Japanese subjects, afforded no relief to foreigners, as the latter could not avail themselves of their provisions without sacrificing the immunities from interference by the local authorities secured to them by Treaty, and, therefore, that if the Japanese Government were indisposed to enter into an Agreement as to the importation and sale of medicinal opium by foreigners, they should at least issue special Regulations framed strictly in harmony with their Treaty rights, which, as regarded British subjects, Her Majesty's Government could not consent to waive in any degree.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to take that important question into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Sir H. Parkes on the points raised in his despatch.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments wrong in law.

That, in our opinion, both Judgments given by Mr. Wilkinson were erroneous in point of law, having regard to the terms of the Convention and Tariff.

The third Regulation in the Annex to the Treaty of 1858 in the last paragraph is as follows:—

"The importation of opium being prohibited, any British vessel coming to Japan for the purposes of trade and having more than three catties' weight of opium on board, the surplus quantity may be seized and destroyed by the Japanese authorities, and any person smuggling, or attempting to smuggle, opium shall be liable to pay a fine of 15 dollars for each catty so smuggled, or attempted to be smuggled."

The importation of opium is also expressly prohibited in the Tariff to the Convention of 1866.

Japan retains power to prevent importation of opium;

Therefore, notwithstanding the general exterritorial jurisdiction which Her Majesty has over British subjects in Japan, the Japanese authorities retain the power to prevent the importation, and punish the attempted importation of opium.

And to secure monopoly of trade and make Regulations for its sale.

With regard to the Japanese Regulations. In our opinion the Japanese Government had power to secure a monopoly of the trade in opium, and having done so, it was competent for them to make Regulations respecting the sale of opium even by foreigners, and enforce those Regulations by such provisions as those in question.

Foreigners sacrifice no rights in submitting to them.

We do not agree with Sir H. Parkes, that the opium Regulations are invalid, on the ground that the Japanese Government cannot make a law affecting foreigners without the assent of the foreign Governments, or that foreigners could not avail themselves of the Regulations without sacrificing their Treaty rights; for we consider that the trade in opium is one over which the Japanese Government has expressly reserved its control, and that, in submitting themselves to that control, foreigners are sacrificing no rights which they may otherwise have in Japan.

Coasting trade: Money deposited as security by Messrs. Jardine and Matheson, and not reclaimed within six months.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Tokio,* together with its inclosures, relative to the claim of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., to be reimbursed certain moneys deposited by them at the Japanese Custom-house, in accordance with the provisions of the XIth Article of the Austro-Hungarian Treaty with Japan of 1869, to the benefits of which British subjects were admitted under the XXIIIrd Article of the British Treaty of 1858.

That under the Austro-Hungarian Treaty the coasting trade in Japanese goods might be carried on, provided the amount of duty which would be payable on such goods if exported to a foreign country be deposited as a security that the goods would be landed at a Japanese coast port, and the deposit was to be returned if a certificate of such landing of the goods was produced within six months.

That in the present case the amount of duty deposited by Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co. not having been claimed within that period, the Japanese authorities declined to refund it.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was, therefore, to request that we would take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, under the circumstances, the Japanese Government were within their strict Treaty rights in refusing to refund the deposit.

That a copy of the Austro-Hungarian Treaty referred to would be found in "State Papers," vol. lix, p. 529.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Japanese are within Treaty rights in refusing to refund.

That the words of the Treaty clearly, in our opinion, give the Japanese authorities the right to keep the amount deposited, unless the certificate be produced within six months.

The Japanese Government are therefore within their strict rights in refusing to refund the deposit.

1879

Consul at Kanagawa, that they should be laid before us. That Sir Julian Pauncefote, accordingly, had the honour to transmit therewith copies of those despatches for our perusal, and to submit the following observations thereon:

That in No. 48, Inclosure 2 (p. 2), Sir Harry Parkes forwarded a Report by Mr. Wilkinson on the two Judgments pronounced by him in the proceedings instituted by the Japanese Customs against Mr. Hartley for opium smuggling. That your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether that Report modified in any way the opinion we had expressed as to the two Judgments in question. That in the same despatch Sir Harry Parkes forwarded a separate Report by Mr. Wilkinson (Inclosure 3, p. 5) on the objection that the jurisdiction exercised by him as Acting Law Secretary in those cases was not warranted by the "China and Japan Order in Council, 1865."

That in that Report Mr. Wilkinson stated that he acted as Judge of the Provincial Court at Kanagawa (before which Mr. Hartley's cases were tried) in the capacity of Acting Law Secretary of the Supreme Court, and in pursuance of section 38 of the Order in Council for China and Japan. That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe, however, that he was at the time Acting Consul at Kanagawa, and ex officio Judge of the Court under section 25 of the Order, and there is no trace of any authority having been given to him to visit that Court judicially under section 38 of the Order. Moreover, he could hardly have been authorized to visit judicially under that section a Provincial Court over which he himself presided ex officio as Acting Consul. That further explanations would, therefore, be called for in view of any application being made to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on behalf of the Japanese Government.

That, as regarded the more important question of the Japanese Regulations for the importation of medicinal opium, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to state (in case it should have escaped our observation) that the reference in his letter of the 26th May to Inclosures 4 and 5 of Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 56 was incorrect. That those inclosures contained the Japanese laws applicable to natives. The Japanese Regulations applicable to foreigners, to which we should have been referred, and to which Sir Harry Parkes took exception, were contained in Inclosures 1 and 2.

That that error has given rise to the following doubt. The important question of principle involved in the discussion respecting the enforcement of the Japanese Regulations on British subjects was originally raised some years ago in connection with certain proposed Japanese Regulations respecting shooting. On that occasion Her Majesty's Government arrived at the conclusion that the views stated in Mr. Fish's despatch to Mr. Bingham of the 7th January, 1874 (correspondence as to Shooting Regulations, p. 12) were correct; and in our Report of the                    on certain questions submitted by Sir Harry Parkes, and involving the same question of principle, we expressed our concurrence in the views of Mr. Fish, as stated in his despatch above referred to. But in our present Report of the 10th July, on the opium Regulations, we stated that it was competent to the Japanese Government to make Regulations respecting the sale of opium even by foreigners, and "to enforce these Regulations by such provisions as those in question." Your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether, by the "provisions in question," we intended to designate those contained in Inclosures 4 and 5 of Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 56, to which we were erroneously referred. For those provisions impose penalties to be recovered in Japanese Courts, and could not, therefore, be applicable to foreigners consistently with the doctrine laid down by Mr. Fish, which your Lordship understood was adopted by France, Germany, and other Treaty Powers.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that the whole question had been reopened by the claim of the Japanese Government to make and enforce on foreigners certain quarantine Regulations. That claim was the subject of a voluminous printed correspondence, which, by direction of your Lordship, Sir Julian Pauncefote should have the honour to lay before us in a separate reference, marked No. 2.

That Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 56 of the 20th March, 1879, and a copy of Sir E. Hertslet's "Treaties with Japan," were transmitted therewith for convenience of reference; also a copy of the China and Japan Order in Council, and the correspondence relating to the Japanese Shooting Regulations.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Mr. Wilkinson's Judgments wrong.

That, having carefully considered Mr. Wilkinson's Report of the 20th February, 1879, to Sir H. Parkes, we are unable to see anything therein which modifies our opinion as to the two Judgments in question. We still think both Judgments are wrong.

With respect to Mr. Wilkinson's competency to deal with the cases at all, we forbear at present from expressing any opinion until the facts shall have been ascertained.

Japanese Regulations.

Penalties to be recovered in Japanese Courts cannot be enforced against British subjects.

With respect to the more important question of the Japanese Regulations for the importation of medicinal opium, and reserving for the separate reference, noted No. 2 of the date of the 12th August, 1879, our Report upon the specific questions answered therein, we wish to explain that we did not intend to express any opinion that penalties to be recovered by Japanese law in Japanese Courts were capable of being enforced against British subjects.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received September 22.)

My Lord,

Temple, September 22, 1879.

Japanese Pilotage Regulations.

Enforcement on British subjects by British Regulations under Order in Council.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th August last (No. 3), stating that, with reference to his two preceding letters, Nos. 1 and 2 of that date, on the subject of the Regulations issued by the Japanese Government respecting the importation and sale of medicinal opium, and respecting quarantine, Sir Julian Pauncefote transmitted to us, by your Lordship's direction, the inclosed despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan (Sir H. Parkes, No. 123), submitting for approval the draft of a British Regulation which you proposed to issue under sections 85, 86, and 90 of "the China and Japan Order in Council, 1865," for the purpose of enforcing on British subjects the observance of one of the Articles of certain Pilotage Regulations which had recently been made and published by the Japanese Government. That the Japanese Pilotage Regulations would be found in Inclosure 1 of Sir Harry Parkes' despatch, and the Regulation which he proposes to issue in Inclosure 10.

Employment of pilots.

Licence to British pilots.

Penalty for breach of British enactment.

That we would observe that, although the Japanese Regulations did not compel a British vessel to employ a pilot, still, if she should employ an unlicensed pilot, the latter was bound to give up charge of the vessel to any licensed pilot offering his services (section 14); and, further, that under those Regulations a British subject could only obtain a licence to pilot British vessels from the Japanese authorities, who might cancel such licence (section 23). That the pilotage of British vessels, and the licensing of British subjects as pilots, was thus placed entirely under the control of the Japanese authorities, and those Regulations therefore raised the same question as that which formed the subject of Sir Julian Pauncefote's preceding letters, Nos. 1 and 2 of that date, to which he referred us, as regarded the right of the Japanese Government to issue such Regulations. But, assuming that no objection could be raised against them, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the best mode of framing British Regulations in general for the enforcement of Japanese laws on British subjects. That one course which suggested itself was simply to issue a Regulation under the sections of the Order in Council above referred to, publishing a translation of the text of the Japanese law, enjoining its observance, and prescribing a penalty (within the limits ordained by section 86) for any breach therof. That the other course was that which Sir Harry Parkes appeared to have adopted in the present case, namely, to single out any clause of the Japanese law which might impose a penalty, and turn such clause into a British enactment, imposing a similar penalty for its violation.

Breach of Japanese law. British subjects can only be punished for (1) If offence is punishable in England; (2) If made punishable by a British Regulation under Order in Council.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that the letter of the Japanese Foreign Minister to Sir Harry Parkes of the 4th March (Inclosure 4) appeared to admit that the intervention of the British authorities was necessary to enforce on British subjects any penalties imposed by Japanese laws; and Sir Harry Parkes desired to be informed whether he was right in his view that, unless the infraction or non-observance of any Japanese municipal law by a British subject should also constitute a crime or offence which would render the person guilty of it liable to be punished in England, or unless it be made and declared a punishable offence by a Regulation or Rule duly issued by Her Majesty's Minister under "The China and Japan Order in Council, 1865," no penalty could be levied upon a British subject for non-observance or infraction of it in any of Her Majesty's Courts in Japan or otherwise. That, in reply to that inquiry, your Lordship proposed, with our concurrence, to inform Sir Harry Parkes that he had correctly interpreted the meaning and effect of section 6 of the Order in Council.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request, in conclusion, that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether Sir Harry Parkes' draft Regulation might be approved, or whether we considered that the alternative mode above suggested of framing the Regulation was preferable.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approve above view, and Regulations.

That, in our opinion, Sir Harry Parkes has correctly interpreted the meaning and effect of section 6 of the Order in Council, and that the draft Regulation recommended for adoption by Sir Harry Parkes may be approved.

No. 51.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received October 3.)

Temple, October 3, 1879.

My Lord,

Japanese Quarantine laws.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 12th August last (No. 2), in continuation of his letter No. 1 of that date, respecting the application of Japanese municipal laws to foreigners, and the enforcement upon them of the Regulations issued by the Japanese Government respecting the importation of medicinal opium into Japan, and stating that he now had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the accompanying printed correspondence respecting quarantine laws in Japan, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on the important question raised therein.

As to right of Japanese Government to enforce on foreigners and foreign ships.

That, in the first place, Sir Julian was to invite our attention to Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 61 of the 29th March, 1879, at p. 1 of the correspondence. It appeared from that despatch that in 1873 certain quarantine Regulations were agreed to between the Japanese Government and the foreign Representatives; and at that time the Japanese Government willingly conceded that these Regulations could not be enforced in the case of foreign ships without the concurrence of the foreign authorities concerned. That Sir Harry Parkes (p. 1) cited the instructions which he received on the subject from Her Majesty's Government in Lord Granville's despatch No. 3 of the 30th January, 1874. That the alarm of cholera which called for those Regulations having subsided, the necessity for applying them did not arise, and the question was not revived until June 1878, when the Japanese Foreign Minister communicated to the foreign Representatives the draft of some new quarantine Regulations which he desired to substitute for those of 1873.

New draft Regulations.

That while that draft was under consideration the Japanese Minister transmitted to Sir Harry Parkes a "revised" draft, containing certain innovations (in Articles 2 and 16), which were commented upon by Sir Harry Parkes at p. 3. That that revised draft, which was printed at p. 18, was submitted to a meeting of the Consular body, whose views thereon were given in Mr. Wilkinson's Report at p. 21.

That Sir Harry Parkes then convened a meeting of the foreign Representatives to consider the draft, and the views expressed on that occasion as to the rights of the Japanese Government were stated at pp. 3 and 4.

Views of foreign Representatives.

That it would be observed that Mr. Bingham, the United States' Minister, maintained that the Japanese Government had the right to make whatever quarantine Regulations they liked, and to enforce them on foreign ships and foreigners of all nationalities, without the intervention of any foreign authorities.

That all the foreign Representatives present, except the Russian Chargé d'Affaires (who would give no opinion), dissented from that view. They maintained that the Japanese Government could not enforce quarantine Regulations on their nationals without their concurrence; that they could only sanction the enforcement of such Regulations as were reasonable and practicable, and that the proposed Regulations were defective and required amendment.

That Sir Harry Parkes explained to his colleagues that, in order to make the Regulations applicable to British ships and subjects, "he should have to convert them into British Regulations under the Order in Council."

"British Courts cannot enforce Japanese laws as such."

That Sir Harry Parkes stated that he repeatedly impressed on the Japanese Foreign Minister that "British Courts could not enforce Japanese laws as such," and that in order to make the proposed quarantine Regulations binding on British subjects "it was necessary that he should receive them from him, officially approve their provisions, and then publish them as British Regulations under the Order in Council" (p. 6).

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was then to refer us to Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 67 of the 7th April, 1879 (p. 39), in which he transmitted a further correspondence with the Japanese Minister on the same question of jurisdiction, and he was to draw our attention particularly to the letter of the Japanese Minister of the 15th October, 1878 (p. 42), and to Sir Harry Parkes' reply of the 31st October (ibid.), as they contained a résumé of the contention and arguments on either side.

That Sir Harry Parkes submitted to his colleagues a memorandum of "Suggestions as to the measures which appear necessary to enable the quarantine Regulations of the Japanese Government to be made applicable to foreign ships, with their crews, passengers, and cargoes." Those suggestions were printed at p. 22, and Sir Harry Parkes, in his despatch No. 68, Confidential, of the 7th April, 1879 (p. 44), after referring to those suggestions, stated the substance of the communications made by the foreign Representatives to the Japanese Government, and inclosed copies of letters addressed to the Japanese Minister by the Representatives of France and Spain. That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us particularly to the two letters of M. Geofroy at pp. 45 and 47.

That we would perceive from Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 83 of the 17th April, 1879 (p. 76), that the Japanese Government were not satisfied with any of the schemes of quarantine Regulations as yet proposed; but whatever system might prevail, it could not be applied to foreign vessels and foreigners until the question of jurisdiction was settled. In the meanwhile, in consequence of an alarm of cholera at Nagasaki, Sir Harry Parkes applied by telegram on the 4th July for the sanction of your Lordship to the issue by him, under the Order in Council, of the quarantine Regulations for British vessels which were printed at p. 30.

That that proceeding was sanctioned by telegraph in the emergency, and pending the settlement of the question; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether, in our opinion, there was any objection in point of law to any of those Regulations.

Query as to above dictum.

That a memorandum thereon, transmitted by Sir Harry Parkes, would be found at p. 35. The principal question, however, on which your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion, was whether Her Majesty's Government could properly support the contention of Sir Harry Parkes, that "British Courts cannot enforce Japanese laws as such," and that before any Japanese quarantine Regulations could be applied to British subjects, it was necessary that they should be officially communicated to and approved by him, and turned into British Regulations under the Order in Council.

That that contention would appear to go further than that of the other foreign Representatives whose views were expressed in Sir Harry Parkes' despatch No. 68, Confidential (p. 44). The latter do not seem to object to Japanese quarantine Regulations being enforced as such on their nationals, but they claim the right of enforcing them through the foreign Consuls acting in concurrence with the Japanese quarantine officials.

Imposition of penalties.

That as regarded the imposition of penalties, the Japanese Minister, in his letter of the 15th October, 1878 (p. 42), stated that whenever a foreigner committed a breach of the Regulations, they intend "to accuse him before his Consul, and to leave him to be dealt with by the laws of his country." That that was in accordance with the doctrine laid down in the despatch of Mr. Fish to Mr. Bingham of the 7th January, 1874, referred to in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter No. 1 of the 12th ultimo, and which had been assented to by Her Majesty's Government. But the difficulty was not so much as to the imposition and recovery of penalties for the breach of the Japanese Regulations as in regard to the exercise by Japanese officials of direct control over foreign ships and foreigners; and it could hardly be doubted that if such direct control should be vested in Japanese officials, otherwise than in concurrence with the foreign Consular authorities, as proposed by Sir Harry Parkes in his "Suggestions," at p. 22, and by the French Minister in his letter of the 29th October, 1878 (p. 47), the system must result in constant recriminations and disputes, and not improbably in acts of violence on the one side or the other.

Japanese direct control, &c.

That your Lordship would therefore be glad to be informed whether, in our opinion, the Japanese Government could claim the right to exercise through their own officials, and without the intervention or concurrence of the foreign authorities, that direct control over foreign ships and foreigners which was necessary to carry out any quarantine Regulations which they might ultimately promulgate.

1879

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No legal objection to Regulations.

That, in our opinion, there is no objection in point of law to the Regulations set out in page 18.

The principal questions submitted to us, "whether Her Majesty's Government can properly support the contention of Sir Harry Parkes, that British Courts cannot enforce Japanese laws as such," and "that before any Japanese quarantine Regulations can be applied to British subjects it is necessary that they should be officially communicated to and approved by him, and turned into British Regulations under the Order in Council," must be considered separately, and it is convenient to examine and answer the second question before dealing with the first.

Convention, Article IV. British ships in Japanese ports to conform to laws of Japan.

The IVth Article of the Convention (14th October, 1854, 9th October, 1855) provides that "British ships in Japanese ports shall conform to the laws of Japan."

Apart from the Convention British ships in Japanese ports would, as a general rule, for instance, in taking up a berth, communicating with the shore, and so forth, be bound to conform to Japanese law; the IVth Article, therefore, is not restrictive, but confirmatory of the general rule, that the laws of a country are to be obeyed and conformed to in the ports of that country.

Governments have right to make quarantine Regulations.

There can be no doubt of the right of a Government to make quarantine Regulations or Laws. These may be necessary for the public safety. There is nothing in any Convention or Treaty with Japan, that we are aware of, which applies especially to quarantine, or limits the rights and powers of the Japanese Government to enact laws in the matter of quarantine.

Not necessary to have laws approved by British Minister, and turned into British Regulations, before applying them to British subjects.

But is it necessary that before these laws, which the Japanese Government has the right to enact, can be applied to British subjects, they should be officially communicated to and approved by the British Minister in Japan? In other words, is the Japanese Government in matters of quarantine under the control of Her Majesty's Minister? Are British subjects in Japanese ports entirely independent of Japanese law, unless that law be turned into a British Regulation? We think not.

Consequences, under Convention, of breach of laws.

The IVth Article of the Convention already referred to provides for the case, and in a manner which, if disregarded, may be most prejudicial to British interest. That Article says, "That if high officers or commanders of ships shall break any such laws, it will lead to the ports being closed. Should inferior persons break them, they are to be delivered over to the commanders of their ships for punishment."

In our opinion, therefore, Her Majesty's Government cannot properly support the contention, that before any Japanese quarantine Regulations can be applied to British subjects it is necessary that they should be officially communicated to and approved by Sir Harry Parkes, and turned into British Regulations under the Order in Council.

The Japanese Foreign Minister was, we consider, right in holding that in communicating the Regulations officiously he did all that in any sense could be required of him.

View as to enforcement of Japanese laws, as such, is correct in one sense.

With reference to the first question, the contention of Sir Harry Parkes, "that British Courts cannot enforce Japanese laws as such," is, in one sense, correct. The matter for consideration by Sir Harry Parkes and by Her Majesty's Government, looking to the IVth Article of the Convention, which gives, in our opinion, the principle for guidance in the enforcing the quarantine Regulations, is the best way of reconciling the rights of the Japanese with British rights.

Should not object to Japanese Regulations, but claim to enforce them through British Consuls.

The true solution is, in our opinion, the course approved by other foreign Representatives in Japan, viz., not to object to the Japanese Regulations, and to claim the right of enforcing them through British Consuls, and for this purpose that Regulations should be made by Sir Harry Parkes for enforcing the observance of the quarantine Rules in the case of British subjects.

My Lord,

Temple, November 5, 1879.

Quarantine Regulations.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 15th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter No. 2 of the 12th August and to our Report of the 3rd ultimo, on the subject of quarantine in Japan, he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the inclosed print of five further despatches which had been received from Her Majesty's Minister in Japan in relation to the same question.

That it appeared from despatch No. 138, p. 83, that, in consequence of the prevalence of cholera at Kiobe and Osaka, the Japanese Government, on the 3rd July last, issued certain provisional Regulations (despatch No. 138, Inclosure 2, p. 83), which were communicated to Her Majesty's Minister, who, in a letter to the Japanese Foreign Minister (ibid., Inclosure 5, p. 85), stated his objections to those Regulations, and in a further letter (ibid., Inclosure 6, p. 87) transmitted to him a copy (ibid., Inclosure 7, p. 87) of a Rule respecting quarantine which he had himself issued under the China and Japan Order in Council.

That subsequently the Japanese Foreign Minister communicated to Sir H. Parkes (ibid., Inclosure 8, p. 88) a set of revised quarantine Regulations issued by his Government in lieu of the provisional Regulations above referred to (see copy of revised Regulations, ibid., Inclosure 16, p. 92).

That Sir H. Parkes thereupon addressed a letter to the Japanese Foreign Minister (ibid., Inclosure 18, p. 95), conveying his adhesion to the revised Regulations under certain reservations, and in a further letter (ibid., Inclosure 19, p. 96) he transmitted to him a copy of a new Rule which he had issued under the China and Japan Order in Council, to enable Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan to co-operate effectively with the Japanese authorities (see copy of new Rule under Order in Council, ibid., Inclosure 20, p. 97).

That Sir H. Parkes also issued a Circular to Her Majesty's Consuls in Japan (ibid., Inclosure 25, p. 101), containing instructions for their guidance in the matter.

That the revised Regulations became the subject of a correspondence between the Japanese Foreign Minister and some of the foreign Representatives, which was contained in Inclosures 29 to 33 of the same despatch (pp. 103 to 108).

That Sir H. Parkes' despatch No. 139 and its twenty inclosures (pp. 108 to 123) contained the Reports of Her Majesty's Consuls at Kanagawa and Hiogo and Osaka, on the measures taken by the Japanese authorities in relation to quarantine at those ports, and his despatch No. 143, p. 123, contained his remarks on those Reports.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to Sir H. Parkes' despatch No. 144, p. 127, containing a full Report of the proceedings of the Japanese Government in the matter of quarantine, of his own action, and of the present position of the question.

That Sir H. Parkes was in hopes that the course he had pursued would have satisfied the Japanese Foreign Minister, but on the 29th July he received a letter from him (Inclosure 1, p. 130), protesting against the terms of the new Rule issued by him under the China and Japan Order in Council, p. 97. That, in reply to that protest, Sir H. Parkes addressed to the Japanese Foreign Minister the letter of the 2nd August, which formed Inclosure 2 of his despatch No. 144, p. 131.

That the series of despatches concluded with No. 145, p. 132, which related solely to a dispute between the Japanese Foreign Minister and the German Representative in relation to the case of the German steamer "Hesperia."

That the question on which your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion was whether the Rule issued by Sir H. Parkes under the China and Japan Order in Council, p. 97, and his Circular to Her Majesty's Consuls, p. 101, and his reply to the protest of the Japanese Foreign Minister, p. 131, might properly receive the approval of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

British ships in Japanese ports to conform to Japanese law.

That, in our Report of the 3rd October, we had occasion to refer to the IVth Article of the Convention, which provides that British ships in Japanese ports shall conform to Japanese law.

We then submitted to your Lordship our opinion, that the Japanese Government might, without reference to the British Minister, make quarantine Regulations, and that the breach of such Regulations might, under the provisions of the same IVth Article of the Convention, lead to serious inconvenience; although penalties, in a strict and limited sense, would not be inflicted upon British offenders without the intervention of the British authorities.

Sir H. Parkes does not give due weight to Article IV of Convention.

Sir H. Parkes has, in our opinion, not given due weight to this Article of the Convention, and to the consequences which would follow if the "High Commander of a British ship or other inferior person" should break a quarantine Regulation, even though Sir H. Parkes had not turned that Regulation into a British Regulation.

We are therefore of opinion that his reply to the protest of the Japanese Foreign Minister cannot properly receive the full approval of Her Majesty's Government.

Approve his Regulations for carrying out those of Japan, but not his reply to Japanese protest.

The Rule issued by Sir H. Parkes and his Circular to Her Majesty's Consuls may, however, properly receive the approval of Her Majesty's Government, since substantially they carry out the Japanese Regulations, and remove any doubt as to the obligation on British ships to observe those Regulations.

Liberia.

No. 53.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received November 27.)

My Lord,

Temple, November 27, 1879.

Claim of Liberia to territory ceded by native Chiefs.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 6th September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a printed correspondence relating to the claims put forward by the Republic of Liberia to certain territories alleged to have been ceded to them by the native Chiefs to whom they belonged, and the steps which had been taken to verify those claims.

Liberian Boundary Commission.

That the claims in question were recognized by Her Majesty's Government, but in 1863 a Committee was appointed to investigate them, which, however, was unable to arrive at any conclusion except as regards the claim to what was called the "Sugaree" territory. But that that inquiry did not take place on the spot.

That a memorandum dated the 15th October, 1863, setting forth the history of the Liberian claims, and the Report of the Commission of 1863, would be found in Part A, No. 45, and Inclosure 2 in No. 43, pp. 80 and 70.

That in 1870 it was agreed to appoint a Mixed Commission to inquire on the spot into the Liberian claims, and, in case of disagreement, the points in dispute were to be referred to an arbitrator to be appointed by the United States' Government.

That the terms on which Her Majesty's Government agreed to that Commission would be found in Lord Granville's letter to President Roye of the 31st October, 1870, and its inclosure, and that those terms were accepted by the Liberian Government in Mr. Chinnery's letter of the 19th April, 1871 (Correspondence A, Nos. 118 and 121, pp. 190 and 194).

That the instructions to the British Commissioners in 1871 would be found in Correspondence B, No. 23, p. 9.

That a revolution having taken place in Liberia, the Commission fell through, and nothing further was done in the matter till 1873, when Mr. Roberts, the Liberian Minister in London, in his letter of the 5th August, urged a settlement of the question, if possible, without the intervention of a Commission.

That that was declined by Lord Derby in his letter of the 22nd of the following month, but that his Lordship agreed to proceed with the inquiry on the same terms as were agreed to in 1871 (Correspondence B, Nos. 66, 73, and 74, pp. 38, 42, and 43).

That a Commission was accordingly appointed, and the United States' Government nominated Admiral Schufeldt to act as arbitrator. That the instructions to the British Commissioners, dated the 21st January, 1879, would be found in Part C, No. 69, p. 85.

That the Commission met in the first instance at Sierra Leone, and afterwards at Sulymah, and that the records of its proceedings would be found in the British Commissioner's Reports of the 19th February, the 18th, 21st, 26th April, and the 1st May. (Correspondence C, Nos. 86, 101, 102, 103, and 104, pp. 111, 137, 151, 153, and 165.)

Decision. Country claimed does not exist.

That we should see from the last of those Reports that the British Commissioners came to the conclusion that the countries mentioned in the Deeds of Cession produced by the Liberian Government had no existence; consequently, that there were no boundaries to deliminate, and no question to be referred to the arbitrator.

That they, moreover, stated that even the "Sugaree" country, which in 1863 was admitted to belong to Liberia, had no existence.

That the proceedings accordingly terminated abruptly, but that the Liberian Commissioners protested against the refusal of the British Commissioners to refer the matter to the arbitrator, and that Mr. Gibson, the Liberian Secretary of State, in a letter to your Lordship dated the 15th May (Correspondence C, No. 107, p. 216), had also protested against the action of the British Commissioners. That in that letter, as we should observe, he stated that the inquiry had been adjourned, whereas the British and Liberian Commissioners, in their joint letter to the arbitrator of the 24th April (Correspondence C, Inclosure 2 in No. 100, p. 164) informed him that the Commission had "concluded their inquiry," and that the Commodore in reply treated the inquiry as concluded.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the British Commissioners were warranted in refusing to refer the whole matter to the arbitrator, and whether Her Majesty's Government could refuse to reopen it on the ground that the Commissions of 1861, 1871, and 1879 were appointed under the erroneous belief that the countries named in the Deeds of Cession were really in existence, whereas the recent inquiry instituted for the first time on the spot showed conclusively that no such countries existed; or on the ground that the inquiry, though productive of no award, was closed and concluded by the Commissioners on both sides with the assent of the Umpire, as shown in the correspondence above referred to. (Commissioners to Commodore Schufeldt, and Commodore Schufeldt's reply, Correspondence C, p. 164.)

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Strange that Liberia should claim what does not exist, &c.

That it is strange that a Government like that of Liberia, not wanting in ability and political knowledge, should lay claim to territory which does not exist, and submit to a Commission and Arbitrator the question of the boundaries of that non-existent territory.

The conduct of the Liberian Commissioners in keeping back original documents and producing only the copy is remarkable and suspicious as to the good faith of their Government in claiming territory as ceded to them, and the evidence taken before the Commissioners is against their claims.

May be some mistake in the names.

Yet we cannot but think that there is some confusion and mistake in the names, and that the places, whether towns or districts, to which they lay claim, really do exist under some name or description.

In our opinion, the British Commissioners took too narrow a view of their instructions (C, p. 85), and they should have referred the question of "the exact limits of the north-western boundary of the Liberian Republic" to the arbitrator, and not considered themselves bound by the names of certain districts.

Her Majesty's Government cannot refuse to reopen question.

Her Majesty's Government cannot, in our opinion, refuse to reopen the question on either of the grounds stated in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter.

We think it right, however, to submit to your Lordship's consideration whether all the necessary persons have been made parties to the reference, and whether the Commission should be reopened in their absence.

Caution as to recognizing territory which may be claimed by some other Power.

The inquiry would embrace the right of Liberia to territory by admission not British, and should adverse claimants, not party to the arbitration, hereafter come in, serious complications might arise if Her Majesty's Government were called upon by Liberia to recognize as belonging to her some territory awarded to Liberia under the arbitration, but of which some independent or even civilized Power might claim to be the owner.

1879

Miscellaneous.

No. 54.

Sir J. Pauncefote to the Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane.[*]

Foreign Office, January 3, 1879.

Gentlemen,

Proposed abolition of Consular shipping fees, and substitution of uniform tonnage fee.

FOR some time past the attention of Her Majesty's Government has been given to the question of the advisability of abolishing the shipping fees now leviable by Her Majesty's Consuls abroad, under Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, and of substituting a uniform fee founded on the tonnage of the ship.

A memorandum in print on the subject is inclosed.

The fees prescribed by the Tables annexed to the Act were modified by the Orders in Council noted in the margin,[†] under the power in that behalf contained in section 4, and the shipping fees which it is now proposed to abolish are those contained in Part I of the Schedule attached to the Order of the 1st May, 1855.

By section 4 of the Act 6 Geo. IV, cap. 87, it is provided that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty's Consular officers abroad to accept, take, and receive certain fees in respect of certain official acts respectively mentioned in the Tables therein referred to, and that Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, increase or diminish or wholly abolish the said fees, and may substitute new fees for the same or for other official acts, matters, or things.

This provision seems to contemplate that there must be certain specified fees for certain specified acts, and that such fees should be received by the Consular officer at the place where, and at the time when, those acts are respectively performed by him. The proposal under consideration, as explained at p. 9 of the memorandum, is to abolish all the shipping fees now collected by Consular officers, and to substitute in lieu thereof a tonnage fee of 1*d*. a-ton for three months, or 4*d*. a-ton for a year, to be paid either at home or at any British Consulate, which payment being acknowledged on the articles of the ship, will relieve her from all liability in respect of any Consular shipping fees, at any foreign port during the period covered by the tonnage fee.

I am directed by the Marquis of Salisbury to request that you will take the accompanying papers into your consideration, and favour his Lordship with your opinion as to whether the above proposal can be carried out by an Order in Council under section 4 of the Act, or whether a new Act of Parliament would be required for that purpose.

I have, &c.

[*] The Law Officers' Report upon this subject could not be found when this collection of Reports was made, and it was therefore necessary to obtain the original draft of the Report. The Law Officers, however, do not retain copies of their Reports in the exact form in which they are transmitted to the Foreign Office, that is to say, with the preamble in which the Foreign Office letter to them is recapitulated. It has, therefore, been deemed advisable to print the Foreign Office letter in this instance, as the bare Report, without the usual preamble, would not be wholly intelligible.

That, in our opinion, an Act of Parliament will be required in order to effect the desired change of system in Consular fees paid for the discharge of a Consul's services rendered to ships.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received March 22.)

Temple, March 21, 1879.

My Lord,

Laughlan and Purdy Islands.

Guano licence to Mr. Roberts.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 21st February last, stating that in the month of February of last year an application was made to the Earl of Derby by a Mr. Roberts for special permission to place certain islands off the coast of New Guinea under the protection of Her Majesty's Government, and also for a licence to work the guano deposits upon them.

That the matter was referred by his Lordship to the Secretary of State for the Colonies for his opinion as to the answer which should be returned to that application.

That, after consultation with the Board of Admiralty, the Colonial Office informed your Lordship that, as none of these islands appeared to have been claimed by a foreign Power, Sir Michael Hicks Beach would be prepared, with your Lordship's approval, to instruct the Governor of New South Wales to grant to Mr. Roberts a lease of such of the islands as were not inhabited.

That your Lordshp replied that, as then informed, he had no objection to the course proposed, and it appeared that licences to work the guano deposits on the Laughlan and Purdy groups were granted by the Government of New South Wales.

Licensees must hoist Union Jack.

That Messrs. Pickford and Winkfield, the agents of Mr. Roberts in England, subsequently applied to the Colonial Office for information as to his position in the event of any foreign Power setting up a claim to these islands, and Sir Michael Hicks Beach suggested that they should be informed "that all licensees of islands should publicly notify that such islands are in British occupation by hoisting the Union Jack, and that when this public notification of British sovereignty has been given Her Majesty's Government would feel no difficulty in upholding the claims of British subjects against those of any foreigners subsequently attempting to lay claim to such islands."

Title of Crown by discovery.

That your Lordship concurred in that reply, with the qualification that it should be premised that the title of the Crown by discovery was incontestable, and had not been permitted to lapse by non-occupation previously to the grant of the licence, and that it was presumed that no guano leases were granted except for islands which had been formally declared to be British territory.

Islands unoccupied, but not claimed as British dominions.

That, by a subsequent communication from the Colonial Office, it appeared that though, as in the case of the Laughlan and Purdy groups, licences were granted only in respect of islands which were unoccupied, and belong to no recognized foreign State, the islands in question were not claimed by Her Majesty's Government as part of the British dominions.

That, under these circumstances, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether the reply which the Colonial Office propose to return to Messrs. Pickford and Winkfield's inquiry might be approved.

The correspondence on the subject was inclosed for our information.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Caution necessary in granting licences.

That, considering the great competition which now exists between several Governments, as Great Britain, France, and the United States of America, for the occupation and working of any place in which a guano deposit may be found, Her Majesty's Government should, in our opinion, exercise great caution in granting licences or leases.

Occupation and declaration of ownership.

We think that, in all cases, occupation on behalf of Great Britain shown by clear and positive evidence, and a formal declaration that the islands are British territory, should precede the granting of any lease or licence.

1879

Reference to Lacepede and Chesterfield Islands.

We beg to refer your Lordship to a Report on the Lacepede Islands, which we had the honour of making to Lord Derby on the 21st February, 1877, and in which we submitted our opinion on the general principles applicable to the issue of leases or licences of guano deposits.

We beg also to refer your Lordship to a Report of the 11th November, 1878, on the occupation of the Chesterfield Islands by the French.

As to identity of Mr. Roberts.

A Mr. Roberts, acting as the agent of an American citizen named Lord, endeavoured to oust a British subject from the Lacepede Islands. If the present applicant be the same Mr. Roberts, Sir Michael Hicks Beach may possibly consider that this gentleman has little claim on Her Majesty's Government in the present instance, and that his conduct may require some careful watching and great caution.

Should declare islands British territory.

We think the islands in question should, without delay, be formally declared to be British territory, and, subject to that, we concur in the proposed answer to Messrs. Pickford and Winkfield by Sir Michael Hicks Beach, as modified by your Lordship.

We have, &c.

Mosquito.

No. 56.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor.—(Received October 1.)

Mosquito Arbitration.

I HAVE read these papers. There is no doubt that the Treaty of 1860 is framed in vague and ambiguous terms; that it will be difficult to place a judicial interpretation on many of its terms, and that it would be, in many points of view, desirable to have defects in the Treaty arising from obscurity or omission remedied by some supplemental Convention.

But, on the other hand, looking to the character of those concerned (Mosquito and Nicaragua), it is clear that now that each side knows the tender and weak points of the case, and has taken up a position in reference to them, any negotiations for a new agreement would be interminable, while the interest of Great Britain is not so much to have a Treaty which is complete and perfect in the abstract as to hold on by what has been already arrived at, and to make it work by means of some interpretation to be put upon it.

Must found case on spirit of the Treaty.

I therefore incline to Sir Julian Pauncefote's view, that we should confine ourselves to putting forward our views of the meaning of the Treaty according to what we know to have been the spirit in which it was framed, and pressing these views on the arbitrator.

As to "free port."

The first point, and the point of most general interest, is the position of the port of Greytown. I think we should press for the construction (as to this) of the Treaty indicated by Mr. Reilly (p. 61). The words of the Treaty are not happy; but unless "free port" means what Mr. Reilly contends for, it has little or no meaning whatever.

Beyond this there are two questions as to which I think we should back up Mosquito:—

Duty on articles for Mosquito.

1. That Nicaragua should have no right to tax or to levy duties on articles to be consumed in Mosquito. I think this is the spirit of the Treaty and of the whole arrangement, though here, again, the expressions used are unsatisfactory.

Mines, timber, lands, &c.

Mosquito must not alien them.

2. That Mosquito has the full right of property in mines, timber, waste lands, &c., subject only to this, that she is not to alien to foreigners; and by the term "alien" I mean not only a sale, but also any lease or permanent holding. The reserved district was, I think, intended for personal enjoyment and occupation. All products may be sold, but I think they must be put into the market by the natives.

I think these are the main points in the case.

My Lord, Temple, April 29, 1879.

Extradition from Straits Settlements.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 12th ultimo, stating that, in our report of the 28th March, 1878, in relation to extradition from the Straits Settlements, we advised that Her Majesty should issue an Order in Council under the Act 29 and 30 Vict., c. 115, sec. 2, providing for the surrender of fugitive criminals in the Straits Settlements, and we suggested that such an Order might be conveniently framed upon the Indian Act No. 7 of 1854.

That the inclosed draft of an Order in Council had accordingly been prepared at the Colonial Office. That in their letter to that Department of the 28th January last, it was stated that the draft was based principally upon the Indian Act of 1854, with certain modifications taken from the Imperial Extradition Act of 1870, and that it was so framed as to extend to all foreign States to which the Extradition Act of 1870 did not, for the time being, apply, so that its operation would be at once excluded from any State by an Order in Council applying the Article [? Act] to that State. That it was further stated that the provisions in the 11th section had been imported from the Imperial Act, and the list of extradition crimes had been adopted from the Extradition Acts of 1870 and 1873; also that specific provisions of the Indian Act for admitting to bail persons apprehended as fugitive criminals had been omitted, the words "deal with" in the 6th clause being, it was thought, sufficient to give the magistrate power to accept bail on remand.

That Lord Tenterden was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the draft might be approved, or whether any alterations therein were required before the proposed Order was submitted to Her Majesty.

That Lord Tenterden was to transmit therewith the papers for reference in connection with that question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Draft Order in Council.

That, in our opinion, the draft Order in Council may, with the following additions, be approved:

We respectfully suggest that the words "last mentioned" should be inserted before the word "magistrate" at the end of clause 7 of the draft Order in Council.

And we also submit, for your Lordship's consideration, that words corresponding with those employed in section 11 of the Extradition Act, 1870, should be added, either at the end of clause 10 of the draft Order, or as a separate clause, but omitting all reference to writ of habeas corpus, as follows:—

Appeal of criminal on committal to prison.

"If the magistrate commits a fugitive criminal to prison, he shall inform such criminal that he will not be surrendered until after the expiration of fifteen days, and that during such fifteen days the said criminal may appeal to any Judge of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements."

And in clause 11, after the words "fifteen days from the date of committal," should be added the words, "or after the decision of the Judge before whom the appeal of the fugitive criminal is brought, as the case may be, or after such further period as may be allowed, in either case, by the Governor."

My Lord,

Cartridges at Curaçao. Compulsory landing from British ship "Bolivar." Refusal to allow their re-export to Panama.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers noted in the margin* relative to the circumstances under which the West India and Pacific Steam-ship Company's steamer "Bolivar" having been compelled to land at Curaçao a consignment of cartridges destined for Panama was refused permission to re-export the same, on the ground that the exportation of arms and ammunition from Curaçao was prohibited.

Export of arms, &c., prohibited.

That Mr. Lister was to observe that, whereas there seemed to be no objection to the law prohibiting the export of munitions of war from Curaçao, it appeared to your Lordship that there was ground for complaint in that a British vessel touching at Curaçao, and being merely in transitu for another country, should be forced to land a part of her cargo, consisting of munitions of war destined for that other country, and then should be prohibited from reshipping it, on the ground that the local law did not permit the export of munitions of war.

That, under those circumstances, Mr. Lister was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the authorities at Curaçao had any right to interfere with the cargo of a ship in transitu, and if not, whether their doing so would constitute a breach of international usage which would justify Her Majesty's Government in demanding reparation from the Government of the Netherlands.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No right to stop through carriage of cargo.
Her Majesty's Government may remonstrate.

That, in our opinion, the authorities at Curaçao had no right to stop the through carriage of the cargo in question by first insisting upon its being landed, and then refusing permission to replace it on board, and Her Majesty's Government will be justified in demanding reparation from the Government of the Netherlands.

Convention with Navigators' and Friendly Islands.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 13th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, with inclosures, from the Colonial Office, on the subject of proposed negotiations for the signature of a Convention between Her Majesty's Government and the Navigators' Islands and the Friendly Islands, conferring upon the Queen exterritorial jurisdiction in those islands, and that Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the question raised by the Colonial Office as to the necessity of a new Order in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, to enable Her Majesty to exercise the power conferred by the proposed Convention.

Ex-territorial jurisdiction.

Order in Council.

As to Western Pacific Order being unsuited.

That the Western Pacific Order in Council of the 13th August, 1877, was founded both on the Pacific Islanders' Protection Act, 1875, section 6, and on the Foreign Jurisdiction Act. It recited in the preamble, that at the date of the Order the Queen had power and jurisdiction within the islands in question, but those islands were described as "not being within the jurisdiction of any civilized Government." The Colonial Office suggested that Conventions having been made between the Chiefs of those islands and foreign Powers, and a system of Local Government having been established, they had ceased to come under the above designation, and that the Western Pacific Order in Council might no longer be applicable to them.

That, on the other hand, it might be urged that, as the Order in Council was founded on the Foreign Jurisdiction Act as well as on the Pacific Islanders' Act, 1875, and as the Queen had power and jurisdiction in those islands at the date of the Order, the effect of the proposed Convention would only be to define the extent of such jurisdiction, and that the legal powers conferred by the Order in Council for the exercise of the Queen's jurisdiction were not affected by the circumstance, that the grounds on which such jurisdiction rested might be changed. That copies of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, the Pacific Islanders' Protection Act, 1875, and the Western Pacific Order in Council were transmitted therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

A new Order in Council is necessary.

That, in our opinion, a new Order in Council, under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, is necessary to enable Her Majesty to exercise the powers conferred by the proposed Conventions.

My Lord,

Extradition between Hong Kong and Macao.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that with reference to our Report of the 31st December last, and to the difficulties which existed in the way of carrying out the extradition of fugitive criminals between the Governments of Hong Kong and Macao, he was directed by your Lordship to request that we would take into our consideration the following further suggestion, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the course proposed was, in our opinion, open to any legal objection.

Portugal requires condition that sentence of death be not carried out.

That the refusal of the Portuguese Government to surrender a fugitive accused of a capital offence, except on the condition that sentence of death should not be carried out in the event of his conviction, was the obstacle, as we were aware, to the conclusion of any extradition arrangement between Great Britain and Portugal, and that the extreme inconvenience which was felt in Hong Kong from that state of things was explained in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 16th December last.

As to Governor of Hong Kong having discretionary power to surrender criminals to Macao.

That with a view to surmounting that difficulty, if possible, it was now suggested that the Hong Kong Extradition Ordinance, referred to in that letter, should be amended so as to vest in the Governor in Council the discretionary power of surrendering to the Macao Government persons accused or convicted of the crimes specified in the schedule, without reference to any Treaty or reciprocal law.

That the Macao Government had passed no such law, but that their practice had been to surrender fugitives at their own discretion or under instructions from the Portuguese Government.

Macao would reciprocate, except in murder cases.

That if the Hong Kong Ordinance were amended as proposed, with a view to the surrender of fugitives to the Macao Government without regard to reciprocity, your Lordship apprehended that the Portuguese Government would be willing to surrender, either with or without legislation, for that purpose, fugitives from Hong Kong accused or convicted of any of the crimes specified in the schedule to the Hong Kong Ordinance, except that of murder, and the object in view would then be practically attained.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No objection. But no promise of commutation must be given.

That we see no objection to vesting in the Governor in Council the discretionary power of surrendering to the Macao Government persons accused or convicted of the crimes specified in the schedule, without reference to any Treaty or Reciprocal Law.

Strict instructions should, however, in our opinion, be given to the Governor, that he make no condition for commuting capital punishment in any case where a person accused or convicted of murder is surrendered by the Macao Government.

My Lord,

"City of Mecca" and "Insulano" collision.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 21st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers relative to the legal proceedings at Lisbon arising out of the collision between the British steamer "City of Mecca" and the Portuguese steamer "Insulano."

International Regulations for prevention of collisions.

That from the statement of facts contained in Messrs. G. Smith and Sons' letter of the 19th April, we should perceive that that question mainly turned upon the interpretation placed by the Portuguese legal authorities upon Article 14 (in the Portuguese version, 15) of the International Regulations for the prevention of collisions at sea, and that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Lisbon (vide Mr. Saurin's No. 16, Commercial, 3rd May, 1879) had pressed the Portuguese Government to lay before the Supreme Court, to which the case had been carried on appeal, an authoritative statement of the interpretation placed upon that Article by the Royal Decree of the 3rd July, 1877, copy and translation of which were inclosed in Mr. Morier's despatch No. 38, Commercial, of the 9th July of the same year.

Appeal to Supreme Court.

That, under those circumstances, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any further steps could properly be taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That no further steps can, for the present, be properly taken by Her Majesty's Government in the matter.

If appeal fails, Her Majesty's Government might claim indemnity.

Judgment based on misinterpretation of rules.

If, however, the Supreme Court should decide the case against the appellants, and on the same grounds with the decision of the Court below, it may be a matter for consideration whether Her Majesty's Government may not claim full indemnity for the losses consequent upon a judgment, which is based upon a misinterpretation of a rule of navigation agreed upon by the two Governments.

My Lord,

"Decima industrial" tax.

Complaint of Messrs. Noble and Murat.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 15th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon (Mr. Morier, No. 46, Commercial) relative to a complaint on the part of Messrs. Noble and Murat, British subjects at Viena, that they had been assessed by the Portuguese authorities, in regard to the industrial tax known as the "decima industrial," in excess of the maximum stipulated for in the Anglo-Portuguese Treaty of Commerce of 1842.

That the case was carried by Messrs. Noble and Murat to the Supreme Court of Administration, but their appeal was rejected, not on the merits, but on grounds of informality stated in Senhor Braamcamp's letter of the 17th June (Inclosure 5).

Breach of Treaty engagement.

That Mr. Morier came to the conclusion that, if that decision were maintained, it would be equivalent to an evasion of the Treaty engagement by which Portugal was bound, and in his letter to the Portuguese Minister of the 24th June (Inclosure 6), he called upon him to take the necessary measures to insure that the case should be examined on its merits.

Case dismissed on grounds of informality.

That the note from the Duke de Palmella to Lord Howard de Walden, which he cited expressly, referred to an appeal where the amount of taxation was in excess of Treaty rights, and the question raised appeared to be whether, in case the appellant neglected to observe the procedure and his appeal was dismissed on grounds of informality, the Executive could be called on to interfere; or whether application should not first be made to the Court by the appellant for leave to amend the defect of form.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the above point, and further on the question raised by Mr. Morier, whether, in the event of the Tribunal declining to grant leave to amend, so as to decide the case on the merits, Her Majesty's Government would be entitled to deal with such refusal as an evasion of the obligations of the Treaty for which the Portuguese Government could be held responsible.

1879

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Must ask leave of Tribunal to amend, before considering as to interference of Her Majesty's Government.

That, in our opinion, Messrs. Noble have missed their way, either from not taking the trouble to ascertain the proper form of appealing, or from being misinformed. In either case application should have been made to the Tribunal for leave to amend, and the Executive should not have been asked to interfere until leave had been refused.

Whether, in the event of the Tribunal refusing leave to amend so as to decide the case on the merits, Her Majesty's Government will be entitled to deal with such refusal as an evasion of the obligations of the Treaty, must, to some extent, depend upon the reasons given for the refusal; these reasons we do not at present know.

But we think Messrs. Noble should show a very strong case for the interference of Her Majesty's Government to protect them against the consequences of their own negligence.

"City of Mecca" and "Insulano" collision.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th September ultimo, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the accompanying printed correspondence relating to the case of the "City of Mecca," which had been the subject of a previous reference to us, and a memorandum* containing a brief statement of the facts and a reference to those parts of the correspondence which bear more particularly on the important question on which he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion and advice.

That that question was whether the case of the "City of Mecca" called for diplomatic intervention on the part of Her Majesty's Government, on the ground that the suit of the English Underwriters against the owners and master of the "City of Mecca" was beyond the competence of the Portuguese Tribunals, or on the ground that the decision of the Supreme Court of Justice at Lisbon (the Ultimate Court of Appeal) proceeded on a wrongful interpretation of the International Rules of the Road at Sea, or was inconsistent with their proper construction and with their proper application to the admitted facts of the case.

That our former report was printed at page 47 of the correspondence.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was also to suggest, for our consideration, whether, in the event of diplomatic intervention being, in our opinion, called for, such action could be taken, although the Supreme Court of Justice might not have been moved for a new trial in accordance with the provisions of Portuguese law referred to in the last paragraph of Mr. Morier's despatch No. 47, printed at page 55 of the correspondence.

We were also honoured with a note from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 10th September, and stating that, with reference to his letter of the 5th, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us, for our consideration in connection with the previous papers on the subject already before us, two further letters with their inclosures from Messrs. George Smith and Sons relative to the case of the "City of Mecca" collision.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere.

That Her Majesty's Government cannot, in our opinion, properly intervene diplomatically in the case of the "City of Mecca."

Judgment not founded on sailing rules, but on "City of Mecca" not having stopped, &c.

The decision of the Portuguese Court does not proceed entirely upon the English 14th Portuguese 15th sailing rule. If that had been the case, we should have been of opinion that there was ground for intervention. But (pp. 14 and 15) the judgment in great measure is founded upon the persistence of those on board the "City of Mecca" in not giving way or easing or stopping when the collision was rendered probable by the course taken by the "Insulano."

* See Confidential Papers Nos. 4068 and 4243.

In our view of the facts, this reasoning and the conclusion drawn from the reasoning are wrong, but the mistakes of Courts of Law such as the Portuguese Courts have made in this case are not subjects for diplomatic interference.

But mistake of Law Court is not a subject for diplomatic interference.

Omission to protest will prevent diplomatic intervention.

In reference to the last paragraph of Mr. Morier's despatch (No. 47, p. 55), we are not sufficiently acquainted with the rules and practices of the Portuguese Courts to say whether or not any misdirection of the Judge is a legal flaw, which the Court of Cassation would deem a ground for a new trial; but, if so, the omission of the counsel for the "City of Mecca" to enter his protest would be an answer to any diplomatic intervention which your Lordship might be disposed to make.

Arrest of British vessel "Lucretia." Collision with Spanish vessel "Gongora" on high seas.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th October ultimo, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the arrest, under the warrant or order of one of the Lisbon Courts, of the British steamer "Lucretia," to answer the claim of the owners of the Spanish steamer "Gongora," arising out of a collision between the two vessels on the high seas, which resulted in the total loss by sinking of the "Gongora." That immediately upon the arrest of the "Lucretia". Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon telegraphed to your Lordship (see telegram of the 25th August), asking whether that proceeding was according to international law. That Mr. Morier was informed in reply (see telegram of the 28th September) that, primâ facie, it must be assumed that the Portuguese Courts exercise Admiralty jurisdiction, and were competent to try cases of collision happening on the high seas between Portuguese and British vessels; but if the owners of the "Lucretia" were advised to the contrary, they could appear under protest, and apply to the Court to set aside the arrest.

As to Admiralty jurisdiction of Portuguese Courts.

That subsequently the owners of the "Lucretia," through their solicitors, Messrs. Cooper and Co., addressed a letter to your Lordship (see letter of the 4th September), requesting the good offices of Her Majesty's Government on the ground that exorbitant bail was demanded, that the Portuguese Law Courts were closed for the vacation, and that no remedy could be obtained at law.

That thereupon your Lordship instructed Mr. Morier (see telegram of the 8th September) to represent the case to the Portuguese Government, and ask whether they could intervene for the relief of the ship-owners; and Mr. Morier was requested by despatch No. 31 of the 12th September to report whether the proceedings instituted were civil or criminal. That he was also informed of the grounds on which your Lordship considered that the case was not one calling for diplomatic intervention.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to Mr. Morier's despatch No. 66, Commercial, of the 30th August, containing his explanations of the grounds on which he addressed to your Lordship his telegram of the 25th August, and to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the case was one which at the present stage called for any further diplomatic action, and whether Her Majesty's Government were entitled to protest against the exercise by the Portuguese Courts of the jurisdiction in question, having regard to the fact that such jurisdiction was not based on the ground juris communis maritime, as explained in the case of the "Johann Friederick" (1 Wm. Robinson, 36), but on the territorial fiction referred to by Mr. Morier in his despatch, and more fully discussed in the papers relating to the case of the "City of Mecca," which was at the present time under our consideration.

We were also honoured with a note from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 11th October, inclosing further papers upon the subject.

* Mr. Morier (Telegraphic), August 25; to ditto, No. 28, Commercial, August 28; ditto, No. 62, Commercial, August 25; Messrs. 1879

If claim to jurisdiction is founded on territorial rights, diplomatic intervention justified.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That if the claim of the Portuguese Courts to jurisdiction is founded on quasi-territorial rights, the case would justify strong diplomatic intervention.

But Portugal only claims three miles.

We doubt, however, if such is the fact. The opinion of the jury referred to by Mr. Morier, if good for any legal purpose, tends to show that three miles is the limit of territorial jurisdiction claimed by Portugal.

We have not the opinion of the Law Officers of Portugal asked for by Mr. Morier.

Cannot protest at present.

In our opinion Her Majesty's Government are not at present entitled to protest against the exercise of the jurisdiction exercised by the Portuguese Courts.

The further papers do not lead us to alter the above opinion, that the case is not one for the interference of Her Majesty's Government.

"City of Mecca" and "Insulano" collision.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 6th October, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith printed copies of further despatches, with their inclosures, which had been received since the above date from Mr. Morier, relative to the case of the "City of Mecca."*

That the accompanying memorandum would place us in possession of the points on which your Lordship desired to obtain our opinion in connection with these further papers.

That he was especially to draw our attention to the suggestion at the close of Mr. Morier's despatch No. 89, Commercial (p. 99), respecting the communication which should be addressed by him on this matter to the Portuguese Minister for Foreign Affairs; and also to the inclosed further despatch from Mr. Morier (No. 93 of the 10th November), which was not included in the print.

That the previous papers in the case were annexed for convenience of reference, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our observations on the additional papers submitted to us at our earliest possible convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That two principal questions are raised in these papers: first, the jurisdiction of the Portuguese Tribunals; secondly, the decision upon the merits.

The collision between the Portuguese and British ships took place ten miles from the Portuguese coast, upon the high seas. The British ship after the collision went into a Portuguese port, was there arrested and released, the arrest being held by a Portuguese Court to have been illegal. An action in personam was then instituted against certain British subjects resident in Portugal, and as agents of the owners of the British ship.

The Portuguese Tribunals held (see Judgment of the Supreme Court of Justice, p. 58) that the jurisdiction of their Tribunals extended "to such a space of the sea as may be reasonably considered as a dominion appertaining in the adjacent waters to each maritime nation."

And further, that the British captain "was bound to answer for his act in the Courts of Justice of the territory to which the waters in which the damage was caused appertained."

Court claims more jurisdiction than admitted by international law.

In fact, the Portuguese Court claims the right of jurisdiction over waters more distant from the coast of Portugal than is admitted by international law.

Decision founded on misconception of International Sailing Rules.

The decision upon the merits seems to us to have proceeded upon an entire misconception and misapplication of the Sailing Rules agreed to by Great Britain and Portugal.

---

* See Confidential Paper No. 4243.

Intervention of Her Majesty's Government is necessary.

In our opinion, the case on both points, first, of jurisdiction, secondly, of the meaning and application of the Sailing Rules, justifies, if not requires, the intervention of your Lordship.

As to manner of conducting it.

Whether this intervention should be carried out in the manner suggested by Mr. Morier (p. 99), or in a more formal and decided manner, your Lordship will best judge.

There is one objection or risk in adopting Mr. Morier's suggestion, which occurs to us, and which we submit to your Lordship, that if the Portuguese Attorney-General should support the ruling of the Judges, a difficulty would be raised in the way of further proceedings.

Possibly Mr. Morier has good reasons for believing that the opinion of the Attorney-General would be against the ruling of the Judges, and in that case your Lordship would have still firmer ground for moving the Portuguese Government.

Responsibility of Government for defalcations of its agents.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd December last, stating that he had the honour to forward to us therewith, by your Lordship's direction, a memorandum which had been received from the Russian Chargé d'Affaires at this Court, requesting information as to the consequences resulting to the Government and its agents in this country from any defalcation on the part of one of the latter.

That it would appear from M. Bartholomei's memorandum, that in the case of embezzlement by a Government official in Russia of money deposited with him by private parties as security required by law, the official was liable to criminal prosecution, and further, that in case of his death the prosecution was suspended, and the plaintiff's remedy lay in a civil action against the heirs of the deceased, the Government not holding itself responsible to make good the defaults of its agent.

That M. Bartholomei inquired whether, under similar circumstances, the law of England would be the same as regards the legal irresponsibility of the Crown.

Reference to case of money deposited in Consulates.

That we would find in the printed collection of Law Officers' Reports for the year 1862 (p. 162) an opinion by the Attorney- and Solicitor-General of that time, that "Her Majesty's Government were bound in honour and justice (all mere technical liability being, by the nature of the case, out of the question) to make good to depositors in the various Consulates in the Levant all moneys deposited in the ordinary course of public and formal deposit, and which afterwards became the subject of private appropriation or other defalcation of Consular officers."

As to general rule of irresponsibility of Crown.

That this opinion, however, was based on the special grounds therein mentioned, and did not appear to affect the general rule, that the Crown could not be prejudiced by the misconduct or negligence of any of its officers, and was not responsible, therefore, to private parties for the losses they might sustain by reason thereof. That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the inquiry of the Russian Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Where agent is the proper person to receive money, or where law requires it to be deposited with him, the Government is responsible.

That, in our opinion, the inquiry of the Russian Government may properly be answered to the effect that in cases where the agent is made by his Government, the proper person to receive money from private individuals, the British Government would consider itself responsible for the defalcation of its own agent. Still more on principle would the Government be responsible in the case put by M. Bartholomei, where the defendant was obliged by law to pay money to the agent who afterwards made default.

This case, so put by M. Bartholomei for the sake of legal inquiries in Russia, is the very case in which, on the 10th August last, we had the honour of reporting that, in our opinion, the Russian Government was responsible to a British subject for the defalcation of its own official.

My Lord,

Messrs. Watts and Milburne's claim. Lighters sunk in Danube during war.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 10th July, 1877, upon the subject of a claim made against the Russian Government by Messrs. Watts and Milburne, on account of a tug and certain lighters belonging to them which were sunk in the Danube by the Russian forces at the commencement of the war with Turkey, he had then the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the further correspondence which had passed in regard to that matter.

Award of Mixed Commission.

That we should perceive from those papers that Messrs. Watts and Milburne's losses were examined by a Mixed Commission appointed by the Russian Government to examine claims of that nature, and that the amount of compensation was assessed at a sum considerably lower than that at which the firm had estimated it, but that Messrs. Watts and Milburne, though ready to accept the award, had hitherto been unable to obtain payment.

Russian claim to exemption from liability.

Bluntschli's general principle.

That, in the letter from M. de Giers, inclosed in Mr. Plunkett's despatch No. 234 of the 2nd instant, the Russian Government, without announcing any definite decision on the subject of the claim, referred to the general principle laid down in Bluntschli, p. 365, that "Les atteintes portées à la propriété privée pendant la guerre sont excusables, lorsque les opérations militaires l'exigent."

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the doctrine put forward by the Russian Government could be held to exempt them from liability in respect of the destruction of Messrs. Watts and Milburne's vessels under the circumstances stated in the previous references submitted to us in relation to that case.

That Lord Tenterden was to inclose the printed correspondence respecting the sinking of British vessels in the Seine by Prussian troops during the Franco-German war.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not correctly quoted.

That we are unable to find in the French translation of Bluntschli the passage referred to by M. de Giers in the terms used in his letter.

The passage most resembling that cited by M. de Giers is in paragraph 652: "Le vainqueur doit également respecter la propriété privée, et ne peut y porter atteinte que lorsque les opérations militaires l'exigent;" and "les atteintes à la propriété privée ne sont excusables que lorsque les opérations militaires l'exigent."

The mode of expression thus used in the only French translation (that of 1870) to which we have had access is obviously far less positive than that referred to by M. de Giers.

In the original German (edition of 1872) the words are: "Das Privateigenthum ist auch im Kriege von Seite der siegenden Kriegsgewalt zu respectiren und darf nur in Folge der militärischen Nothwendigkeit angegriffen werden;" and "Nur die Rücksicht auf die militärische Nothwendigkeit entschuldigt und rechtfertigt eine Verletzung des Privateigenthums."

In whatever sense, however, these passages may be taken, whether as the assertion of a positive right, or in the modified sense of a right to be exercised and excusable only under strict necessity, they have no bearing upon the case now in question. These passages occur in that part of his book where Bluntschli is discussing the rights and duties of the belligerents.

Does not apply to seizure of neutral ships.

They have no application to the case of neutral ships seized by either of the belligerents.

Bluntschli lays down rule for compensation in such cases.

This matter is treated and disposed of by Bluntschli (M. de Giers' own authority) in paragraph 795 a, in these words: "Die neutralen Schiffe können sich innerhalb des Kriegsfeldes den Massregeln aus militärischer Nothwendigkeit nicht entziehen; aber die Kriegspartei, welche dieselben aus solchem Grunde angreift, ist zu voller Entschädigung der verletzten Privateigenthümer verpflichtet."

For this proposition, directly applicable to the case of the steamer and lighters sunk, then apparently raised and employed by the Russian military authorities, Bluntschli cites the case of the British ships sunk by the Prussians in the Seine, and whose owners were compensated by the Prussian Government.

Russia must compensate.

For these reasons we do not agree with M. de Giers, that the claims of Messrs. Watts and Milburne are inadmissible, and we are of opinion that the Russian Government may properly be urged to make compensation to Messrs. Watts and Milburne according to the rule referred to in Bluntschli, paragraph 795 a.

No. 69.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received February 4.)

Temple, February 3, 1879.

My Lord,

New Treaty between Spain and Sulu.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 14th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us documents with reference to a new Treaty concluded between Spain and the Sultan of Sulu, which raised the following important question:

Spanish sovereignty over the Archipelago.

Protocol between Great Britain, Germany, and Spain.

That we were aware that the claim of Spain to sovereignty over the Sulu Archipelago had been for many years the subject of grave discussions between the British and Spanish Governments. Owing to the united action of Great Britain and Germany the practical exercise of such sovereignty on the part of Spain had hitherto been successfully opposed, and a modus vivendi was ultimately arrived at between the three Powers, which was embodied in the Protocol of the 11th March, 1877 (document No. 2).

That, in the Foreign Office Memorandum of the 10th December, 1878* (document No. 6), we should find an account of the negotiations which resulted in the signing of that Protocol, with references to the most important despatches bearing thereon, and for more detailed information on the subject Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the printed Sulu correspondence (document No. 1).

That we should observe that the first condition of the negotiations insisted on by Her Majesty's Government was that "the Protocol should contain no recognition of Spanish sovereignty over any part of the Sulu Archipelago."

That the Protocol was signed on the 11th March, 1877, and that, notwithstanding the settlement then arrived at, rumours reached Her Majesty's Government in the course of last year (1878) that the Governor of the Philippines had compelled the Sultan of Sulu to sign a new Treaty recognizing the sovereignty of Spain all over the Archipelago of Sulu and her dependencies.

That Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid was instructed to ask the Spanish Government for a copy of that Treaty, and a copy was furnished to Mr. West in strict confidence by the Spanish Foreign Secretary, with assurances of the care which had been taken to avoid anything which would conflict with the Protocol of the 11th March, 1877 (document No. 9).

---

That in October 1878 the Treaty was officially communicated to Her Majesty's Government (document No. 10). A printed copy of it would be found in Annex II of the Foreign Office Memorandum of the 5th October, 1878 (document No. 4), and it would be seen that it declared the sovereignty of Spain "to be unquestionable over all the Archipelago of Sulu and her dependencies."

That the grounds on which Her Majesty's Government, on the signing of the previous Spanish Treaty of 1851, opposed the recognition of Spanish sovereignty by the Sultan of Sulu, or the cession of any of his territory to Spain, was stated in the case laid before the Law Officers of the Crown on the 3rd March, 1874, and in their Report thereon of the 26th May following (Sulu Correspondence, Part I, p. 37, document No. 1).

That Her Majesty's Government relied on Article VII of the Treaty between Great Britain and Sulu of the 29th May, 1849, the text of which, as well as that of the Spanish Treaty of 1851, we would find in the Annexes to the Foreign Office Memoranda of the 5th July, 1873, and the 18th February, 1874 (document No. 3), as well as in the Sulu Correspondence, Part I, pp. 12 and 34 (document No. 1).

That, with reference to the objection taken to the non-ratification of the British Treaty of 1849, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the Foreign Office Memorandum of the 21st December, 1878 (document No. 7).

Spanish claim to territory on coast of Borneo.

That the differences with Spain in regard to Sulu had hitherto been confined to the Sulu Archipelago. But that a further complication had arisen by reason of the claim, now asserted by Spain under their new Treaty, to sovereignty over the possessions of the Sultan of Sulu on the north-east coast of Borneo. That on that part of the question Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the Foreign Office Memorandum of the 5th July, 1873 (document No. 3), p. 1, the Foreign Office Memorandum of the 5th October (document No. 5), and the Foreign Office Memorandum of the 10th December (document No. 6), p. 6.

Dent and Overbeck Concession.

That several months before the date of the new Spanish Treaty the Sultan of Sulu had formally granted those territories, and his rights of sovereignty thereover, to Mr. Alfred Dent (a British subject) and Baron Overbeck (an Austrian subject, and agent to Mr. Dent) for valuable consideration, with a view to the formation of a British Company for the development of the resources of that country.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us for the exact particulars and objects of that cession to the printed statement addressed by those gentlemen to your Lordship (document No. 8).

That the establishment of Spanish dominion in Borneo was strongly opposed by the Colonial Office (document No. 6, p. 6), and that we should observe that the Spanish Foreign Minister, shortly before the signing of the Protocol of the 11th March, 1877, distinctly assured Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid "that his Ministry had no designs whatever on Borneo, and limited the claims of Spanish sovereignty to Sulu and the adjacent islands." (Ibid.)

That accordingly, in framing the Protocol, all expressions which might be held to include Borneo were carefully expunged or altered by the Representatives of England and Germany.

That the German Government had expressed their desire to be informed of the views of Her Majesty's Government in regard to the new Spanish Treaty, and that Sir Julian was to request that we would take all the documents transmitted herewith into our early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the question whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in protesting against the new Spanish Treaty, as regards its application to the Sulu Archipelago, or to the north-east coast of Borneo, or to the whole of the Sultan's dominions.

That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured also with any observations we might have to offer on the particular question raised as to the validity of the British Treaties of 1761, 1764, 1769, and 1849, as to which see Foreign Office Memorandum (document No. 3, p. 1), and on the case generally.

That a map of Borneo and the Sulu Archipelago was attached to document No. 8.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot protest against Treaty as regards Sulu Archipelago.

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in protesting against the new Spanish Treaty as regards its application to the Sulu Archipelago.

The Protocol of the 11th March, 1877, is indeed silent as regards the pretensions of Spain, but those pretensions were well known at the time, and were, to some extent, a cause of the Protocol. The Spanish Government would, we think, successfully answer any protest against the right to make the Treaty in question with the Sultan based upon the terms of this Protocol, as the Spanish Minister did in his conversation with Mr. West (despatch No. 174).

The Sultan of Sulu, on his part, had the right to make the Treaty in question, unless he was prevented so doing by some existing Treaty with another Power, in this case with Great Britain.

Old British Treaties with Sulu not binding on Sultan.

The Treaties of 1761, 1764, and 1769, particularly when considered with the proposed Convention of 1849, cannot be relied upon as binding the Sultan; they were observed or not observed, as it suited the purpose of the English in those seas, and without any consideration of the interests of the other Contracting Party.

The Convention of 1849, Article VIII, requires that "this Treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged at Sulu within two years after this date."

Non-ratification of British Treaty of 1849.

The Treaty was for some reason never ratified, and in our opinion cannot be resorted to as binding the Sultan by the provisions of Article VII "not to acknowledge the Suzerainté of any other State, without the consent of Her Britannic Majesty."

In reference to the north-east coast of Borneo, or to the whole of the Sultan's dominions, the Ist Article of the Treaty between Spain and the Sultan applies to the Archipelago of Sulu and its dependencies.

If territory in Borneo is dependency of Archipelago, it passes to Spain under the new Treaty.

If, therefore, the north-east part of Borneo, or any other part of the Sultan's dominions, can properly be described as a dependency of the Archipelago, the Treaty will include them as passing under the sovereignty of Spain.

Rights ceded to Mr. Dent should be confirmed by Spain.

As to recognition of Spanish rights.

Dent must take his own course.

The rights ceded to Mr. Dent and Baron Overbeck by the Sultan of Borneo should, if included in the territory put under Spain by the Treaty, be confirmed by Spain, but your Lordship may perhaps have some hesitation in putting the case of Mr. Dent forward for the favourable consideration of the Spanish Government, since that act would be an admission of the rights of Spain. Mr. Dent and Baron Overbeck may therefore take their own course, as they may be advised, in their interest in a private undertaking out of Her Majesty's dominions.

In concluding this Report we beg to refer your Lordship to a former Report of the Law Officers of the 26th May, 1874. (Print, Part I, pp. 37 and 38.) That Report refers to the several Treaties between Spain and Sulu, and Great Britain and Sulu, and to the course of action or inaction followed by the British Government from time to time in reference to the sovereignty of the Sulu Archipelago claimed by Spain.

We entirely agree with the opinions given in that Report.

My Lord,

Collision at Santander between British vessel "Eurydice" and Spanish vessel "Miguel Saenz."

Spanish protest against competency of British Admiralty Court to try.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 30th ultimo, in which he stated that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers noted in the margin,* from which it would be seen that the Spanish Government had protested, through their Minister at this Court, against the competency of the Admiralty Court of this country to adjudicate in [a] case wherein the owners of the British steamer "Eurydice" claim damages from the Spanish vessel "Miguel Saenz" on account of the injury sustained through a collision between the two vessel in the port of Santander; the case having been also investigated by the Marine Commandant at that port, who decided against the English steamer.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether there was anything in the statements advanced on the part of the Spanish Government to alter the conclusion arrived at, as expressed in the letter to the Marquis de Casa Laiglesia of the 21st February last, i.e., that Her Majesty's Government could not interfere to stop the proceedings in the Admiralty Court, and that the circumstance that the claim then preferred against the "Miguel Saenz" had already been adjudicated on by a Court of competent jurisdiction in Spain would constitute a matter of defence which the owners of the Spanish vessel should set up as a bar to the suit in the British Court.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government cannot stop proceedings in Admiralty Court.

That, in our opinion, there is nothing in the statements advanced, on the part of the Spanish Government, to induce Her Majesty's Government to alter the conclusion arrived at, that Her Majesty's Government cannot interfere to stop the proceedings in the Admiralty Court.

British vessel "Gunga" putting into Manila in distress.

Fine for omitting to declare portion of cargo.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd May last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith the papers noted in the inclosed List relative to a case in which the British steamer "Gunga," having put into the port of Manila in distress, was subjected to a fine by the Spanish Custom-house officers, and to the confiscation of a portion of her cargo, owing to the captain having omitted to include that portion of the cargo consisting of opium in the manifest which he drew up from memory on arrival at Manila, the original ship's manifest having been mislaid in the confusion consequent on the disaster, and no record having been kept of a portion of the cargo which had been jettisoned.

Boarding of vessel without notice to British Consul.

That the circumstances of the case were fully set forth in the despatch from the Acting British Consul at Manila, dated the 12th June, 1878 (No. 15, Consular); and in a recent despatch (No. 4, Commercial, of the 5th February, 1879), Mr. Mackenzie pointed out that the boarding and examination of the vessel by the Customs officials, without notice to the British Consul, was in violation of the instructions contained in the Circular of the Spanish Government relative to the search of foreign vessels in Spanish ports, dated the 17th May, 1871 (vide Hertslet's Treaties, vol. xiii, p. 799).

That we would observe that, in your Lordship's despatch to Mr. West, Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, No. 50, Commercial, of the 21st August last, it was contended, on the part of Her Majesty's Government, that the "Gunga," having been compelled by stress of weather to put into Manila, and not having touched there for the purposes of trade, was not liable to the fiscal regulations of that port, and that the proceedings of the Customs authorities were consequently not only opposed to the practice of civilized nations, but contrary to the most obvious principles of justice.

Reference to case of "Erl King."

(That reference was also made in the above-mentioned despatch to a similar case which occurred in the year 1871 with regard to the British ship "Erl King," and papers respecting that case were also inclosed for our information.)

That it would be seen from Mr. West's despatch No. 42, Commercial, of the 11th April, that the Spanish Government, on the other hand, contended, as they contended in the case of the "Erl King," that a foreign ship entering a Spanish port, whether for commercial transactions, or on account of stress of weather, or under any circumstances whatsoever, was liable to the fiscal regulations of such port, and must therefore conform to the prescribed Customs Ordinances, or submit to the consequences of their infringement.

That Mr. West went on to express his opinion that the Spanish Government would scarcely yield their contention in this case as regarded their right to impose the fine, seeing that a fault was committed in omitting the opium from the manifest of the "Gunga;" and he suggested, if Her Majesty's Government coincided in that view of the case, that a solution of the difficulty might perhaps be found in an agreement as to the amount of the fine which, under the circumstances, ought to be imposed.

That, as regarded the question of the restitution of the opium and other effects, or of their value, Mr. West suggested that action might be taken by Her Majesty's Legation at Madrid in the interest of the owners, by setting forth the extenuating circumstances pleaded for the suspicious concealment of the opium, and for the confusion found at the time in the ship's papers.

That this case, in your Lordship's opinion, raised an important question of international law; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the course which should be pursued by Her Majesty's Government in regard thereto.

That, for convenience of reference, a statement was annexed, which had been prepared at the Foreign Office, comparing the allegations contained in the Report on this subject by the Customs authorities at the Philippines (a translation of which was inclosed in Mr. West's despatch No. 62, Commercial, of the 7th instant), with the various passages in the correspondence which tended towards an opposite conclusion.

That your Lordship had instructed Mr. West by telegram to request the Spanish Government to suspend their decision on this case pending further representations which Her Majesty's Government desired to make in relation thereto, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore to request that we would favour your Lordship with our report thereon at our early convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the question raised in these papers is of a political and commercial rather than of a legal character.

Governments may impose what conditions they please on foreign vessels, &c.

By the Law of Nations every independent Government is the sole judge of the measures which may best suit, promote, or insure its own people their interests and safety; may open or close its territory, waters, and harbours; and altogether refuse to admit, or impose what conditions it may deem fit, upon the admission of foreigners and foreign vessels.

Foreign Governments can only protest.

These conditions may be absurd, vexatious, inconsistent with and contrary to the usage of all other civilized nations; still the Government has the right to impose them, and a foreign Government can only protest against their being imposed or put in force.

The same customs and port Regulations, and the same penalties for any breach of those Regulations, are, by the law of Spain, applicable to and inflicted upon all vessels alike. No allowance is made for an innocent failure to comply with the law, as in the case of the "Erl King," and no excuse is admitted for an omission to furnish a complete manifest, though, as in the case of the "Gunga," no smuggling could have been intended, since the ship was on the point of sailing when the seizure was made.

Reference to Reports on "Erl King" case.

It appears to us that the suggestions made by the Law Officers in their several reports upon the case of the "Erl King" are applicable to the present case; but it must be for the consideration of your Lordship whether any, and if any what, course Her Majesty's Government can, with proper dignity and self-respect, take after the positive determination expressed by the Spanish Government in the case of the "Erl King," and in the present case, to give effect to their law.

Her Majesty's Government cannot appeal to Treaties.

In forming our opinion upon this case, we have considered the Treaty of 1667 and the subsequent Treaties between Great Britain and Spain; and we are of opinion that the XIIIth Article of that Treaty of 1667 cannot be relied upon against the right of Spain to make the regulations in question.

The arguments used by Señor Carvajal in his note to Sir H. Layard, 27th December, 1873, on this Treaty, seem to us unanswerable. Her Majesty's Government in 1874 accepted those arguments, and the conclusion formed upon them.

Seizure of "Sultana" in Sulu Archipelago.

Claim of Victoria Trading Company of Labuan.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th August last, stating that on the receipt of our Report of the 13th November, 1877, the Earl of Derby addressed to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid a despatch (No. 217, to Sir J. Walsham), draft of which was inclosed, instructing him to apply to the Spanish Government for payment to the Victoria Trading Company of Labuan of the sum of 22,652 dollars, as compensation for the seizure in the Sulu Archipelago in 1875 of the steamer "Sultana," which vessel had been chartered by the Company from the Sultan of Brunei.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a despatch from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires (Mr. Wyndham, No. 125, July 28), transmitting a note of the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, in which his Excellency sets forth the grounds on which his Government disputed the claim of the Victoria Trading Company, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government should continue to press the claim.

That the previous papers relating to the Case were inclosed for convenience of reference.*

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

If "Sultana" was condemned by proper Prize Court, Her Majesty's Government cannot press claim.

That we assume from the note of the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs that the Tribunal which condemned the "Sultana" was a duly constituted Prize Court, and on that assumption we are of opinion that Her Majesty's Government should not continue to press the claim.

Estate of Padre Agostino.

Claim of Propaganda t Rome.

Transfer of case to Supreme Court at Constantinople.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 28th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers relating to a question which had arisen with respect to the administration of the estate of a Maltese Capuchin friar, named Padre Agostino, who died at Tunis, leaving considerable property. That the Propaganda at Rome laid claim to the succession, on the grounds stated in their letter to Cardinal Manning of the 3rd July last. That that claim was disputed by the relatives of the deceased; and, as under section 91 of the Levant Order in Council, Provincial Courts could only grant administration where there was no contention respecting the right to the grant, the Acting British Consul at Tunis, Mr. Stevens, reported the case to the Supreme Court at Constantinople, under section 39, with a view to its transfer to that Court. That, before any action was taken on that Report, information was received that the Propaganda had withdrawn their claim.

That, in the meantime, Consul-General Reade arrived at Tunis, and entered upon the functions of his post as Consular Judge of the Provincial Court there.

That the claim of the Propaganda having been withdrawn, Mr. Reade was prepared to proceed with the case at Tunis, under section 91 of the Order in Council; but it appeared from Mr. Reade's No. 3 of the 15th ultimo that the Propaganda, upon further consideration, renewed their claim to the succession, and that Mr. Fawcett, the Judge of the Supreme Court at Constantinople, on the ex parte application of their representative, and of the representative of one Carnana, a nephew of the deceased, granted a motion for the transfer of the case to that Court (Inclosure 2 in Mr. Reade's No. 3 of the 15th October).

That Consul-General Reade, who seemed to be under the impression that he had authority to grant administration, although the case was a contentious one, appealed to your Lordship, describing the hardship which the proposed transfer of the case would entail on the relatives and creditors of the deceased at Tunis, and their irritation at Mr. Fawcett's having granted the motion above mentioned ex parte.

That, in view of the representations contained in Mr. Reade's despatches Nos. 2 and 3, your Lordship instructed Sir Henry Layard to inform Mr. Fawcett that your Lordship was of opinion that it would be desirable to send the Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court to try the case at Tunis under section 34 of the Order in Council, and Mr. Fawcett was requested to report under that section of the Order in Council the motion of the Propaganda and of Carnana, for the transfer of the case was granted.

That Mr. Lister was to draw our attention to the telegram received from Mr. Fawcett in reply.

That it did not appear clearly from that telegram whether the order for the transfer of the case was made on Mr. Stevens' original Report under section 39, or on the application of the Propaganda and Carnana. That the order, however, had been made, and Mr. Fawcett, in his telegram, stated that the legal question of succession only "will be tried at Constantinople, but that the estate will be realized and divided at Tunis."

That Mr. Lister was to observe, with reference to that proposed apportionment between the Supreme Court and a Provincial Court, that the latter Courts were, by section 42, made auxiliary to the Supreme Court, "in all particulars relating to the administration of justice."

That, on the other hand, Mr. Lister was to refer us to sections 39, 216, and 217 of the Order in Council, as to the transfer of cases from a Provincial Court to the Supreme Court, on the Report of the Judge of the Provincial Court, and to section 34 as to the power of the Judge or Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court to exercise its jurisdiction locally in any part of the Ottoman dominions.

That, having regard to the peculiar character of the claim then reasserted by the Propaganda, your Lordship considered it important that any doubt should be removed as to the regularity of the proceedings, and also that, if possible, the general body of relatives and creditors should not be placed at a disadvantage by the removal of the proceedings from the district where they resided, and which the deceased inhabited.

That Mr. Lister was, therefore, to request that we would take all the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to any instructions which we might consider it expedient that your Lordship should send to Constantinople in relation to that suit.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Mr. Lister, bearing date the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 28th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us papers having further reference to the case of Padre Agostino's estate.

That Mr. Fawcett stated (despatch No. 91) that he did not make the ex parte order for the transfer of the suit to Constantinople, which was complained of by the relatives and creditors of the deceased at Tunis.

That as the Supreme Court was actually seized of the case at Constantinople, and the suit had commenced, your Lordship presumed that the case should now proceed there, and your Lordship would be glad to be informed, at our earliest convenience, whether we concurred in that view.

That it was requested that the inclosed despatches might be returned to the Foreign Office.

We have also to acknowledge the receipt of a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 11th instant, stating that with reference to the letter from the Foreign Office and previous letter relating to case of Padre Agostino's property, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a petition from persons professing to be claimants to the estate, and that he was to request that we would take that petition into our consideration in connection with the papers which had been already forwarded to us, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the whole case at our earliest convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the whole of these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

"Contentious" case. Transfer to Constantinople proper.

That, in this "contentious" case the Court at Tunis could not proceed by force of section 91, but was under section 217 bound to communicate with the Supreme Court; and this Court of its own mere motion under section 217 may by order remove the matter to the Supreme Court.

In our opinion, therefore, Mr. Fawcett had the power, without any motion at all made before him, certainly on even an ex parte motion, to order the case to be tried before him, and in Constantinople under section 39.

Your Lordship may consequently, as we think, properly instruct Mr. Fawcett to hear and determine the case as he proposed.

Not send Assistant Judge to Tunis.

Since this case has been removed to Constantinople it may be best, in our opinion, to keep it before the Court there, and not send the Assistant Judge to Tunis.

Estate will be administered at Tunis.

The Petitioners may, in our opinion, be answered that the Supreme Consular Court will decide, at Constantinople, merely the question of law, but that the estate will be administered at Tunis.*

The petition may, we think, properly be sent to the Supreme Consular Court, for the purpose of informing the Judge of that Court that there are several persons at Tunis claiming an interest in the estate of Agostino.

Consular Court at Constantinople. Probate jurisdiction, &c.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a telegram, from Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge at Constantinople, respecting the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Consular Court at that place, with reference to probate and administration under sections 5-91, and Part VIII (sections 206-239) of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in the Levant.

Deceased British subject not resident in Turkey.

That it was presumed that, having regard to the restrictive terms of those provisions in the Order in Council, the Consular Court had no jurisdiction in cases where the deceased British subject was not resident in the Ottoman dominions, or did not die there, but that in such cases any assests belonging to the estate in the Ottoman dominions should be collected by the executors or administrator appointed by the proper Court at the place of his domicile, as provided by Article 26 of the Capitulations between Great Britain and Turkey.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion, at our earliest convenience, as to whether a reply could properly be sent in the above sense to Mr. Fawcett's inquiry.

---

* See postscript to Mr. Fawcett's despatch No. 91 of October 27, 1879.

That copies of the Order in Council and of the Capitulations were sent therewith for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Heirs must apply in England to revoke Letters of Administration.

That Mr. Fawcett may, in our opinion, properly be instructed that Letters of Administration having been granted in England to the widow, the (heirs) next-of-kin should apply to the Court in England to have those letters revoked.

Protection of property in Turkey under Order in Council.

In the meanwhile, the property in the Ottoman dominions may be protected by an administration under section 239 of the Order in Council of December 1873.

Tidjaret Court. Valmas v. North British Mercantile Insurance Company.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 16th December last, stating that he had to forward to us, by your Lordship's direction, the accompanying two despatches, and their inclosures,* from Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople relative to an action which had been brought against the North British Mercantile Insurance Company in the Tidjaret Court at that capital.

That the Court in question was a Turkish Tribunal for the decision of civil commercial suits. That the competency of those Courts was defined in Articles 27 et sequentes of an Appendix to the Turkish Commercial Code, dated the 30th April, 1860, which would be found at page 357 of the accompanying volume. Article 27 runs as follows:—

"Les Tribunaux de Commerce connaîtront—

Competency of the Court.

"1. De toutes contestations relatives aux engagements et transactions entre commerçants, marchands, et banquiers, à moins qu'il ne résulte de l'acte même que l'opération n'a pas eu le commerce pour objet, auquel cas le Tribunal de Commerce renverra la contestation au Tribunal compétent.

"2. Des contestations relatives aux actes de commerce faits par toutes personnes."

That the following were the facts of the case now in question:—

Valmas, Greek subject. House burnt. Company refuse to pay. Lodges protest in British Consulate. Becomes Turkish subject and sues Company in Tidjaret.

A Greek subject, named Valmas, was insured in the British Company above mentioned. His warehouse was burnt, with grave suspicion that the man himself had set it on fire. Valmas, in his quality of Greek subject, lodged his protest in the British Consular Court, through the Greek Consulate, against the Company for non-payment. For a time nothing more was heard of the claim. Then it was found that Valmas had instituted a suit against the Company in the Tidjaret as a Turkish subject, and that, in the interval between the lodging of the protest in the British Consulate and the presentation of the petition to the Tidjaret, he had changed his nationality.

Suit begun in Consulate cannot be afterwards instituted in Tidjaret.

That it seemed to be admitted that a rule existed that, where a foreigner had commenced a suit in a Consular Court, he could not afterwards abandon it and institute a suit on the same subject-matter in the Tidjaret on becoming naturalized as an Ottoman subject. But it did not appear that, if only the cause of action arose before he was naturalized, he was prejudiced by any rule from suing the foreign defendants in the Tidjaret.

Refusal of Consular Judge to allow defendant to appear.

That no suit was instituted by the plaintiff in the British Consular Court, but, as already stated, a protest was there lodged by him, before his change of nationality, against the British Insurance Company, for non-payment of his claim. That it appeared that the suit was first instituted in the Tidjaret several years ago, and that the late Sir Philip Francis (then Her Majesty's Consul-General and Chief Judge at Constantinople) sent Mr. Dragoman Stavrides and the agent of the Insurance Company before the Court. That, on that occasion, the plaintiff's advocate admitted that his client had changed his nationality in order to take the case into the Turkish Court. Thereupon Sir Philip Francis would not allow the defendant to appear in the case; that refusal had been constantly maintained, and the proceedings have ever since been in abeyance.

---

* Sir A. H. Layard, No. 1308; "Législation Ottomane," vol. ii.

1879

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take the papers into our consideration, and would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether, under all the circumstances, Her Majesty's Ambassador can properly object to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Tidjaret in this suit.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Ambassador cannot object to jurisdiction of Tidjaret.

That we are not aware of any ground of law upon which Her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople can properly object to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Tidjaret in this case.

Suit was not commenced in Consulate. Only protest lodged.

The rule referred to in Lord Tenterden's letter does not, as he suggests, apply to the facts of this case, nor is the mere lodging of a protest the commencement of a suit.

Case may proceed.

In the absence, therefore, of any information in reference to the reasons which guided the late Sir Philip Francis, we are of opinion that no further hindrance should be offered to the prosecution of the suit.

Kustendji Railway Arbitration.

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor as to Claim of the Kustendji Railway against the Porte under Arbitration.

Treaty of Berlin substitutes Roumania for Porte.

ARTICLE LI of the Treaty of Berlin provides that, with regard to public works and other enterprises of a like nature, Roumania shall be substituted for the Porte as regards its rights and obligations throughout the ceded territory.

Claimants are no parties to Treaty.

2. Whatever may be the meaning and extent of this stipulation, it is one which concerns Roumania and the Porte only. None of the persons who have any contracts with or claims against the Porte are parties to the stipulation. They may agree to accept it, but until they do accept it they stand in their original position as persons having dealings with the Porte, and the Porte only. Whatever obligations come within the meaning of the Article, the Porte, when she discharges them, will have a right to be recouped by Roumania; but that is quite a different matter, with which those who have contracted with the Porte have no concern.

They claim from Porte. Porte may recoup itself from Roumania.

3. It may well be doubted how far the Article extends to claims already existing against the Porte for damages in regard to public works; but this is a question to be settled between Roumania and the Porte.

4. The Kustendji Railway Company had, prior to the Treaty of Berlin, certain claims against the Porte in respect of land and damages; and these claims were submitted to arbitration. The arbitration has gone on since the Treaty, and matured into an award against the Porte. It seems to me to be clear that this was originally, has always continued to be, and is now, so far as the Railway Company is concerned, an affair between it and the Porte only, and that the Railway Company cannot properly be turned over to seek redress from Roumania. Whether, if the Porte satisfies the award, she can ask Roumania to indemnify her for what she loses, depends upon the question how far, on the construction of the LIst Article, a pre-existing claim of this kind is one of the obligations mentioned in the Article; but with this question it seems to me that the Railway Company have nothing to do.

Kustendji Company cannot be turned over to seek redress from Roumania.

Instancing a parallel case.

5. If the Great Northern Railway Company were to cede by agreement a portion of its system to the Midland Company, and a clause were introduced into the instrument of cession that the Midland should be substituted, as regards the works of that part of the system, for the Great Northern in its rights and obligations throughout the ceded portion, it would scarcely be imagined that this was sufficient to hand over any contractor or other person having claims against the Great Northern to the Midland without his consent. And it is not to be supposed that the Signatories to the Treaty of Berlin meant to do anything so violent as to interfere with private rights. It is, perhaps, difficult to say whether the Porte or Roumania would be the more unsatisfactory for the Railway Company to have as its debtor; but the Company must be the judge of this, and if it prefers to stand on its rights against the Porte, I do not think we should lend any countenance to the idea that the Treaty of Berlin has destroyed these rights.

Company may stand on its rights, which are not destroyed by Treaty of Berlin.

6. I think that, so far as it is proper for Her Majesty's Government to press on the Porte the claims of the Railway Company under the award, the Government should not admit any defence of the Porte on the ground that the liability has ceased to be the liability of the Porte, as between the Porte and the Railway Company.

Her Majesty's Government must not admit that Porte's liability has ceased.

Inquests on British subjects dying in Turkey.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence which had taken place between Her Majesty's Consul-General and Judge at Constantinople and the Foreign Office, in regard to the holding of inquests on the bodies of British subjects dying within the Ottoman dominions.

That, by Her Majesty's Order in Council for the regulation of Consular jurisdiction in those dominions, it was provided (section 5) that Her Majesty's criminal jurisdiction should be exercised under and according to the provisions of the Order and not otherwise, and the Civil and Criminal authorities of the superior Consular Court were defined in Parts IX and XI respectively.

As to functions of Coroner being conferred by Order in Council.

That the power to exercise the functions of Coroner was not expressly included among the authorities vested in that Court, but it was contended by Mr. Fawcett that that power was conferred on the Court by the general words of section 6 of the Order.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to observe, however, that in the China and Japan Order in Council of the 9th March, 1865 (of which sections 4 and 5 were identical in their terms with sections 5 and 6 of the Levant Order), it was thought necessary to insert a special clause (viz., section 53) giving power to the Supreme Courts and to the Provincial Courts to discharge the duties appertaining to the office of Coroner in England.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, in the absence of such a provision in the Levant Order in Council, it was competent to the Judge of the Consular Court at Constantinople to discharge the duties in question. That copies of both Orders in Council above referred to were inclosed therewith.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

They are so conferred.

That the words in section 34 of Her Majesty's Order in Council, taken with the general provisions respecting Her Majesty's jurisdiction, notwithstanding the omission of a special clause similar to section 53 in the China and Japan Order in Council are, in our opinion, sufficient to enable the Judge of the Consular Court at Constantinople to discharge the duties of Coroner.

My Lord, Temple, April 18, 1879.

Cases of the "Harriet Agnes," "Wave," and "Beaconsfield."

Detention by Consul-General Fawcett.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 17th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 8th and 14th August last, in relation to the detention of the steam-ships "Harriet Agnes" and "Wave" at Constantinople by order of Consul-General Fawcett, Judge of Her Majesty's Supreme Consular Court there, for a violation of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1876," he was to transmit to us the further correspondence on that subject, which was noted in the margin.

Compensation claimed.

That we should observe that the owners of the steam-ships "Wave" and 1879

(As to legality of Consul-General's judgments: "Unseaworthy ships," &c.)

"Beaconsfield" had claimed compensation from the Board of Trade for the detention of those vessels (Mr. H. Adamson, 24th December, 1878), and that they had been referred to the Foreign Office by the Board of Trade, who, in their letter to the Foreign Office of the 20th December last, pointed out that in the case of the "Harriet Agnes" they authorized a prosecution, and consequently felt bound to pay and did pay the owners' expenses, but that in the case of the steam-ships "Wave" and "Beaconsfield" they gave no authority, and therefore could not hold themselves responsible either for the expenses which Mr. Fawcett had incurred or for the damages claimed by the owners.

They added that if the owners had any claim at law or in equity to compensation, it was to the Foreign Office and not to the Board of Trade that their claim should be addressed.

That your Lordship had caused the owners of those two steamers to be informed that the proceedings complained of were not instituted by direction of the Board of Trade or of the Foreign Office; that the proper redress against judicial proceedings of the Consular Court which might be considered irregular was by appeal, but that your Lordship proposed to consider the particulars of those cases in communication with the Law Officers of the Crown, with a view to removing, so far as it might be in your Lordship's power to do so, any just ground of complaint to which the proceedings of the Consular Court might be open in reference to the enforcement of the laws relating to the lading of ships.

Mr. Fawcett's protest against Law Officers declaring his judgments illegal.

That before inviting our attention to the particulars of those cases, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that Mr. Fawcett, in his despatch No. 121 of the 28th October, 1878, demurred to any decision he may have pronounced being declared illegal "because any advocate, however eminent, has given an opinion upon it." He protested against his decisions being called illegal until they had been pronounced to be so by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council; and he appealed to the independence of the Bench.

That on that point Sir J. Pauncefote was to state that there is no desire, nor has there ever been any attempt on the part of the Foreign Office, to interfere with the judicial independence of Consular Judges; but in the Levant, and other places out of Her Majesty's dominions which come under the operation of the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, the administration of justice over British subjects is not surrounded by those safeguards which exist in this country and in Her Majesty's possessions abroad.

Practice of Foreign Office looking after judicial acts of Consular Judges.

That it had, therefore, been the practice of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who was responsible for the selection of Consular Judges, to exercise proper vigilance over their judicial proceedings, and whenever those proceedings were, in the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, clearly irregular, to bring the fact to their knowledge.

Practice of Consular Judges applying to Foreign Office for advice.

That it had been usual also for the Consular Judges at Constantinople to apply to the Foreign Office for legal advice, and Mr. Fawcett himself not unfrequently availed himself of that privilege, a circumstance which showed that, in his own opinion, the relations between Consular Judges and the Foreign Office might admit of legal advice and assistance being given to them by the Secretary of State, in the discharge of their judicial functions, without compromising their dignity or independence.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to observe that there were numerous cases decided in the Consular Court at Constantinople from which an appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council did not lie as a right, and in other cases the heavy cost of such an appeal practically debarred the suitor from resorting to that remedy.

That it appeared, therefore, to your Lordship that Mr. Fawcett's protest was not well founded, and that complaints of illegal proceedings on the part of Consular Judges, especially where they affected the personal liberty of British subjects and the interests of British trade and shipping, should receive immediate attention by the Foreign Office in communication with the Law Officers of the Crown.

That if we should concur in the views above expressed, Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would be so good as to examine the particulars of the proceedings detailed in the accompanying memorandum, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether they disclosed any irregularities in the administration of justice which called for observation on the part of the Secretary of State.

That it might be that some of the persons aggrieved by those proceedings were not entitled to sympathy or consideration by reason of their misconduct: nevertheless, the action of Mr. Fawcett in those cases appeared to raise questions of some gravity in relation to the administration of justice generally in his Court.

That your Lordship would be glad, therefore, to be informed, first, with reference to Mr. Parry's appointment—

1. Whether that appointment, and the instructions of the Court to that officer, were warranted by law.

2. Whether the allowance of fees to Mr. Parry by the Court is warranted by law?

Secondly, as regards the "Wave"—

1. Whether the warrant to detain the "Wave" was lawfully issued by the Court?

2. Whether the subsequent arrest of that vessel by Admiral Commerell, at the request of Mr. Fawcett, was warranted by law?

Third, as regards the "Beaconsfield"—

Whether the proceedings of Mr. Parry and of Thomson, the Officer of the Court in that case, as detailed in the Report furnished by Mr. Fawcett to the Board of Trade (inclosure in Board of Trade letter of the 3rd January, 1879), were warranted by law?

Fourth, as to Contempt of Court—

1. Whether the arrest of the master of the "Wave" for Contempt of Court, when the steamer was forcibly brought back to Constantinople, under the circumstances stated by Mr. Fawcett, was warranted by law?

2. Whether the offence of "Contempt of Court" was committed at all in that case?

3. Whether, in the case of Mr. Pitts, a further Report from Mr. Fawcett should be called for, having regard to the fact that, in his letter of the 8th January, 1879, reporting the case, he has omitted to state the nature and effect of the "Orders of Court" to which he refers on the subject of the possession of the mill?

Fifth, as regards compensation—

Whether the owners of the "Wave" or "Beaconsfield" have any just claim for compensation from Her Majesty's Government?

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to inclose the previous correspondence on the cases of those steamers for convenience of reference, and also a copy of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, for the Regulation of Consular Jurisdiction in the Levant.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Following are illegal:—

That, in our opinion—

Mr. Parry's appointment and fees;

1. The appointment of Mr. Parry, and the instructions of the Court given to him, were not warranted by law.

2. The allowance of fees to Mr. Parry is not warranted by law.

Second, as regards the "Wave"—

Arrest of "Wave;"

1. The warrant to detain the "Wave" was not lawfully issued by the Court.

2. The subsequent arrest of that vessel by Admiral Commerell, at the request of Mr. Fawcett, was not warranted by law.

Third, as regards the "Beaconsfield"—

Proceedings as to "Beaconsfield;"

The proceedings of Mr. Parry and Thomson, the Officer of the Court, were not warranted by law.

As to Contempt of Court—

Master of "Wave," arrest for contempt of Court.

1. The arrest of the master of the "Wave" for "Contempt of Court," when that steamer was forcibly brought back to Constantinople, was not warranted by law.

2. The offence of "Contempt of Court" was not committed at all in that case.

Mr. Pitts' case: Further information.

In the case of Mr. Pitts, we consider that Mr. Fawcett may properly be instructed to furnish a further Report, setting out the "Orders of Court" to which he has referred.

As to compensation—

Compensation due to owners of "Wave" and "Beaconsfield."

The arrest and detention of the "Wave" and "Beaconsfield" were, in our opinion, not warranted by law, and the owners of those vessels have, therefore, a just claim for compensation from Her Majesty's Government.

Navigation of Danube. Alterations in Public Act to suit Treaty of Berlin.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th instant, stating that with reference to our letter of the 5th November last on the subject of the alterations required in the Public Act of the 2nd November, 1865, for the navigation of the mouths of the Danube in order to bring it into conformity with the stipulations of the Treaty of Berlin of the 13th July last, he was to transmit to us two despatches which had recently been received from Colonel Siborne, Her Majesty's Commissioner for the Danube.

Proposed Supplemental Act.

That from those despatches it would be seen that, in consequence of difficulties which had been made by the Russian Commissioner, the plan of an amended Public Act had been abandoned, and that it was proposed to draw up a Supplemental Act specifying the modifications made in the Act of the 2nd November, 1865.

That a draft of additional Articles for that purpose had accordingly been prepared by the French Commissioner, and was forwarded by Colonel Siborne for consideration.

That your Lordship had, as at present advised, no objection to proceeding in the manner proposed, if it would obviate unnecessary differences and discussions, and if the Supplemental Act was sufficient for the purpose in view.

That with that latter object your Lordship was inclined to believe that it would be better that the draft should commence with a recital of the Articles of the Treaty of Berlin which affected the Public Act (Articles XLV, XLVI, XLVII, LII, LIII, LIV, LV, and LVI), and that the Supplemental Act should contain a general declaration that the Public Act should henceforth be read as modified by those Articles of the Treaty, and that Roumania acceded to the said Articles and to the Public Act as modified thereby.

That, for the better comprehension of the questions involved, Sir J. Pauncefote was to inclose a printed collection of the correspondence which had passed on the subject, together with a collection of the Treaties and other public Instruments having regard to the navigation of the Danube. That Sir J. Pauncefote was further to forward a despatch received from Sir John Stokes, formerly Her Majesty's Commissioner at Galatz, containing his observations on the draft Supplemental Act. That the insertion, as suggested by Sir J. Stokes, of a provision to modify Article 12 of the Act of the 2nd November, 1865, and to assert thereby the permanent character of the Regulations made by the European Commission, would undoubtedly be advantageous, but unless it could be done without raising opposition in the Commission your Lordship would not be inclined to insist upon it, the recital of the Articles of the Treaty of Berlin being sufficient, in your Lordship's opinion, to show that the formation of a Riverain Commission to draw up fresh Regulations was no longer contemplated.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the sufficiency of the proposed Supplemental Act, and as to the expediency of the additions suggested above, or any others which might occur to us. That your Lordship also would be glad to receive our opinion as to the form of ratification of the Act, in regard to which there were some remarks in Colonel Siborne's despatch No. 19 of the 18th ultimo.

That as the discussion of the draft would come on at Galatz on the 9th instant, your Lordship proposed to instruct Colonel Siborne, by telegraph, that he might accept the principles of a Supplemental Act, subject to possible modifications of detail in M. Herbette's draft which Her Majesty's Government might have to suggest.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Not necessary to recite Articles of Treaty of Berlin. Declaration for Act to be read as modified by Treaty sufficient.

That, in our opinion, the recital of the Articles of the Treaty of Berlin which may affect the Public Act is unnecessary, and may lead to discussion and consequent delay; and we think a general declaration that the Public Act shall be read as modified by the Treaty of Berlin, without setting out the particular Articles, will be more convenient.

Provision as to permanent character of Regulations.

Colonel Siborne may properly be instructed to suggest the insertion of the provision suggested by Sir J. Stokes if he has reason to believe that provision can be made a part of the Supplemental Act. If serious opposition is raised to this provision, Colonel Siborne can withdraw the proposal.

1879

Form of ratification of Act by Conference.

The form of ratification pointed out in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 14th November, 1878, namely, that the Commission should propose the amendments or modifications, and that these should be sanctioned by the Powers and subsequently ratified by a Conference of Plenipotentiaries, seems to us to be the best method of obtaining a ratification.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received May 30.)

Temple, May 30, 1879.

My Lord,

Possession of liquorice roots near Smyrna. MacAndrews, Forbes, and Co. v. Heracles Varipati, a Greek.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd February last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence, as marked in the margin,* relating to a dispute between an English firm named MacAndrews, Forbes, and Co., and Heracles Varipati, a Greek subject, regarding the possession of some liquorice roots in the neighbourhood of Smyrna. The facts of the case are stated in Consul Reade's letter to the Governor-General of Aidin (Consul Reade's No. 58, Inclosure 3).

Greek Minister maintains local Turkish Court has no jurisdiction between two foreigners.

That it would be seen that the British firm proceeded in the Local Turkish Court against the Greek subject to recover possession of the roots, and the position taken up by the Greek Minister in his note verbale to the Porte is that such proceedings were invalid, the Local Court having no jurisdiction to entertain such a suit when both parties were foreigners.

British Consul-General says Consular Court cannot decide questions of real property.

That, on the other hand, it was maintained by Her Majesty's Consul-General at Constantinople that the main point to be decided being the question whether the English firm were in legal possession of the land from which the roots were taken, the local Turkish Court was the proper authority to decide the case, as the capitulations did not give a jurisdiction to the Consular Court to decide questions regarding real property.

That it would seem, however, from Consul Reade's despatch, that, although the English firm had had to prove that they were owners of certain lands, the case really involved no question of title to land, but only the issue whether the roots had been taken from land not denied to be the property of the British firm, or from other land.

That the suit having been brought to recover the possession of the roots, and not in respect of any interest in land, it appeared to your Lordship difficult to contend that the case came within the provisions of the Turkish Law of 1867 and the Protocol of the 28th July, 1868 (see Hertslet's Treaties with Turkey, sent herewith, pp. 73-76), and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on that point, and as to the instructions which should be sent to Sir Henry Layard on the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No question of landed property.

That, in our opinion, there is no question relative to landed property in this case.

Police should restore roots to British firm on their giving security to answer any civil claim.

There is considerable difficulty in getting at the facts which led to the police taking the roots into their custody; but on the assumption that the police took possession of the roots as stolen property, we concur in the course suggested by Sir Julian Pauncefote, that the police should restore the roots to the British firm on security being given by the firm to answer any civil claim, and that this course should be vigorously supported, and instructions to that effect be given to Sir Henry Layard.

Kustendji Railway Company.

Effect of cession of territory on immovable property and nationality of inhabitants.

THE argument as to the effect of a cession of territory by Treaty on the rights of inhabitants does not appear to me to apply. There can be no doubt that if territory is ceded as an act of state by one nation to another the nationality of those in the ceded territory is changed without their consent, and there is no doubt also that if in a similar case immovable property of someone in the ceded territory had got into the hands of his own Government, he would have to pursue his remedy for it against the new Government. This is from the necessity of the case, and because the immovable property passed into the hands of the new Government.

Existing money claims do not pass with the territory ceded.

Unless all parties agree.

Roumania takes place of Porte from time of transfer.

2. But it is quite different as to the case of a money claim or demand. If such a claim or demand existed against the old government, and was in process of litigation, or was actually constituted against them, their liability would continue unless it was handed over in express words, and unless the person having the claim assented. There would have to be a "novation" of the debt, and in the novation all the three parties concerned must concur. In the present case none of these things occurred. There was no assent by the Kustendji Railway to the transfer of the claim, and I think it clear that the 51st section puts Roumania in the place of the Porte merely from the time of transfer.

Roumania not bound by award, being no party to the arbitration.

3. It does not appear that the Roumanian Government have indicated any intention of accepting the liability. If they were willing to accept the liability the railway company possibly might be satisfied. The Porte says it gave notice to the arbitrators not to go on with the arbitration from the time of the Treaty, and it contends that the proceedings from that time were coram non judice. On the other hand, the Roumanian Government will probably say that it never became a party to the arbitration, and that the award is worth nothing because made behind its back.

If Roumania declines to admit claim of the Company, she is justified by Treaty, and it must be pressed against Porte.

4. I think, under the circumstances, the best thing would be to ascertain from the Roumanian Government whether it admits that the claim of the Kustendji Company must be satisfied by Roumania. If it does the Kustendji Company will probably be satisfied with the liability of Roumania; but if it does not, I think its refusal to admit the claim will be justified by the language of the 51st Article, and that in that event the claim should be pressed against the Porte.

My Lord,

Danube. European Commission. Jurisdiction over Kilia branch.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 29th May last, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us therewith, by direction of your Lordship, correspondence relative to a declaration made by the Russian Delegate in the European Commission of the Danube, tending to call in question the jurisdiction of the Commission over the Kilia branch of that river.

That the exact terms of the statement would be found in the procès-verbal inclosed in the despatch from Colonel Siborne, the British Commissioner, No. 23, Confidential, of the 3rd instant.

That it would be seen that the Austrian Government had requested to be informed of the view of Her Majesty's Government on the subject, and that it seemed probable that some decision by the Powers signatory of the Treaty of Berlin might eventually be required.

That your Lordship requested, therefore, that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion upon the question which had thus been raised.

That the papers referred to in Sir J. Stokes' and Colonel Siborne's despatches were forwarded therewith, and that Lord Tenterden was also to inclose a collection of the Treaties and public documents relating to the navigation of the Danube, in case we should wish to consult the wording of any particular stipulation.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we entirely agree with the observations of Sir John Stokes on the Austro-Hungarian "Avant-Projet," and the procès-verbal. (See Sir J. Stokes' despatch, the 18th May, 1879.)

Rights of the Commission should be maintained.

The rights of the Commission over the Kilia mouth of the river should, in our opinion, be strictly, as they may probably be under the Treaties of Paris and Berlin, maintained, and especially the right of veto against works which would affect the general régime of the river, or the navigation of other branches of the Danube.

Austrian "Avant-Projet."

It may be sufficient to inform the Austrian Government that, whilst Her Majesty's Government cannot support the rights of the Commission to the full extent claimed in the "Avant-Projet," Her Majesty's Government was prepared to maintain, within proper limits, the rights of the Commission over the Kilia branch.

And Colonel Siborne may, if necessary, be instructed to the same effect.

Bishop of Jerusalem. Licence for consecration of Reverend J. Barclay.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 14th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the draft of a licence to enable the Archbishop of Canterbury to consecrate the Rev. Joseph Barclay as Bishop of the Church of England in Jerusalem, and assigning the provinces of Syria, Chaldæa, Egypt, and Abyssinia as the limits within which the said Rev. Joseph Barclay might exercise spiritual jurisdiction over the Ministers of British congregations of the Church of England, and over such other Protestant congregations as might be desirous of placing themselves under his authority, subject to such alterations in respect to the limits of the jurisdiction so to be exercised as might hereafter be made by Her Majesty's authority, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the same into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote inclosed, for our information, the communications which passed between the Foreign Office and the Law Officers of the Crown in the months of November and December 1841, on the occasion of the consecration of the first Bishop of Jerusalem under Act 5 Vict., cap. 6.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was also directed to acquaint us that the draft licence submitted for our consideration was drawn up in terms similar to the licence which was granted to the Archbishop of Canterbury when the late Samuel Gobat was consecrated Bishop of Jerusalem in June 1846, with the exception that the words "Church of England" had been substituted for "United Church of England and Ireland."

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Memorandum by the Lord Chancellor as to Claim of the Rustchuk-Varna Railway against the Porte.

Rustchuk-Varna Railway Company. Whether claim lies against Porte or against Bulgaria.

THIS claim is governed by the Xth Article of the Berlin Treaty, which is specially directed to the Rustchuk-Varna Railway, and differs materially from the LIst Article.

Xth Article of Treaty of Berlin.

2. With regard to the future, the Xth Article provides that Bulgaria takes the place of the Imperial Ottoman Government in its undertakings and obligations towards the Rustchuk-Varna Railway Company, dating from the exchange of the ratifications of the Treaty. The present claim does not arise under this clause, and it is therefore unnecessary to consider whether this clause would substitute, from the date of the Treaty, Bulgaria for the Porte, whether the Railway Company assented or not. In practice it probably would have the effect of substituting Bulgaria, on the principle that the sovereignty of the "solum" on which the railway was constructed was thenceforward to belong to Bulgaria, and all rights and obligations connected with immovable property would follow.

Porte was the Company's debtor before the Treaty, and continues so, unless other arrangement is made by the three parties concerned.

3. But it is the second part of the paragraph which is material to the present claim. It provides that the settlement of previous accounts is reserved for an understanding between the Porte, the Bulgarian Government, and the railway. I understand this to mean that if the Porte, the Bulgarian Government, and the railway, all three, agree that the claims of the Railway Company before the Treaty shall be adjusted on some principle different from the strict principle which ought to be applied to them, they shall be so adjusted; but if no agreement is come to, the strict principle of adjustment will continue. The Porte was the debtor of the Company before the Treaty, and continues that debtor unless the three parties concerned agree that the debt shall be undertaken in whole or in part by some one else.

4. It does not, therefore, appear to me to be any answer for the Porte to say that it will not entertain the claims of the Company because no agreement has been come to between the parties mentioned in the Treaty. That would be tantamount to saying that the claims might never be entertained at all, because the Porte, being one of the three parties concerned, might refuse to enter into any agreement such as is contemplated by the Treaty. If the Porte desires to get rid of any part of its liability for antecedent claims of the Company, it must put itself in motion, and bring about an agreement between the three parties for a substitution of liability. If the Porte does not do this it will, in my opinion, continue liable.

Piracy in the Persian Gulf.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th October last, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us therewith, by direction of your Lordship, a correspondence which had taken place between the Foreign Office and Her Majesty's Embassy at Constantinople, with regard to the recent increase of piracy in the Persian Gulf, and the measures to be taken for its repression.

That it would be seen that the piratical acts complained of had originated chiefly, if not entirely, from the coast of a promontory called El Katr (or Guttur), which had, within recent years, fallen under the jurisdiction of the Porte, and that, notwithstanding repeated representations by Her Majesty's Government, the measures taken by the Turkish authorities to restrain and punish the offenders had been inadequate and ineffectual.

That the history of the question and of the establishment of Turkish jurisdiction on the territory referred to would be found in a printed memorandum in two parts, inclosed in a letter from the India Office of the 17th September, which contained also the proposals of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State for India for dealing with the matter.

That the following brief outline of the case would serve to indicate the point on which your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion :—

Maritime police and protectorate of Trade in Persian Gulf undertaken by England.

That, during the last half-century, England had undertaken the maritime police of the Persian Gulf and the protectorate of its trade, which had, in consequence, enormously increased.

That British steamers plied weekly from one end of the Gulf to the other, and on the faith of the British protectorate, great numbers of Her Majesty's subjects had embarked large capital in that trade and in the pearl fishery. (Memorandum, Part II, pp. 10–14.)

Establishment of Turkish authority on Guttur Coast.

That Treaties had been entered into at various times and still existed with the Ruler of the Island of Bahrein, off the Guttur Coast, and with several of the Arab Chiefs and tribes inhabiting the coast, by which they bound themselves to abstain from acts of aggression by sea upon each other, and the British Government undertook to watch over the peace and to enforce the observance of the Agreements. (See, as to Bahrein, Memorandum, Part I, p. 3, and as to Trucial Chiefs, ibid., p. 6.) But that those Treaties did not concern the mainland. That in 1871 the Turkish Government occupied El Bidaa, on the Guttur Coast, whereby they established their influence and a certain authority and jurisdiction all over that coast, which had, on various occasions, been recognized by Her Majesty's Government. (Memorandum, Part II, p. 36.) That the Government of India were more immediately interested and concerned in the questions under consideration, and that their policy had been to keep clear of any complications which might arise on the mainland (pp. 32 and 36), while maintaining, as far as possible, the exclusive maritime protectorate of the Gulf by Great Britain, (pp. 21, 22, and 27). That the authority of the Turkish Government over the Guttur Coast was of a most shadowy character. That the only spot in their actual occupation was the port of El Bidaa, and that during the summer of 1876 there was a marked increase of piratical acts along the promontory. (Memorandum, Part II, p. 37.) That on the 23rd April, 1876, Sir H. Elliot addressed a formal note to the Porte calling for a full explanation, and asking for compensation in the case of an outrage committed on some Indian subjects of Her Majesty by the Governor of Lahsa, but that to that day neither the one nor the other had been received. (Ibid., p. 37.) That in July 1877 Sir H. Layard called the serious attention of the Turkish Government to the increase of piracy along the Guttur Coast, which had resulted from the extension of its authority in that quarter. (Ibid., p. 41.) But that no redress was obtained, and that in 1878 a succession of piratical outrages occurred which called for a serious consideration of the Turkish position in those parts. (See Particulars, Ibid., p. 43.) That those outrages had continued ever since, as might be seen by the Tabular Statement of Piratical Acts, compiled by Colonel Ross, which formed one of the inclosures in the letter of the Government of India No. 77 of the 23rd June, 1879.

That feeble efforts had been from time to time made by the Turkish authorities to repress those raids and to punish the offenders, but that their measures had been altogether inadequate and had totally failed.

Naval action against pirates within Turkish jurisdiction authorized by Government of India.

That, under those circumstances, instructions were given to Colonel Ross by the Government of India (ibid., p. 48) in February 1879, authorizing naval action against the pirates within Turkish jurisdiction, provided that no expedition should be undertaken on the mainland "beyond reach of the guns of the British vessels."

That the correspondence which took place between the Foreign Office, the Admiralty, and the India Office on the subject of those instructions was briefly recorded at p. 48 of the Memorandum, Part II.

That in May 1879 Sir H. Layard warned the Porte that Her Majesty's Government could not permit a state of things which was a danger to British interests and British commerce, and would be compelled to interpose to put an end to it unless the Turkish Government took measures to do so. (Ibid., p. 49.)

That he again held the same language to the Porte in July 1879. (Ibid., p. 50.) But that all those representations had failed to produce any satisfactory result.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was then to refer us to the proposals of the Government of India for the repression of those outrages, contained at pp. 58–61 of Memorandum, Part II; to the reply of the Foreign Office to those proposals, p. 61; and to the proposals of the Secretary of State for India contained in the inclosed letter from the India Office of the 17th September, 1879.

That the precise point on which, at the present stage of the question, your Lordship desired to be favoured with our opinion was whether, under the circumstances detailed in the inclosed correspondence, and in view of the unwillingness or inability of the Turkish Government to prevent outrages on British subjects and British commerce in the Persian Gulf by piratical bands organized in, and emanating from, territories under their authority and jurisdiction, the case was one in which Her Majesty's Government would be justified in holding that the right of self-preservation was paramount to that of territorial inviolability, and might, consistently with the doctrines of international law on the subject, authorize the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships to pursue the pirates and marauders in question in Turkish waters, and to destroy their strongholds on the Turkish mainland.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, bearing date the 9th October, stating, with reference to his letter of the 4th October, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further letter from the India Office, relative to piracy in the Persian Gulf.

We have also to acknowledge the receipt of a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 25th ultimo, stating that, with reference to Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th October last, relative to the means to be resorted to for the suppression of piracy in the Persian Gulf, he had the honour to forward to us, by direction of your Lordship, copies of two further despatches bearing upon that matter, which had recently been received from the Government of India.

That Lord Tenterden was at the same time to request that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion upon the question submitted to us in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter above referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government cannot pursue pirates in Turkish waters or destroy their strongholds on Turkish mainland.

That, in our opinion, the circumstances stated in these several papers will not justify Her Majesty's Government, consistently with the doctrines of international law, and on the ground of self-preservation, or the inability and unwillingness of the Turkish Government to prevent outrages on British subjects and British commerce in the Persian Gulf, in authorizing the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships, against the wishes of the Turkish Government, to pursue the pirates and marauders in question in Turkish waters, and to destroy their strongholds on the Turkish mainland.

Instructions for British magistrate.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 6th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from the Colonial Office,* inclosing copy of a despatch from the Governor of Newfoundland, relative to the instructions to be given to the magistrate whom it was proposed to appoint at Fortune Bay, in consequence of the recent disputes which occurred between British and United States' fishermen at that place; and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take Sir G. Glover's despatch into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the instructions contained therein were such as might properly be given.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was at the same time to transmit, for convenience of reference, a memorandum, which had been drawn up by Mr. Bergne,† of the Foreign Office, upon the rights of fishing on the coast of Newfoundland acquired by the United States under the Treaty of Washington, together with a copy of a Circular issued by the State Department at Washington on the 28th March, 1856, relative to the observance by United States' fishermen of colonial laws upon the subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Instructions are consistent with Treaty; but better arrange with United States before issuing, to avoid disagreements.

That we are of opinion that the proposed instructions are, in a strict interpretation of the words of the Treaty of Washington, consistent with that Treaty, and so may properly be issued.

But we submit, for your Lordship's and Sir M. H. And we therefore respectfully submit that it would be expedient not to issue the proposed instructions until some communication and agreement on the subject has been come to with the United States' Government.

United States' frigate "Constitution." Application for arrest of, for salvage services.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 28th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the inclosed letter, which had been that day received from the Solicitors who represented the owners, master, and crew of the steam-tug "Admiral," of Cowes.

That it appeared from that letter that a motion was made on the 27th instant in the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice for leave to arrest the United States' frigate "Constitution" and her cargo, in a suit for salvage services rendered to her by the steam-tug "Admiral"; that the Judge ordered the motion to be adjourned until Wednesday, the 29th, and that notice of the motion should in the meanwhile be served on the vessel and on the American Consul.

That it further appeared from that letter that notice had been given to the Foreign Office of those proceedings at the request of the Judge.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a letter from the United States' Minister at this Court, conveying his thanks to the Marine Department of the Board of Trade for their action on learning that the "Constitution" had got ashore, and describing the vessel as the "United States' frigate 'Constitution.'"

That under those circumstances your Lordship entertained no doubt that the "Constitution" was a public vessel of the United States, and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether any action should be taken on behalf of Her Majesty's Government in relation to the pending proceedings, and that he was further to request, as the motion would come on this day, that we should take such steps as we might think advisable in case we deemed it necessary that Her Majesty's Government should be represented in Court.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that no application had been received from the United States' Minister in relation to those proceedings, and that, pending the receipt of our reply, your Lordship did not propose to make any communication to him on the subject.

That, since the above had been written, the accompanying letter from Mr. Welsh had been received.

Propose to disavow act and apologize.

That the correspondence relating to that case was referred for the consideration of the Legal Adviser of the Treasury on Slave Trade matters, whose Report was inclosed, from which it would be seen that Mr. Rothery was of opinion that the conduct of Captain Earle in the matter could not be justified; and that it was proposed, therefore, on the part of Her Majesty's Government, to disavow his conduct and to express regret at his proceedings.

That before doing so, however, your Lordship would wish to know whether we concurred in the view taken of that matter by the Legal Adviser of the Treasury, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would be good enough to take the case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our early convenience with our opinion thereupon.

Annex.

Report.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

May it please your Lordships,

Report by Mr. Rothery.

IN obedience to your Lordship's commands I have perused and considered the documents herewith returned, consisting of—

Letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, the Assistant Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, dated the 22nd February last, forwarding two despatches from Dr. Kirk, Her Britannic Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar, dated the 28th December and 2nd January last respectively, with their inclosures, reporting the circumstances under which the United States' barque "Laconia" had been boarded in the harbour of Zanzibar by a boat from Her Majesty's ship "London," on suspicion of her having slaves on board.

Further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 27th of the same month, forwarding a letter from the Admiralty, with inclosures, from Rear-Admiral Corbet, the Commander-in-chief on the East Coast of Africa, on the same subject.

These papers have been forwarded to your Lordships, with a request that they might be submitted to me, as your Lordship's Legal Adviser on Slave Trade matters, for my opinion as to the action taken by the Commander of the "London" in this matter, and generally for any observations that I may have to offer thereon.

The circumstances of the case appear to have been as follows:—On the evening of the 26th December last Captain Hamilton Earle, of Her Majesty's ship "London," having received information, derived it would seem in the first instance from one of the crew, that the United States' barque "Laconia," a whaler belonging to New Bedford, Massachusetts, had slaves on board, dispatched Lieutenant Johnson in one of the boats to search her. On going on board, and finding that Captain Gifford, the master, was on shore, Lieutenant Johnson went to his hotel, leaving Sub-Lieutenant Cornwell Legh in charge of the vessel. At Lieutenant Johnson's request the Master returned with him to the "Laconia," and the crew having been mustered three negroes were picked out as having been shipped at Johanna. On examining them, with the assistance of an Interpreter, Lieutenant Johnson seems to have come to the conclusion that one of them had been purchased by the master, and that the other two had been kidnapped from the shore; and finding that they were not entered on the ship's articles, he told the master that he should take them to the "London." Whether or not the master of the "Laconia" gave his assent to their removal appears to be open to some doubt; according to Lieutenant Johnson, the master said that he had no objection, provided that Lieutenant Johnson would be responsible for their safe custody; on the other hand, the master says that he told Lieutenant Johnson that, if he took them away, he did it on his own responsibility. It is easy to see how the mistake arose. On the following morning the negroes were examined by Captain Earle, and repeated, so we are told, the statements which they had made to Lieutenant Johnson, namely, that one of them had been purchased by the master, and that the two others had been kidnapped from the shore whilst fishing there.

In the meantime, however, the master of the "Laconia" had communicated with Mr. Hathorne, the United States' Consul, and the latter thereupon addressed an official letter to Dr. Kirk, requesting that the three negroes might be at once given up. Some communications then passed between Dr. Kirk and Captain Earle on the subject, and very soon afterwards Captain Earle returned the negroes to the "Laconia," taking at the same time a receipt for them from one of the officers of the ship. On their return they appear to have been taken by the master before the United States' Consul, by whom they were examined, and a copy of the statements which were then made, both by the negroes and by the master and officers of the "Laconia," was forwarded by the United States' Consul to Dr. Kirk, and will be found amongst the papers.

According to the statements made before the United States' Consul, it appears that in the month of July last Captain Gifford was staying with a Dr. Wilson, an American planter in Johanna, when he remarked a slave in irons, and on Dr. Wilson offering him the slave, saying that he could do nothing with him, Captain Gifford, who was at the time short of hands, at once accepted the offer. The slave was accordingly sent down to the beach in charge of one of Dr. Wilson's slaves, and his irons having been struck off by the blacksmith, he waded off voluntarily to the "Laconia's" boat, and was taken on board. As to the two other negroes, it was said that they were fishing on the beach, when the master of the "Laconia" spoke to them, and told them that if they would go off with him he would give them clothes and tobacco; that they thereupon got into the boat, and were covered up with sails, to prevent their being seen by any people on the shore, and were then carried on board the ship. They had all, we were told, come on board the vessel voluntarily, and without any force being employed for the purpose, and had remained in her ever since, working as sailors, and being treated in every respect like the rest of the crew, the captain stating that their wages, or share of the venture (for in whalers the seamen take a share of the captures), would date from the 10th July, when they first came on board. He accounted for their names not being on the Articles by saying that there was no United States' Consul at Johanna, and that it had been his intention to put them on the Articles as soon as he got to a port where there was a United States' Consul. The master's statement in this respect was confirmed by Mr. Hathorne, who said that the day after the arrival of the "Laconia" the master had told him that he had three negroes on board, and had requested him to ship them, and that he (the Consul) had intended to do so.

It seems to have been thought that the statement made by the negroes to the United States' Consul differs essentially from that originally made by them to the officers of the "London;" but after making all due allowance for the different light in which these transactions would be regarded by them, I confess that it appears to me that there is not very much difference between the two accounts. It is admitted that one of the negroes was a slave down to the moment that he was transferred to Captain Gifford. The slave, no doubt, had his shackles struck off before going on board; but it is clear, from the statement which he made to the United States' Consul, that he considered that he had been sold to the master, and that he was his slave. The fact that he voluntarily waded through the water and got into the boat in my opinion proves nothing; the negro probably thought that he had no option in the matter but to do what he was told. Moreover, he was leaving a master from whom he does not seem to have received much kindness, and it is not likely that he would have shown any unwillingness to go on board. As to the other two negroes, according to the master of the "Laconia," he offered them clothes and tobacco to go, and they went voluntarily on board; according to the statement said to have been made by the negroes to the officer of the "London," they were forcibly taken on board. Whether there was more force or more persuasion used to get them to go in the boat it would probably not be very easy to say; the master being short-handed was anxious to get them, and the negroes, too, were probably not very unwilling to go, with the prospect before them of receiving clothes and tobacco. It must also not be forgotten that the master appears not to have understood the language which these negroes spoke, nor did they understand his. On the other hand, we are told by the United States' Consul that he found that all these negroes knew very little of the language in which their statements to the officers of the "London" had apparently been made. It may therefore readily be understood that there might be some little confusion as to the circumstances under which they had gone on board the vessel.

But however this may be, it does not appear that the negroes at any time expressed any wish to leave the "Laconia." According to the statements made before the United States' Consul, they were ready to go in the ship and to be discharged either in St. Helena, or at New Bedford, Massachusetts, and, indeed, anywhere except at Johanna. There is no suggestion that they had not been fairly treated on board the "Laconia," or that they wished to go on board the "London" or be landed at Zanzibar, and I confess that I think that there is much force in the remark made by Mr. Hathorne, that it is strange, if Captain Earle believed them to be slaves, that he should have returned them to the "Laconia." I should have thought that, if he had believed them to be slaves, or that they were desirous of leaving the "Laconia," he would either have handed them over to Dr. Kirk, or, at all events, to the United States' Consul, for him to deal with them as he thought best, and it is greatly to be regretted that this was not done.

Such, then, being the facts, questions of considerable importance have been raised, and to which it is necessary that I should call your Lordship's attention. I pass over the minor objections which were taken by the United States' Consul, namely, that an armed officer of the "London" was left in charge of the "Laconia" whilst Lieutenant Johnson went on shore to see the master, and that the negroes were taken out of the ship without the master's consent, for if Captain Earle was justified in detaining the vessel these acts would not have been illegal or improper. As to the omission of the boarding officer to go to the American Consulate for the purpose of inspecting the ship's papers, and making the required entry in the log-book, Admiral Corbet has already called Captain Earle's attention to it; but this, also, is a matter of comparatively minor importance. The great question to be considered is, whether Captain Earle had any right whatever to interfere with the "Laconia" whilst she was lying in the harbour of Zanzibar. The United States' Consul thinks that he had no such right, grounding his objection, first, upon the words of the Treaty between the United States and Great Britain for the suppression of the Slave Trade; and secondly, on the fact that as the ship's papers had been deposited at the United States' Consulate, the jurisdiction over the ship rested with himself alone.

As to meaning of Slave Trade Treaty. Right of search within limits of a port, &c.

And first, as regards the Treaty. By Article I of the Treaty of 1862 it is provided that "the right of search shall not be exercised by a vessel of war of either Contracting Party within the limits of a settlement or port, or within the territorial waters of the other party." The United States' Consul contends that the object of this clause was to forbid the exercise of the right of search within the limits of any settlement or port, whereas our officers seem to think that it forbade the exercise of the right only within the limits of a settlement or port of the other party. The question is, perhaps, not quite free from difficulty, but on the whole I am disposed to agree with the United States' Consul. If we accept the construction put upon the sentence by our own officers, it appears to me that the words "within the limits of a settlement or port" are mere surplusage, for, in the case of a ship afloat, the words "territorial waters" would include "a settlement or port." Moreover, if it had been intended to allow the right of search to be exercised within the limits of any settlement or port other than a settlement or port of the other party, the second "within" should have been omitted, and the sentence should have run as follows: "The right of search shall not be exercised within the limits of a 'settlement or port,' or the territorial waters of the other party." The question, as I have said, is perhaps not quite free from difficulty; at the same time, I am disposed to think that, if the matter came before a Court of Law either in this country or in the United States, the view taken by the United States' Consul would probably be maintained.

Jurisdiction of United States' Consul at Zanzibar.

The second point taken by the United States' Consul, namely, that the fact of the ship's papers being at the United States' Consulate would vest the jurisdiction over the vessel in the Consul, would, of course, depend on the Treaties existing between the United States and Zanzibar. Primarily the jurisdiction over all vessels in Zanzibar waters would belong to the Sultan of Zanzibar, but it may be the Sultan has granted the same rights to the United States' Consul over United States' vessels as he has to Her Majesty's Consul over British vessels. If so, there would be some grounds for Mr. Hathorne's objections.

But whether this be so or not, it appears to me that it was a very ill-advised act on the part of Captain Earle to interfere in any way with a United States' vessel in a foreign port when there was a United States' Consul actually on the spot. I entirely agree with Dr. Kirk, that if Captain Earle, instead of sending an officer and an armed party on board the "Laconia," had intimated, either directly or through Dr. Kirk, to the United States' Consul, that he had reason to believe that there were slaves on board the "Laconia," he would have thrown the onus of acting in the matter upon the United States' Consul, and the question would then have been investigated, and the witnesses examined probably in the presence of the British Consul-General, and there would have been no conflict of evidence, no alleged infringement of Treaty, and no offence given to the authorities and citizens of a friendly State. And, if Captain Earle had thought that the United States' Consul showed a desire to screen the master, and that thus the ends of justice would be defeated, he might have waited until the vessel had left the port, and then, if he had considered it a matter of sufficient importance, he might have seized her in the high seas, and either have sent her in charge of a prize crew to New York or Key West for adjudication, or have handed her over to some American cruizer had he fallen in with one, and had the Commander thereof been willing to accept the charge.

Fortunately, however, Captain Earle did not go the length of seizing and sending in this vessel for adjudication. Had he done so, there can be little doubt what the result would have been, for, as he justly observes, the only witnesses would have been the crew and the negroes, and they would have had a direct interest in exculpating the vessel, inasmuch as, in the event of her condemnation, their shares of the produce would have been liable to forfeiture as well as the ship. Moreover, it appears to me very doubtful whether any Court would have been justified in condemning a vessel of carrying on the Slave Trade because she had on board amongst the crew one negro who had been a slave, and who had been given by his master to the captain, and two others who had been inveigled on board the vessel to assist in navigating her, the vessel being at the time short-handed; and as we are told that the vessel had a valuable cargo of oil on board, the produce of her fishing, the restitution of the vessel and cargo, if accompanied with costs and damages, would have been a very serious matter indeed.

I am not aware that any representations have yet been made by the American Government on the subject. Fortunately, however, no material injury was done to the vessel or cargo or to any one on board, and it is probable that an apology for the offence offered is all that will be necessary.

And should your Lordships concur in the observations which I have ventured to make, it will be proper that a copy of this Report should be forwarded to the Foreign Office for the Marquis of Salisbury's consideration, and, at the same time, the inclosures which have been forwarded to your Lordships in original should be returned, as requested.

All which is most humbly submitted to your Lordships' wisdom.

My Lord,

Notter and Co. Assumption of character of United States' Consular Agents.

(In connection with "crimping" cases.)

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that, in connection with a correspondence on the subject of crimping, the attention of Her Majesty's Government had been called by the United States' Legation in London, in the letters therewith transmitted to us, to the assumption by Messrs. Notter and Co. of the character of United States' Consular officers.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take that matter into our early consideration, and report whether, under the circumstances set forth in those papers, Messrs. Notter and Co. were amenable to the criminal law for falsely representing themselves as United States' Consular officers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No offence against law to personate a foreign Consul, unless property is thereby obtained.

That it is not a criminal offence against the law of this country to personate a foreign Consul, unless by so doing the personator obtains or attempts to obtain property, or induces some one to make a valuable security.

We have, &c.

Closing of port of Puerto Cabello by Venezuelan Government, it being in hands of insurgents.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st March ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas (No. 8 of the 16th January, 1879) relative to an order recently issued by the Venezuelan Government prohibiting all intercourse with the port of Puerto Cabello, in consequence of that place having fallen into the hands of a revolutionary force, and requiring all vessels touching at La Guayra with merchandise or correspondence for Puerto Cabello to discharge their goods and deliver up their letters at the first-named port.

That we would see from the Reports of Sir Travers Twiss, then Her Majesty's Advocate-General, of the 1st July and 13th August, 1870, which would be found at pp. 177 and 179 of the accompanying printed volume, that a similar question arose in 1870, and that Her Majesty's Government were then advised that they were bound in comity to respect the Decrees of the recognized Government of Venezuela for the regulation of the commerce of British subjects with any of the ports of that Republic, unless those ports were not only not in the possession of, but also not under the dominion of, the Republic.

That as, according to that opinion, the course to be followed depended in a great measure on nice questions of fact, he was to inclose the recent despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Carácas, showing the present state of affairs in Venezuela, and to request that we would take these papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Mr. Bunch for his guidance.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Government must judge as to necessity of closing its ports.

That circumstances may justify a Government in closing a particular port. The Government, in whose country the port is, is the proper judge of the circumstances which may make the closing of the port necessary or expedient.

We assume that Puerto Cabello is closed to the ships of all nations.

Her Majesty's Government cannot remonstrate.

We are, therefore, of opinion that Mr. Bunch may be instructed to remonstrate no further with the Venezuela Government.

We have, &c.

Insurrection in Venezuela. German proposals relative to.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 10th March ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 1st of that month, he had the honour to forward therewith a memorandum, communicated by the German Ambassador in this country, having reference to the line of conduct to be observed by the foreign Representatives towards the contending parties in Venezuela, which memorandum, it was requested, might be taken into consideration, together with the other papers on that subject then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the protest or remonstrance of Mr. Bunch cannot properly be further carried out.

De facto Government must be recognized, and its laws respected.

So long as the several States of South America are independent, foreign nations respecting this independence are called upon to recognize the de facto Government in those States as representing the nation, and to respect the laws and regulations, however embarrassing to themselves, which the de facto Government, for its own preservation, may think it proper to enact.

As to closing of Puerto Cabello.

In the present case, the Government has thought fit to prohibit the access to the port of Puerto Cabello, which is in the occupation of an insurrectionary armed force.

Insurgents might otherwise levy customs duties, &c.

So far as the Government of Venezuela is concerned, this armed force, if access to the port were allowed, might receive all the customs and other duties to the direct loss of the Government.

And might also seize and detain, or use or destroy, the ships and property of the subjects of foreign countries coming into the port to the indirect loss of the Government of Venezuela, which might be called upon to pay heavy indemnities, and to the immediate damage of the foreign owners.

The alternative, if the right of the de facto Government be not admitted, suggested in the German memorandum, to "treat the party in insurrection as belligerent, without expressly recognizing it as such from the beginning," seems to us inadmissible.

Cannot recognize one party as belligerent.

There cannot be one belligerent; if, therefore, the insurrectionary party is declared a belligerent, the de facto Government must also be belligerent. The status belli at once exists, with all its consequences, both in territorial waters and on the high seas; a state of things would thus be brought about more prejudicial, as it seems to us, than the temporary closing of one or more ports.

Presume port is closed to all nations.

Our opinion upon the legal question, whether the Venezuelan Government has the right to close the port of Puerto Cabello, assumes that the port is closed to all nations.

We have, &c.

REPORTS BY THE LAW OFFICERS OF THE CROWN: 1880.

Argentine Confederation.

No. 1.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 18.)

My Lord, Temple, September 17, 1880.

Arrest of the British vessels "Plato" and "Bessel" on the River Plate, on suspicion of carrying arms for insurgents.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 20th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatches from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres relative to the arrest and detention by the Argentine authorities of two British steamers, named the "Plato" and "Bessel," on the River Plate.*

That the "Plato" and "Bessel" were both passenger steamers belonging to the Liverpool, Brazil, and River Plate Steam Navigation Company. That the facts of the case were stated in the complaint of the agent of the Company, and in the depositions of the Captains of the two vessels, which form inclosures in Mr. Egerton's despatch No. 53. That both vessels were bound for Buenos Ayres. That the "Plato" was arrested by the Argentine gun-boat "within about 20 miles of the Buenos Ayres roads" and "7 miles off Ensenada, on the Argentine shore."

That the "Bessel" was arrested by the gun-boat after her arrival in the roads. That a state of civil war existed at the time, and the object of those proceedings was stated to have been to prevent the clandestine introduction into Buenos Ayres of arms which the Local Government had reason to believe would be found on board those steamers. That Mr. Egerton, in his despatch No. 7, transmitted a chart of that part of the River Plate in which the incident occurred, and it would be observed that the stoppage of the "Plato" occurred in the only navigable channel of the river for such steamers, and on the side of the thalweg nearest to the Argentine coast. That on the 7th May Mr. Egerton addressed a note to the Argentine Minister for Foreign Affairs on the subject of those complaints, a copy of which was contained in his despatch No. 56.

That the reply of Señor Gonzalez, which would be found in Mr. Egerton's No. 6 of the 26th May, justified the action of the Argentine Commander of the gun-boat, on the ground that the exceptional course complained of was reasonable under the circumstances, and that the Argentine Government, being supreme, could order measures of vigilance within its fluvial territory, provided they were rendered necessary in the interests of the Exchequer, or on behalf of public order, which it was their province to maintain.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions that should be sent to Mr. Egerton on the subject.

We were also honoured with Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 29th July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the Admiralty,* inclosing a Report by their Lordships' hydrographer on the question of territorial jurisdiction in the lower part of the River Plate.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Cannot express a positive opinion as to legality of arrest.

That, as it appears doubtful whether the "Plato" was within the fluvial territory of the Argentine State at the time she was stopped by the gun-boat, we are not in a position to express a positive opinion whether there is any ground for complaint of the vessel being so stopped; but we think the position taken up by the Argentine Minister in this respect should not be allowed to pass without protest. At the same time, it is to be observed that the real damage for which redress is claimed by the owners of the vessels arose in the case of the "Plato" as well as of the "Bessel" from what subsequently took place in the roads, viz., their being forbidden for a time to hold communication with the shore. It can hardly, we think, be disputed that the vessels were then within Argentine territory. And, as a state of civil war existed, we think the Argentine Government were justified within their own waters in taking measures to prevent the clandestine introduction of arms into their country. If, therefore, the Argentine authorities had reasonable grounds for believing that the vessels in question were intending to land arms, destined for the use of the insurgents, and interfered to no greater extent than was necessary to prevent that object being accomplished, we think that in so acting they were within their rights. But upon these matters of fact and intention our information is very scanty.

Proposed instructions to Mr. Egerton.

We think Mr. Egerton may properly be instructed, in answer to Señor Gonzalez's reply, to insist that no facts had been stated sufficient to show that the vessels were about to land arms for the insurgents, and that the Argentine Government were therefore not warranted in preventing the vessels of a friendly Power from discharging their cargoes and landing their passengers.

Further information necessary to determine question as to compensation for stoppage.

The determination of the question, whether the owners are entitled to any compensation on account of the stoppage of the vessels, must depend upon further information which may be obtained bearing upon the points we have above referred to.

We have, &c.

Opinion of Dr. Deane.

Disagreement with above opinion.

I do not concur with the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General in their opinion; I therefore have the honour to report—

Detention of vessels unjustifiable, and loss caused by it should be made good.

That, in my opinion, the detention of the "Plato" and "Bessel" was unjustifiable. The letter of Señor Gonzalez to Mr. Egerton shows that a similar course may be followed with respect to other vessels, and Mr. Egerton may, therefore, be properly instructed to urge upon the Government at Buenos Ayres the necessity of providing that such proceedings be not again taken; and that the loss, if any, occasioned by the detention of both or either of these two vessels, be made good.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received January 24.)

My Lord, Temple, January 22, 1880.

Austrian claim to include Bosnia and Herzegovina in General Tariff system.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 6th ultimo, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the papers and documents* with reference to the claim of the Austro-Hungarian Government to include the Turkish provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina in the General Tariff system of the Empire.

That the Treaty of Berlin, as we were aware, provided by Article XXV that those provinces be occupied and administered by Austria-Hungary.

That it was asserted in the letter of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce of the 29th September last, that, for the reasons therein stated, the effect of the contemplated measure would be most disastrous to British trade, and that we should observe that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Vienna, in his despatch No. 64, Commercial, of November, stated that the Turkish Ambassador had protested against it as a violation of existing Treaties.

That in the same despatch Mr. Egerton reported that the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs supported the measure on the ground that Austria-Hungary was invited by the Powers to occupy and administer those provinces; that the settlement of the Tariff was a detail of administration; and that Austria-Hungary could not have consented to administer the provinces on the Turkish system, though many parts of it might have been settled by Treaty.

That Baron Schwegel observed also that, as regarded Cyprus, Her Majesty's Government were not bound by the Capitulations.

That, on that point, Mr. Lister was to state that in Cyprus the Capitulations had only been departed from in matters of Consular jurisdiction and such other Consular privileges as were incompatible with the administration of the island by Great Britain or by any other European Power.

That to that extent foreign Governments had acquiesced in a departure from the Capitulations in Cyprus.

That Her Majesty's Government, by the Supplementary Agreement of the 14th August, 1878,† obtained from the Sultan a Declaration of the rights and powers vested in Great Britain under the Cyprus Convention, and that the Declaration conferred on them the right to make Treaties with foreign Powers in Her Majesty's name concerning the general government and administration of the island.

That the rights of Austria-Hungary over Bosnia and Herzegovina were governed entirely by Article XXV of the Treaty of Berlin.

That Mr. Lister was to refer us to the inclosure in Mr. Egerton's despatch No. 58, Commercial, of the 10th October, which contained a statement as to the existing rates of duties imposed on British goods entering Bosnia, and from which we should observe that no change in the rate of duties had been made since the Austrian occupation.

That, in view of the impending extension of the General Tariff system of Austria-Hungary to the provinces in question, Mr. Lister was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the protest of the Turkish Ambassador at Vienna was well founded, and, if so, as to the grounds upon which Her Majesty's Government may take exception to the proposed measure.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Such claim not in accordance with Treaty of Berlin.

That, by the Treaty of Berlin, the sovereignty over Bosnia and Herzegovina is not transferred to Austria-Hungary, but only the right to occupy and administer these provinces is accorded to that Power.

1880

The question submitted to us must, we think, be solved by reference to the intention of the High Contracting Powers when they agreed to the insertion in the Treaty of the provision that the provinces "shall be occupied and administered."

The expressions referred to are exceedingly vague and indefinite, but, standing alone, they certainly do not (in our view) import a right to exercise legislative power for the purpose of abrogating Treaties which have been entered into with foreign States by the sovereign Power of the territory occupied; nor do we find anything in the context of the Treaty which leads us to the conclusion that it was the intention of the Contracting Parties that the words in question should bear such a construction. On the contrary, we think it is to be assumed that had it been the intention that Austro-Hungary should be invested with the right to deprive the other Powers, parties to the Treaty, of privileges conferred upon them by virtue of Treaties entered into with the Porte, such intention would have been explicitly indicated.

Turkish protest well founded.

Such being our view of the construction which the Treaty of Berlin ought to receive, we are of opinion that the protest of the Turkish Ambassador is well founded.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we concur with the draft of the despatch which your Lordship proposes to send to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Munich. We would, however, observe that we think the insertion of the words "for which purpose application should be made by Baron R. de Grainger to the Secretary of State of the Home Department" is unnecessary, and may have a misleading effect.

Sir,

With reference to your despatch No. 49 of the 20th ultimo, inclosing a letter which you have received from the Bavarian Foreign Office, requesting you to obtain from Her Majesty's Government a declaration respecting the nationality of Baron Robert de Grainger, I have to inform you that certificates of British nationality are not granted in this country otherwise than under section 7 (paragraph 4) of "The Naturalization Act, 1870" [for which purpose application should be made by Baron Robert de Grainger to the Secretary of State for the Home Department]. I may state, however, that by force of the Statute 4 Geo. II, cap. 21, and 13 Geo. III, cap. 21, Baron Robert de Grainger is entitled to claim the status of a British subject, though he and his father were born out of Her Majesty's dominions, if his grandfather by the father's side was a natural-born British subject, and provided the British nationality of Baron Robert, or of his father or grandfather, has not at any time been forfeited by voluntary naturalization in a foreign State within the meaning of section 6 of "The Naturalization Act, 1870."

But Baron Robert de Grainger is not entitled to claim British nationality in Bavaria, the country of his birth, if by the law of that country he is deemed a subject thereof.

I inclose a copy of the Report of the Royal Commissioners for inquiring into the laws of naturalization and allegiance, which you might furnish to the Bavarian Minister, and his attention should be drawn to the Foreign Office instructions to Consul Dale of the 20th December, 1862, printed at page 60.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd March last, stating that, with reference to that part of our Report of the 4th November, 1874, which related to the issue of special marriage warrants under the Consular Marriage Act (12 and 13 Vict., cap. 68) to enable Consular officers abroad to perform marriages between parties who have resided outside of the district of the Consul, as defined in his appointment, Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to acquaint us that your Lordship learned that it would be highly desirable to grant such special warrant to the Vice-Consul at Ostend, inconvenience having been felt by persons residing in the neighbourhood of that town from the present arrangement, which precluded him from celebrating marriages under his warrant between parties who had not resided within the town.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to transmit to us a form of special warrant which it was proposed to issue to the Vice-Consul, as well as the form of warrant which was ordinarily issued to Consuls, and he was to request that we would take the matter into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the special form of warrant was such as could be properly issued under the authority of the 19th section of the Consular Marriage Act in that particular instance, and whether the same form could be issued in other cases, when it was shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of State that there was a necessity for the enlargement, for the purposes of the Act, of any other Consular district.

Temple, August 3, 1880.

My Lord,

Mr. G. Horsley's Case (Firm of E. S. Jacobson and Co.). Sale of British steamer "Sophy Jobson." As to rights of English mortgagees.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd July last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter, with its inclosures,* from Mr. G. Horsley, the surviving partner of the firm of E. S. Jobson and Co., relative to the sale of the British steamer "Sophy Jobson," in Belgium, at the suit of creditors, and to the refusal of the Belgian Courts to recognize the rights of the registered English mortgagees to priority in the distribution of the proceeds.

That some correspondence on that case passed between the Foreign Office and Her Majesty's Minister at Brussels in 1876, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a despatch from Sir J. S. Lumley, containing the opinion of a competent Belgian lawyer as to the Belgian law applicable to this case.

That we should perceive from that opinion, and also from the Judgments of the Courts, that the law of Belgium did not recognize the mortgage of chattels, and that the Courts declined to apply the lex loci contractus in favour of the mortgagee of a British ship.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that the case of the "Warbler" (Simpson v. Fogo, 29 L. J., Chan. 657) was an instance of a similar case in which the rights of the mortgagee of a British ship were ignored on the same ground by the Court of New Orleans, United States, and in which the mortgagees enforced their claim on the ship on her return to this country.

That no application for diplomatic intervention appeared to have been made in that case of the "Warbler," and Sir Julian was to request that we would take the present case into consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether it is one which calls for such intervention.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a copy of the Treaty between Great Britain and Belgium, from which we should perceive that the case was not affected by any of its provisions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the refusal of the Belgian Courts to recognize the rights of registered English mortgagees (not in possession) of a British vessel to priority in the distribution of the proceeds of the vessel sold in Belgium, at the instance of a foreign creditor of the owners of the vessel, does not, in our opinion, call for diplomatic intervention.

No. 6.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 18.)

Temple, September 17, 1880.

My Lord,

As to grant of a Charter to Association for the improvement of the northern part of the Island of Borneo under concessions obtained from the Sultans of Sulu and Brunei by Mr. Alfred Dent, of the firm of Dent, Brothers, and Co.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 30th July last, stating that, by direction of your Lordship, he laid before us the papers noted in the list appended thereto, and relating to an application addressed to Her Majesty's Government, through the Foreign Office, for the grant of a Charter of Incorporation to an Association in course of formation for the development of the northern part of the Island of Borneo under certain concessions of territory and grants of sovereign rights thereover which had been acquired from the Sultans of Sulu and Brunei by Mr. Alfred Dent, of the firm of Dent, Brothers, and Co., of London.

That the character and objects of the Association, and the general features of its organization and of the powers which it proposed to exercise, were explained in the printed Statement presented by Mr. Dent to the Foreign Office in December 1878.

That Mr. Dent's application for a Charter was allowed to stand over pending the discussion which was going on at that time respecting the claim of Spain to sovereignty over the north-east coast of Borneo under a Treaty concluded with the Sultan of Sulu in July 1878.

That, in January last, Her Majesty's Government communicated to the Spanish Government (Further Correspondence, Part IV, p. 1) their decision not to recognize the alleged claim of Spain to sovereignty over that part of the Island of Borneo, and on the 12th April Mr. Dent renewed his application for a Charter (ibid., p. 15).

That it was very desirable, for various reasons, that a decision on this application should be arrived at without further delay, and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to submit to us the following observations thereon.

That Mr. Dent and his associates had occupied the principal points in North Borneo under their grants for about two years, but they were unwilling to embark further capital in the undertaking unless it received the sanction and support of Her Majesty's Government.

That, apart from the advantages which might result from the opening up of new outlets for British trade, Her Majesty's Government considered it of great importance to the interests of this country that the territories in question should not fall into the possession of any other nation, and especially of Spain. That, on the other hand, they were unwilling to increase their responsibilities in the East by the annexation or protectorate of new territories, which, moreover, in the case of North Borneo, could hardly fail to excite political jealousies. That, under those circumstances, Her Majesty's Government were disposed to look favourably on Mr. Dent's application, as it appeared to them that the occupation of North Borneo by British subjects under a Charter of Incorporation such as was contemplated would greatly diminish, if not remove, the risk of that territory passing into foreign hands.

But a question had been raised whether the status of the Association, as the governing power over those territories under the grants from the Sultans of Sulu and Brunei, was one to which any valid exception could be taken in point of international law.

That, on that point, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to Acting Consul-General Treacher's despatch No. 3 of the 8th March, 1880 (Further Correspondence, Part IV, p. 17), and to the correspondence therein transmitted, from which we would perceive that Commodore Schufeldt, of the United States' navy, addressed a letter to the Sultan of Brunei (p. 20) in which he contended that the grant by the Sultan of the territories and powers acquired by the Association in Brunei was in disparagement of the Treaty between the Sultan and the United States, of which a copy formed Inclosure 6 of the despatch. That he admitted, however, that a similar grant "to any recognized Sovereign Power" would be free from objection.

That it would be observed that the Sultan of Brunei in his reply (p. 23) pointed out that the United States' Government had never made any objection to similar grants of territory and of sovereign powers to Sir James Brooke, who held and governed Sarawak (see Map annexed to Statement) under the same title as that under which Mr. Dent and his Association proposed to administer the territory ceded to them.

That, assuming that no exception could be taken in point of international law to the government of the territories in question being vested in a private Association under the suzerainty of the Sultans of Sulu and Brunei, it appeared to your Lordship that it was desirable that the Association should be incorporated under a Charter, which would recognize the validity of the grants made by the Sultans, and contain provisions enabling Her Majesty's Government to exercise a control over the operations of the Association, especially in regard to its relations towards foreign States and their subjects.

That, on that point, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to Articles 35, 36, and 37 of Mr. Dent's printed Statement (pp. 11-13), which set out concisely the nature of the support and facilities which the Association solicited from Her Majesty's Government, and also the conditions to which it offered to submit in consideration of the grant of a Charter.

That, as regarded Article 35 (b), your Lordship was not disposed to pledge Her Majesty's Government to afford any greater amount of protection or support to the Association than would be extended to it, according to circumstances, if it were simply incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Acts.

That, as regarded Article 35 (c), your Lordship proposed the insertion in the Charter of a proviso similar to that contained in the Charter granted in 1847 to the "Eastern Archipelago Company" (of which a copy was annexed), whereby the Association would be bound to obey the directions of the Secretary of State in all matters concerning their relations with foreign States.

That, as regarded the general frame of the Charter, your Lordship presumed that it should be substantially in conformity with ordinary commercial Charters, Her Majesty's Government having no special powers to confer on the Association, and the object of its incorporation by Charter being really to declare the recognition by Her Majesty's Government of the validity of the cessions made to it by the Sultans, and to secure a power of control over its proceedings.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the accompanying papers into our consideration, and that we would favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to whether there was any objection, in point of law, to the grant of a Charter to the Association on the terms generally indicated in his letter, and subject to such other clauses and conditions as Her Majesty's Government might be advised to have inserted therein respecting the treatment of the native inhabitants, or any other matters.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add, in conclusion, that Baron Overbeck, whose name frequently appeared in the correspondence, had retired from the undertaking, which was now entirely in the hands of British subjects.

We were also honoured with Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th September instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying further papers, as marked in the margin,* from which it appeared that the Dutch authorities in Borneo contemplated claiming a boundary which would conflict with the claims of the projected Association.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

No objection to the grant of the Charter of Incorporation to the Association, but suggests a modification of a clause in the proposed Charter.

That we see no objection in point of law to the grant of a Charter to the Association on the terms generally indicated in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter, and subject to such other clauses and conditions as Her Majesty's Government may be advised to have inserted therein respecting the treatment of the native inhabitants or any other matters.

We would submit, however, for consideration whether it would be expedient to insert, as suggested, a clause similar to that contained in the Charter of the "Eastern Archipelago Company," whereby the Association would be bound to obey the directions of the Secretary of State in all matters concerning their relation with foreign States. It would be hardly possible, if such a term were contained in the Charter, for Her Majesty's Government to avoid responsibility to foreign Powers for the acts of the agents of the Association, and, having regard to the questions that have already arisen, we conceive it probable, if the Company act under the directions of the Government, serious conflicts would result.

We suggest that the clause as existing in the Eastern Archipelago Charter should be modified, and that, in the present instance, the Charter should contain a term that, if at any time the Secretary of State should think it necessary to dissent from, or object to, any of the dealings of the Company with any foreign State or Power, and should make any suggestion to the Company founded on such dissent or objection, the Company would at all times act in accordance with such suggestions, and that in default of compliance the Charter should be avoided.

September upon the subject of British claims against Chile, arising out of the proceedings of Chilean ships of war on the Peruvian coast, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a letter from Mr. James de Wolf,[*] claiming compensation for the loss caused to him through his ship, the "Latona," being compelled by a Chilean ship of war to leave the port of Pabellon de Pica on the 18th April last before she had completed her shipment of guano.

Claim of Mr. J. de "Wolf's "Latona."

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Mr. de Wolf's claim should be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

That Lord Tenterden was at the same time to remind us that, on the 2nd September, two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima,[†] on the subject of the proceedings of Chilean ships of war in the Pacific, were sent to us, by your Lordship's direction, for our opinion, and that those despatches were not alluded to in our Report of the 25th September, and had not been returned to the Foreign Office.

That your Lordship had delayed taking any action upon our above-mentioned Report until your Lordship should receive the further Report expected from us in answer to the letter from the Foreign Office of the 2nd September,[‡] and that your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with such further Report at our earliest convenience.

Claims of Messrs. Vaughan and Co. and Mr. Law.

We are also honoured with a letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 9th December, stating that he was directed to forward to us two further letters[§] from Messrs. Vaughan and Co. and Mr. Law relative to losses sustained by them in consequence of the prohibition issued by the Chilean Government for vessels to load guano in Pabellon de Pica and Huanillos, and that he (Sir Julian Pauncefote) was instructed to request that those letters might be taken into consideration by us in conjunction with that inclosed in the letter of the 25th November.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

These cases are all similar, and should not be supported.

That, in our opinion, the claim of Mr. James de Wolf should not be supported by Her Majesty's Government.

The "Monmouth," to which Mr. de Wolf refers, was a case of asserted false blockade. In the "Latona," however, it does not appear that the Chilean officer in any way mentioned, or referred to, blockade.

The Chilean vessel, so far as appears from Mr. de Wolf's letter, came into the Peruvian port for a legitimate purpose, namely, to destroy the enemy's property, and that the warning given to the "Latona" was to protect her from any danger or inconvenience to which she might be exposed during the military operations of the Chilean man-of-war.

The circumstances under which the vessels mentioned in the letters of Messrs. Vaughan and Co. and Mr. Law were compelled to leave the Peruvian ports in which they were appear to be precisely similar to those under which the "Latona" was forced to sail from the port of Pabellon de Pica. The Report, therefore, we have made in the case of the latter vessel, is applicable to the claims of the owners of the vessels mentioned in the letters just referred to.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received February 11.)

Temple, February 11, 1880.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th instant, stating that your Lordship would be glad if we would favour you with our opinion, as early as we could conveniently do so, on the following question:

---

[*] November 14, 1879.

[†] Mr. St. John, Nos. 96 and 100, July 21, 1879.

[‡] Memorandum; Law Officers' Report on Foreign Office letter of September 2, sent in to Foreign Office 29th November ultimo.

[§] Mr. D. Law, November 28; Messrs. Vaughan and Co., December 5, 1879.

Chilean declaration as to export of guano from Province of Tarapaca by Peruvian bondholders.

That the Chilean Minister had addressed to your Lordship the accompanying letter,[*] inclosing a copy of a Declaration of the conditions on which his Government were disposed to allow the Peruvian bondholders, during the continuance of the war between Chile and Peru, to load and export guano from the deposits in the province of Tarapaca, specially hypothecated to the bondholders by the Peruvian Government, but at present in the military occupation of Chile.

That he was to inclose a printed Memorandum[†] showing the rights of the bondholders under their contracts with the Peruvian Government, and copies of three telegrams[‡] recently received from Her Majesty's Representative at Lima.

Rights of Chile.

That your Lordship apprehended that Chile, in the exercise of her belligerent rights, might dispose of the products of any part of the enemy's territory in her military occupation, though she cannot alienate the territory itself until a Treaty of Peace and Cession had perfected her inchoate title thereto. That if that be the case your Lordship would propose to reply to Señor Blest Gana's letter, to the effect that Her Majesty's Government have learnt with satisfaction that the Chilean Government have so promptly given effect to their assurance that the rights of the bondholders would be respected, and that they have made arrangements which they understood were acceptable to the latter respecting the disposal of the guano from the deposits in the Province of Tarapaca now in their military occupation. That two letters from Sir C. Russell, M.P., Chairman of the Bondholders' Committee, were likewise inclosed therewith.[§]

Proposed reply to Chilean Government.

Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether we concur in the view above stated as to the rights of Chile, and whether there was, in our opinion, any objection to the proposed reply to Señor Blest Gana's communication.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Concur in view as to rights of Chile, and approve of proposed reply.

That we concur in the view stated in the letter of Sir Julian Pauncefote as to the rights of Chile, and we see no objection to the proposed reply to Señor Blest Gana's communication.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 25th May last, stating that on the 14th June last the Law Officers of the Crown favoured the Marquis of Salisbury with their opinion as to the steps to be taken by Her Majesty's Government with a view to the protection of British life and property during the conflict between the forces of Chile and Peru.

Conduct by Chile of war with Peru. Destruction of private property at Mollendo. Italian proposal for joint representations.

That the Italian Ambassador at this Court, as we would perceive by the accompanying correspondence,[¶] had now, on behalf of his Government, called the attention of Her Majesty's Government to the proceedings of the Chilean Government in ordering the bombardment of all Peruvian fortified towns and the destruction of railways and private property, the town of Mollendo, as it appeared, not only from information received by the Italian Government, but from the Report of the British Vice-Consul at that place, having been given over to pillage by the Chilean troops, whilst the custom-houses had been sacked and the property of neutrals carried off.

That, under those circumstances, the Italian Government had invited that of Her Majesty to co-operate with them and with other neutral Powers with a view to induce the Chilean Government to put an end to such a state of things; and in transmitting to us the accompanying draft of reply, which your Lordship proposed to return to the Italian representation, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take it into

Draft of Letter from Earl Granville to General Menabrea.

M. l'Ambassadeur, Foreign Office, June , 1880.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Pro-memoriâ which your Excellency left with me on the 28th ultimo, referring to the accounts which had reached your Government, through the French Chargé d'Affaires at Santiago, of the orders given by the Chilean Government to bombard all Peruvian fortified towns, and to destroy the railways and even private property; and stating that it appeared from telegrams received that Mollendo and other places on the Peruvian coast had already been pillaged and burnt, and that Callao was blockaded and threatened with bombardment.

Under these circumstances, your Excellency's Government, as appears from your Memorandum above referred to, invites the co-operation of the neutral Powers in some joint action with a view to putting a stop to such a state of things, and desires to know whether Her Majesty's Government will instruct their Representative to unite with those of other countries interested in a protest against the proceedings of the Chilean Government.

I have now to state to your Excellency that the only official documents of the Chilean Government on the subject of the conduct of the war which Her Majesty's Government are acquainted with consist of two letters addressed by Colonel Sotomayor to the Minister of War,* and dated Pisagneo, the 28th January and 3rd February respectively.

Although Her Majesty's Government are not prepared to say that the terms of these letters justify diplomatic remonstrance, recent reports have been received from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima† of the action of the Chilean military commanders, and of the conduct of the Chilean troops at Mollendo, which disclose such excesses on their part as, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, to call for immediate remonstrance from foreign Powers, not only on the score of humanity, but for the protection of the rights of neutrals.

It appears from the accounts given by Her Majesty's Consul at Mollendo, a copy of which is inclosed,‡ that the Chilean troops, with the sanction of their officers, not only committed the offences therein described against defenceless and unresisting inhabitants, but sacked the contents of the custom-houses, which were well known to contain the property of neutrals.

Her Majesty's Government are therefore quite ready to join with the Government of Italy and any other foreign Power in addressing, either collectively or separately, a remonstrance to the Chilean Government against the action of their troops at Mollendo, and a protest against a repetition of acts in violation of the usages of civilized warfare, and also a warning that indemnity will be demanded for the wanton destruction of the life and property of neutrals.

British subject named Scott captured in attempting to blow up a Chilean iron-clad.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th June instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence as marked in the margin* relative to the case of a British subject named Scott, who, together with two other persons, was captured by the Chileans while on an expedition having for its object the attaching a torpedo to a Chilean iron-clad at Iquique.

That we would observe that no public Commission was in the possession of these persons at the time of their capture, but that there was found on one of them a written promise addressed to them on the part of the Peruvian Government guaranteeing to them the sum of 10,000*l.* for each Chilean iron-clad they could contrive to blow up.

Question of piracy.

That he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the possession of this document relieves the attempt in which Scott and his companions were engaged from the character of piracy which has been affixed to it, and whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in urging the Chilean Government to take a more lenient view of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in urging the Chilean Government to take a more lenient view of the case.

Claim of West Coast of America Telegraph Company against Chilean Government for cutting their cables during war with Peru.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 5th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence† relative to an application made by the West Coast of America Telegraph Company for the official support of Her Majesty's Government in preferring a claim against the Chilean Government for compensation in respect of the losses they had sustained in the cutting of their telegraph cables off the coast of Peru by the Chilean ships of war engaged in hostile operations off that coast.

That the cables of the Company were laid under two independent concessions from the Government of Chile and Peru respectively, empowering the Company to establish telegraphic communication between Callao and Valparaiso, with intermediate stations (see printed copy of concessions).

That the cables cut by the Chilean Admiral were those connecting the Peruvian ports of Autofagasta, Iquique, Arica, Mollendo, and Cliarillos, and that the Admiral acted, it was presumed, in the exercise of a belligerent right, claimed by Chile during the war, and in order to prevent the transmission between those ports of messages which might have a prejudicial effect upon the Chilean arms.

That it appeared, however, that the Company, besides disputing the right of the Chileans to cut the cables, contended that the place and manner of the cutting entailed a wanton and unnecessary injury to their property.

That the Company, moreover, represented that it had been intimated to one of their agents that the Chilean Government was disposed to recognize the claim and make compensation privately, but that no progress having been made towards such a result, they had found it necessary to lay their claim before Her Majesty's Government.

That Lord Tenterden was to refer us to the accompanying Report of the Law

Officers of the Crown, dated the 19th September, 1870, as to the right of a belligerent to disable telegraph cables that might be used by an enemy for the conveyance of military messages.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in giving any support, official or unofficial, to the claim of the Company.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Her Majesty's Government may address Chilean Government unofficially on the subject.

That, as the Chilean Government have expressed their intention to compensate the Telegraph Company for the losses sustained by them owing to the injury to their cables, we are of opinion that this is a case in which Her Majesty's Government may properly appeal, unofficially, to the Chilean Government to carry out their intention promptly, but we are of opinion that such appeal should not, without further information, be made officially.

The principles of International Law which bear upon the uses, in time of war, of submarine telegraphs, have not yet been publicly declared, but the principles which have governed analogous cases must, in our opinion, be applied as far as they are applicable to the new circumstances which have arisen. Probably the nearest analogy is to be found in the case of a neutral ship employed to carry messages to a belligerent.

If detected in the act such a vessel is liable to seizure.

And the right to search neutral vessels suspected of carrying despatches is supposed to afford to a belligerent, who exercises due vigilance, complete protection.

In our opinion, a belligerent is entitled to do all such acts as are necessary for the purpose of affording absolute security against the possibility of messages being conveyed in time of war by means of a cable serving as a channel of communication between different parts of his adversary's territory.

What are the acts necessary to secure such protection must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case as it arises. But we think that if the belligerent injures the property of the neutral, to an extent beyond what is reasonably necessary, he may justly be called to account in respect of such excess.

It would seem that in the present case the acts done were, to some extent, wanton, and in excess of what was necessary, especially if it be the fact, as stated in Mr. Bannatyne's letter, that the ports between which the cable was laid were, in fact, in the hands of the Chileans.

Therefore, whilst we hesitate, without fuller information, to advise your Lordship to prefer the claim officially, we think that the circumstances are such as to warrant an unofficial appeal to the Chilean Government, as we have suggested.

Blockade of Treaty ports in event of a Russo-Chinese war.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st July last, stating that your Lordship had had under your consideration for some time past the following question in connection with the difficulties which had arisen between Russia and China:

That Her Majesty's Minister at Peking had applied for instructions[*] as to the course he should pursue in the event of war breaking out between those Powers as regards any attempt which might be made by Russia to blockade the Treaty ports of China.

That the question was one of grave importance to this country, having regard to the magnitude of British trade with China, which was estimated at not less than 50,000,000*l*. a-year.

That the foreign settlements at the Treaty ports were established on concessions of land rented from the Chinese Government, but although those concessions remain Chinese territory the foreign community residing there enjoyed by Treaty, as we were aware, complete ex-territoriality; that at Shanghae, for instance, they constituted by means of a Municipal Board and Consular Courts what might be termed imperium in imperio, and that the Government and Administration of the foreign Settlement was entirely in the hands of the foreign community and the authorities of their respective Governments.

That your Lordship would be glad to know whether, in case of war, the belligerent right of Russia to blockade the Treaty ports would be affected by such ex-territoriality. That if not, Her Majesty's Government might be disposed to consider the expediency of endeavouring to bring about some amicable understanding on the subject between Russia and the Treaty Powers having similar interests at stake, in anticipation of such a contingency.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request, therefore, that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion on that question.

That he was to inclose a Memorandum by the Librarian of your Lordship's Department on the blockade of Canton in 1857.[†]

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Right of Russia to blockade these ports not affected by ex-territoriality of foreigners.

That, in our opinion, the Russian Government may lawfully blockade the Treaty ports in China, notwithstanding the ex-territoriality of foreigners in those ports.

Should come to an understanding with Russia.

In view, therefore, of the existing relations between Russia and China, it will be most expedient that the Treaty Powers should come to an understanding with Russia as to the exercise by Russia of her right to blockade the Treaty ports.

Warning given by Sir Thomas Wade to Colonel Gordon on his entering the service of the Emperor of China.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st July last, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a copy of a telegram[‡] received from Her Majesty's Minister in Peking, in which he reported that he had felt it his duty to warn Colonel Gordon, who was then at Tientsin, presumably in the service of the Chinese Government, and who had telegraphed to the War Office his resignation of his Commission in Her Majesty's army, that, if war breaks out, "he must quit Chinese service or change nationality."

As to the prosecution of Colonel Gordon for violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

That Sir Thomas Wade referred to section 6, paragraph 2, of Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan (of which a copy was annexed), and, therefore, probably considered that Colonel Gordon should be prosecuted for a violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act in the event of his disregarding the warning which he had given him.

Precedent during the Russo-Turkish war in 1878 of British Consular jurisdiction in the Levant.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose (in original) two Reports[§] of the Law Officers of the Crown on a similar question which arose in 1878, during the Russo-Turkish war, with reference to the exercise of jurisdiction by Her Majesty's Consular Courts in the Levant under Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873

(of which a copy was also annexed), in cases of infraction by British subjects in Turkey of section 4 of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

That we would observe that in both those Reports Her Majesty's Government were advised that Her Majesty's Consular Courts should not exercise jurisdiction in such cases.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the instructions which should be given to Sir Thomas Wade on this point.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

British subjects entering service of Emperor of China during war without the Queen's license may be prosecuted under section 6 of Order in Council, but inexpedient to exercise jurisdiction over them in such cases.

That section 6, paragraph 82, of Her Majesty's Order in Council for China and Japan in terms constitutes the taking part by a British subject without license of Her Majesty in any operation of war in the service of the Emperor of China, an offence for which any person may be tried and punished by a British Court in China.

This case differs in that respect from the one, somewhat similar, on which the late Law Officers advised. But the difficulties in the way of exercising the jurisdiction and the inconveniences which might arise from its exercise, pointed out in their Reports, apply equally to the present case.

Jurisdiction in certain cases might be exercised.

At the same time, we do not think it would be desirable to lay down by anticipation that the jurisdiction is one which ought not, under any circumstances, to be taken advantage of. We can conceive cases in which such an exercise of jurisdiction would be both expedient and necessary.

Proceedings not to be taken without communicating with Home Government.

But we think Sir Thomas Wade may properly be instructed that proceedings for offences of the nature referred to should not be taken without first communicating with the Home Government.

Appointment of Chinese Consul at Singapore, and the duties assigned to him, in connection with the issue of certificates of registry of vessels trading under Chinese flag.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd August last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a letter from the Colonial Office,* inclosing copies of two despatches from the Governor of Singapore in regard to the appointment of a Chinese Consul to reside in that Colony, and Sir Julian was to call our attention to the question raised in the earlier of Sir F. Weld's despatches as to the duties assigned to the Chinese Consul at Singapore in connection with the issue by him of certificates of registry for vessels to trade under the Chinese flag in and out of the ports of the Colony.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take these papers into our consideration and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the grant of Chinese registers to vessels owned by Chinese, by the Chinese Consul at Singapore, could be objected to in point of international law.

That Sir Julian was to observe that, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1873," the power to declare foreign ports to be ports of registry was limited to ports in which Her Majesty exercises ex-territorial jurisdiction. That, on the other hand, as pointed out by the Chinese Consul in his letter of the 19th September, British Consuls at all foreign ports were authorized by section 54 of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854," under certain circumstances, to grant provisional certificates of British registry to foreign vessels transferred to British subjects.

That, in obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

The certificates granted by the Chinese Consul need not be objected to if not in substitution for the regular certificate of registration.

That, from the information contained in Sir F. Weld's despatches, we do not gather with so much distinctness as we could wish the nature of the certificates, or of the ships or vessels to which certificates are granted by the Chinese Consul at Singapore.

If these certificates are merely provisional, the practice followed by British Consuls under the Merchant Shipping Act would prevent Her Majesty's Government from objecting to the use of similar documents by the Chinese.

---

* August 6, 1880.

If the certificates are intended to be not merely provisional, but in substitution of the regular certificate of registration, the practice of the Chinese Government in this respect may properly be objected to as inconsistent with and going beyond the usage of nations.

My Lord, Temple, September , 1880.

Action against Mr. H. A. Giles, Acting Consul at Amoy. In re the British ship "Cheang Hock-kian."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the despatches noted in the margin,* and a telegram referring thereto from Mr. H. A. Giles, the Acting British Consul at Amoy, in China, against whom an action for the recovery of 5,000*l.* and damages had been instituted in Her Majesty's Supreme Court at Shanghae, on account of his proceedings in the matter of the British steamer "Cheang Hock-kian," which were detailed in his despatch No. 15 of the 28th July.

That it appeared that the steamer in question being about to carry Chinese passengers from Amoy to Singapore had complied with all the formalities of the "Chinese Passenger Act, 1855," and that the master had obtained the necessary emigration papers. But that it was discovered that he had subsequently taken on board a large number of additional passengers in excess of the number specified in the emigration officers's certificate. That thereupon the Acting Consul, with the assistance of Commander Bridger, of Her Majesty's gun-boat "Sheldrake," prevented the departure of the vessel, caused her to be searched (section 6 of the Act), and, on a subsequent day, proceedings against the master were held before the Acting Consul "for breach of the Chinese Passenger Act, 1855," in being about to proceed to sea with 1,003 passengers, whereas his emigration papers only warranted the conveyance of 574. That Mr. Giles, considering that the charge had been established, and that the master had failed to show cause why the vessel "should not be attached for confiscation by the Vice-Admiralty Court at Shanghae," gave the master and owners the option of handing to him a sum of 5,000*l.*, on payment of which the vessel would be released.

That the money was paid. But that the master having afterwards obtained legal advice in Hong Kong, the further proceedings took place at Amoy before the Acting Consul, which were reported in his despatch No. 17, Confidential, and that on the 20th instant Mr. Giles addressed a telegram to Lord Granville, of which a copy was inclosed, announcing that an action had been commenced against him in the Supreme Court at Shanghae, and asking for information on certain questions of law.

That the proceedings of Mr. Giles appeared to have been altogether illegal.

That, in the first place, no offence was committed which, under the provisions of the Act, rendered the vessel liable to forfeiture; secondly, that such forfeiture could only be declared or a fine substituted in lieu thereof (section 12) by the Courts mentioned in section 10, and that the Vice-Admiralty Court of Shanghae had no such power under the Act.

That as regarded the first question asked by Mr. Giles in his telegram, Sir Julian was to observe that under section 37 of the Order in Council for China and Japan the Supreme Court at Shanghae had concurrent jurisdiction with the Provincial Courts all over China (see also section 160).

That as regarded the second question, it was presumed that section 11 of the Act afforded no protection to Mr. Giles against the claim for the restitution of the 5,000*l.*

That as regarded the third question, Sir Julian was to refer to section 10 of the Act, whereby, if an offence had been committed rendering the vessel liable to forfeiture, she might be detained and sent to Hong Kong, which was the nearest port at which there was a Vice-Admiralty Court competent to try the case; but that it did not appear that any of the offences specified in section 8 which alone rendered a vessel liable to forfeiture were committed on that occasion.

That Sir Julian was to request that we would take all the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship at our earliest convenience with our opinion and advice on the various points raised in this case, and also as to the course which should be pursued under the circumstances.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

1. That, in our opinion, Mr. Giles had no justification for seizing and detaining the vessel "Cheang Hock-kian," and for receiving the 5,000*l.* under the circumstances mentioned in his despatch of the 28th July, and that sum must at once be repaid to the owners.

2. That Mr. Giles cannot claim immunity or protection under the 11th section of the Statute.

3. That Mr. Giles cannot now attach the vessel, or send her in for adjudication and confiscation.

4. If, after the 5,000*l.* has been repaid to the owners of the vessel, the action should be proceeded with, there seems no course open to Mr. Giles but to compromise or defend it, and we think, considering the real and intended breach of the Statute by the master and owners of the vessel, the damages sustained by them should be regarded as small, if not merely nominal.

5. We are of opinion that the Court at Shanghae has jurisdiction to try the action against Mr. Giles.

My Lord,

Cyprus. Trial of Sawas Christodoulos for murder.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th ultimo,* stating that, with reference to the last paragraph but two of his letter of the 19th ultimo* respecting the status of the man Sawas Christodoulos, sentenced to death by the High Court of Justice in Cyprus, he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a copy of the Treaty of the 27th May between Greece and Turkey,† the XXIIIrd Article of which stipulated that no subject of one of the Contracting Parties should be withdrawn from the legitimate authority of the other, or be protected by passports or patents.

We are also honoured with a letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 31st ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acknowledge the receipt of our Report of the 29th ultimo* respecting the trial before the High Court of Justice in Cyprus of the man Sawas on a charge of murder, and expressing our opinion that, assuming the accused to be an Ottoman subject, the trial was not warranted by law.

That Sir Julian Paunceforte was to state to us that your Lordship would be glad if we would have the goodness to favour you, for the future guidance of the Government of Cyprus in cases between Ottoman subjects and persons of other nationalities, with our opinion on the second question laid before us in his (Sir Julian Pauncefote's) letter of the 19th ultimo,* namely, whether, assuming Sawas to have been properly treated as an Hellenic subject, his trial before the High Court was warranted by law, having regard to the provisions of sections 10 and 108 of the High Court of Justice Ordinance.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to return to us, for convenience of reference, the papers inclosed in his above-mentioned letter, and to add to them the accompanying further despatch, since received from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus, inclosing copies of the record of proceedings in the case, and of the notes of evidence given before the High Court of Justice, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with any observations which we might have to make thereon.

That, in the meanwhile, the High Commissioner had been instructed by telegram to report fully on the nationality of Sawas.

We have also to acknowledge the receipt of a further letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, bearing date the 13th instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 31st ultimo, asking to be favoured with our opinion on the construction of sections 10 and 108 of the Ordinance* establishing the High Court of Justice in Cyprus, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith copy of a telegram† which had been received from General Biddulph, Her Majesty's High Commissioner in that island, asking how he should proceed in the case of a British subject charged with a criminal offence against an Ottoman subject, and that, in reply, General Biddulph had been informed by telegram that the point in question was under our consideration; and that instructions would be sent to him upon receipt of our Report.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to take the matter into consideration, and to favour your Lordship, at our earliest convenience, with our opinion as to the reply which should be sent to General Biddulph's inquiry.

We are also honoured with a further note from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 15th instant, inclosing further papers with reference to the question then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken these papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

Jurisdiction of Turkish Tribunals under Capitulations.

That we have carefully considered the terms of the Capitulations between Turkey and various foreign States, and have come to the conclusion that, notwithstanding these Capitulations, the Turkish Tribunals have the sole jurisdiction to try a foreigner for an outrage committed against a Turkish subject in any place under the sovereignty of the Porte.

Trial before High Court not warranted by law, whether nationality be British or foreign.

We are therefore of opinion that, even assuming Sawas to have been an Hellenic subject, his trial before the High Court was not warranted by law, having regard to the provisions of sections 10 and 108 of the High Court of Justice Ordinance.

This opinion also applies to offences committed by British subjects, in the telegram transmitted by General Biddulph.

If our view be correct, the nationality of Sawas is immaterial.

And we do not think it necessary to trouble your Lordship with any observations upon a trial which took place before a Court which had no jurisdiction.

Trial of Sawas. Objects to his deportation. He must be tried by the Ottoman Tribunal.

I DO not like the idea of Sawas being deported. The step would be much criticized, and it would be a difficult one to justify. I see nothing for it but to let him be tried by the Ottoman Tribunal. He has been tried coram non judice. He may still be tried coram judice; and if he is a Greek, and has a right to remove his case, and applies to do so, it will be removed; if not, it will go on.

Temple, February 11, 1880.

My Lord,

Trial of Sawas. High Court had no jurisdiction. Ottoman Court should deal with him.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that, with reference to our Reports of the 29th December last and the 16th ultimo, respecting the trial of Sawas for murder before the High Court of Justice in Cyprus, he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a further despatch* and a telegram from the High Commissioner of Cyprus.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was, in the first place, to refer us to a memorandum by the Legal Advisers of the Cyprus Government, inclosed in the despatch No. 33, commenting on the statement of the case presented to us in his letter of the 19th December last.

That they observed that the case was not, as therein stated, transferred from the Ottoman Court to the High Court by the Judicial Commissioner proprio motu, but that the Ottoman Court took the preliminary examination, and "committed the accused to the Court which, in consequence of his own averments, appeared to it to be the Court of proper jurisdiction." That on that point Sir J. Pauncefote was, in the first place, to refer us to the letter of Mr. Cobham, Commissioner at Larnaka, to Mr. Phillips, Judicial Commissioner, of the 16th October, 1879, and to Mr. Phillips' reply of the 18th October—both of which would be found at p. 212 of the printed correspondence.†

That those letters showed that the case was transferred to the High Court with the approval of Mr. Phillips, on the application of Mr. Cobham.

That there was no provision in the High Court of Justice Ordinance whereby, in a criminal case, an Ottoman Court could take the preliminary examination and commit a prisoner for trial before the High Court. That it was conceived that the only legal mode in which a case could pass from the one Court to the other was by transfer, under section 108;‡ and that, even if the High Court of Justice had jurisdiction to try the case of Sawas, the proper course would have been to commence ab initio by taking the preliminary examination in the High Court, as provided by section 165 of the Ordinance.‡

That the Legal Advisers, in their memorandum, also expressed their regret that the attention of the Law Officers was not directly called to the fact "that the prisoner's exception to the jurisdiction of the Court was not taken until after he had been convicted and sentenced."

That on that point Sir J. Pauncefote was to observe, in the first place, that it was considered that, if the Court had no jurisdiction, the proceedings were null and void, whether the accused took exception to the jurisdiction or not; and in the next place it appeared, from the report of the trial furnished by the Judicial Commissioner, that the prisoner's counsel did formally protest against the proceedings, "not knowing to what extent may be the right of the Court to try and sentence a Greek subject" (see Protest, p. 215).

That in General Biddulph's telegram No. 8 of the 31st ultimo it was stated that the Greek Vice-Consul had taken no objection to the jurisdiction of the Court, but only to the capital sentence; and it was urged that the best course would be simply to commute the sentence.

That on that point Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that if, as we had reported, the proceedings were not warranted by law, the trial was coram non judice, and the sentence was a nullity, and cannot, therefore, be commuted.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the points raised in the two papers under consideration might properly be answered in the sense of the foregoing observations thereon, and whether instructions should be given to the High Commissioner to follow, in the case of Sawas, the course indicated in our Report of the 29th December,§ namely, to leave him to the Ottoman Courts to deal with.

That the previous papers in the case, which had already been before us, were therewith returned for convenience of reference.

That we adhere to our former opinion that the High Court had no jurisdiction, and that instructions may properly be given to the High Commissioner that he should leave Sawas to the Ottoman Court to deal with.

In reference to the further papers, we should observe that assent will not give jurisdiction, and that whether the exception to the jurisdiction was taken before or after conviction and sentence is immaterial.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received April 28.)

Temple, April 27, 1880.

My Lord,

Project of Judicial Reform in Cyprus.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 11th March last, stating that, on the 24th February, 1879, he transmitted to us, by direction of your Lordship, a memorandum* entitled, "Project of Judicial Reorganization and Reform for the Island of Cyprus," and he requested that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

That our reply, dated the 23rd April following, contained some remarks on the High Court of Justice Ordinance, a copy of which accompanied the memorandum, but omitted to notice the Project of Judicial Reform which had been submitted for our consideration.

That it had only recently been discovered that a note which Sir Julian Pauncefote addressed at the time to Dr. Deane, requesting him to bring the above circumstance to your notice, had miscarried, and in the meanwhile it had not been possible to make any progress in the matter of judicial reform in Cyprus.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was now directed by your Lordship to transmit to us another copy of the printed memorandum in question, and to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion on the proposals therein contained.

That Sir Julian was also to request that we would be good enough in connection therewith to consider a further memorandum† on the same subject by Mr. L. Phillips, the present Legal Adviser to the Government of Cyprus, which Sir Julian had transmitted to us in his letter of the 23rd October last, and of which an additional copy was then inclosed.

That we would observe, from the various documents submitted to us, that Cyprus possessed a complete and well-digested Code of laws, but that the procedure of the Turkish Courts was in some respects defective, not only in the matter of evidence, and that the reform which was most urgently called for was in the constitution of the native Bench.

Native Judges.

That it might be desirable, therefore, before attempting any larger measure of reform, to try the effect of replacing the present native Judges by a smaller number of qualified and salaried native Judges, and to provide for an appeal from the decision of the highest native Court to the High Court of Justice.

That for the purpose of such appeal the Judicial Commissioner might be empowered to sit with a certain number of native Judges, and their decision would be subject to a further appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

That the local Legislature might by degrees remedy the defects complained of in the procedure of the native Courts, and the working of that system for a time would, perhaps, afford more practical means than are at present possessed of judging whether it be really necessary or expedient to substitute new Codes of laws for those at present in use, and to subvert to such an extent as was proposed the existing system of judicial organization in the island.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take the above observations into consideration in connection with the general question of judicial reform in Cyprus, as to which your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion at our early convenience.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

As to continuance of Nizam Courts.

That we have carefully considered the memorandum of Mr. L. Phillips, whose local experience and practical knowledge entitle his opinion to the greatest weight. But we are unable to agree with him in his recommendation that the Nizam Courts should be continued. The "scant material at hand from which to select Judges for those Courts, and the difficulty of finding men of known probity, broad intelligence, and who, if not learned, possess the capability of learning," seem to us strong reasons against the continuance of these native Courts.

District Courts.

Temyz Court.

If, however, it is deemed expedient to continue these Courts, the jurisdiction of the District Courts in civil cases should be limited. The jurisdiction of the Temyz Court in civil causes and in criminal cases should also be limited, and in the latter class of cases should be neither final nor exclusive.

Appointment of Judges.

The whole system of electing Judges should at once be abolished, and the appointment during good behaviour given to the Executive.

Fusion of British and Cypriot divisions and system of appeal.

In reference to the "Project of Judicial Reorganization and Reform for the Island of Cyprus," we agree with the views of Sir Henry Maine, and particularly on this point, that the fusion of the British and Cypriot division should be kept in view as the ultimate object to be obtained. From both divisions, and from the fused division, there should be an appeal, in the first instance, to a Court in the island, and in the last resort to the Privy Council, or the Tribunal which will, in due time, take over the appeal jurisdiction of the Privy Council.

Constitution of Appeal Court.

The constitution, however, of the Appeal Court in the island seems to us to require very great consideration. It does not seem probable that for many years any number of native qualified Judges would be obtained, and if this experiment of a native Judge in the Court of Appeal is to be tried, we suggest that not more than one native should at first be made a member of that Court.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received April 28.)

Temple, April 27, 1880.

My Lord,

High Court of Justice in Cyprus.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 11th March last, stating that, by the direction of your Lordship, he transmitted to us a copy of the Ordinance of the Legislature of Cyprus* establishing Her Majesty's High Court of Justice in that island, and to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our views on the following points:—

That a recent trial for murder before the High Court of Justice had directed the attention of your Lordship to the provisions of the Ordinance which regulated the procedure in capital cases.

That we would observe such cases were tried by a single Judge sitting with not less than two Assessors (section 16). That those Assessors had no voice in the decision and sentence of the Court, though they might record their objections thereto (section 7).

That your Lordship had reason to believe that the power thus vested in a single Judge to decide a capital case was viewed with apprehension by the foreign residents in Cyprus, and your Lordship was disposed to think that the Ordinance should be amended in that respect.

That though trial by jury could not, at all events for the present, be conveniently introduced in Cyprus, provision might be made for the attendance in capital cases of a larger numbers of Assessors, who should decide questions of fact by the majority, a casting vote being reserved to the Judge in case the votes should be equally divided; or provision might be made for increasing the judicial staff and for the trial of capital cases before not less than three professional Judges. That your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our views as to the best mode of dealing with the question.

That the other point to which Sir Julian Pauncefote was to invite our consideration was the following:—

---

* No. 1 of 1878.

That owing to the peculiar circumstances of the island and to the variety of nationalities of which the community was composed perplexing questions not unfrequently arose as to the competency of the various Courts to try cases brought before them. That it had been suggested that it might facilitate the administration of justice if the High Court were to possess the power to exercise a concurrent jurisdiction with all the other Courts in Cyprus (other than the Religious Tribunal mentioned in the Ist Article of the Annex to the Convention of the 4th June, 1878, copy of which was annexed), and whenever it should think fit, to hear and determine any case civil or criminal arising in the island, whether the same be within the jurisdiction conferred by Section 10 of the Ordinance or not, subject to such rules as to the particular law to be administered and as to the adjunction of Ottoman Judges in particular cases, as might seem expedient.

That it was conceived that such a facultative provision would not only be found convenient in solving disputed questions of jurisdiction, but would pave the way to the fusion of all existing jurisdictions in one Supreme Court of Judicature.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would also favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the expediency of increasing the jurisdiction and power of the High Court of Justice to that extent.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Appointment of Assessors objectionable.

Appointment of Judges not native.

Concurrent Jurisdiction.

That in our opinion the appointment of a number of Assessors to decide questions of fact, and of whom a majority, from inexperience or worse reasons, might decide against the opinion of the presiding Judge is objectionable, and we doubt whether it would be desirable to leave the presiding Judge with merely a casting vote in the event of the votes of the Assessors being equally divided. The appointment of three professional Judges for the trial of capital cases would, in our opinion, be a very satisfactory measure. These Judges would, we presume, not be, for the present at least, natives, and, in our opinion, the High Court of Justice may with advantage possess the power to exercise a concurrent jurisdiction with all other Courts in Cyprus other than the Religious Tribunal referred to.

Sawas case. Power of High Commissioner as to commutation of sentence of death.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd May instant, stating that he had to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the papers noted in the margin* relating to the case of a Greek subject, named Sawas, who was recently tried before the competent Turkish Court in Cyprus for the murder of an Ottoman subject, and was found guilty and sentenced to death. That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to invite our attention, in the first place, to the Reports of our predecessors of the 29th December, the 16th January, and the 11th February last, from which we would observe that Sawas was originally convicted of the above crime before Her Majesty's High Court of Justice, established in the island under Ordinance No. 1 of 1878, and sentenced to death; but doubts having arisen as to the jurisdiction of the Court in such a case, having regard to the nationality of the parties and to the terms of Sections 10 and 108(c) of the Ordinance, the question was referred to the Law Officers of the Crown, who reported against the jurisdiction of the Court, and advised that the proceedings in the case were null and void, and that the prisoner should be handed over to the proper Ottoman Court for trial.

That that course having been followed, the prisoner had been tried before the last-mentioned Court, found guilty, and sentenced to death; and Her Majesty's High Commissioner, being desirous to commute the sentence to imprisonment for life, had applied for advice as to whether he had legal power to effect such commutation under Article 22 of Her Majesty's Order in Council for Cyprus and Article 23 of the Royal

My Lord,

Trial of Sawas Christodoulos. Sentenced to death.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th ultimo, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 31st May last, he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the papers relating to the case of Sawas Christodoulos,† who was recently tried in the proper Ottoman Court in Cyprus for the murder of an Ottoman subject, and, having been found guilty, was sentenced to death.

That the prisoner, though born in the Ottoman dominions of Ottoman parents, was claimed as a naturalized Greek subject by the Greek Vice-Consul in Cyprus, and, in consequence of his intervention in that case from the commencement, the High Commissioner applied to the Foreign Office for instructions as to how he should deal with the question of Sawas' nationality, and with the claim of the Greek Vice-Consul to take part in the trial in the manner prescribed by the Capitulations in cases where Greek subjects were concerned. That, with regard to those points, it was considered that, in the first place, the onus fell on the prisoner of showing that he was released by law or Treaty from his allegiance to Turkey, his country of origin, before he could be allowed to claim Greek nationality before a Turkish Court; and, in the next place, that even if he should establish such claim, the right of intervention in the trial, claimed by the Greek Vice-Consul under the Capitulations, could not properly be conceded to him under the present Administration of Cyprus.

That, accordingly, instructions to that effect were sent to the High Commissioner in the Foreign Office despatch No. 126 of the 16th March, 1880, to which Sir Julian Pauncefote was to invite our attention.

Complaint of Greek Minister in London, who urges annulment of sentence.

That we should perceive from the correspondence transmitted in General Biddulph's despatch No. 217 of the 18th May, and from the Report of the proceedings at the trial contained in his despatch No. 227 of the 25th May, that the above instructions were strictly followed, and that, although no evidence was adduced at the trial in support of the prisoner's claim to Greek nationality, the Greek Vice-Consul was allowed all the facilities which could have been extended to him under those instructions if Sawas had been entitled to be dealt with as a Greek subject. That on the 21st May, however, the Greek Minister in London, M. Contostavlos, addressed a letter to your Lordship, complaining that the proceedings on that trial were irregular, and urging that the sentence should be annulled.

That drafts of a reply to the Greek Minister, and of a despatch to General Biddulph approving his proceedings, were inclosed; and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to inform your Lordship whether they met with our approval.

That, on the question of Greek naturalization of Ottoman subjects, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the printed Foreign Office memorandum, which we should find among the papers.

That the Turkish Law of 1869, and the Circular of the Porte, referred to in the draft to the Greek Minister, were printed at pp. 22 and 23 of that memorandum.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Reply to Greek Minister.

That we think it right to point out that the terms of the accompanying draft reply to the Greek Minister may give rise to observation hereafter.

Sawas is denied his claim of being a Hellenic subject by naturalization on the ground that whilst in Cyprus he is in a part of the Ottoman dominions, and thus an admission is made that for some purposes Cyprus is subject to the sovereign power of the Porte.

But in the latter portion of the draft the position is assumed that a Hellenic subject in Cyprus would not be entitled to the benefit which the Capitulations confer on the subjects of that country when within the Ottoman dominions.

We desire, further, to state that we have read the evidence given on the trial of Sawas and the Report of Mr. Bovill, and that we are of opinion that if Sawas had been tried in this country, the verdict would probably have been one of manslaughter.

There seems to be no evidence of premeditation, and the testimony of the witnesses certainly leaves in doubt the events which immediately preceded the blow being struck.

But it is to be observed that, according to the witnesses for the prosecution, who were all of them the companions of the deceased, Sawas and the deceased, after some abusive language had passed, "both got up."

Sentence severe; should be mitigated.

In view of these doubts and of the absence of premeditation, and of the probability that there was considerable provocation, we regard the sentence of imprisonment for life as being very severe, and we suggest that a further mitigation of the sentence is desirable.

Trial of Sawas Christodoulos for murder. As to commutation of sentence to seven years' imprisonment.

That, with reference to the opinion expressed in our Report, that in the circumstances of the case the sentence of imprisonment for life, to which the penalty of death had been commuted, was very severe, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to transmit to us a telegram from Her Majesty's High Commissioner, deprecating any interference at present with the commuted sentence, but that he (Sir Julian Pauncefote) was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what term of imprisonment would be sufficient to meet the justice of the case.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to return to us, for convenience of reference, the papers which had already been before us in connection with that matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we approve of the draft reply, and that the objection of Her Majesty's High Commissioner may be met by allowing the sentence of imprisonment for life to remain for the present, the prisoner to be pardoned at the end of seven years. If this commu-

Draft of Despatch to M. Contostavlos.

Foreign Office, August 17, 1880.

M. le Ministre,

I have received and carefully considered a Report from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus, on the trial and conviction in that island, in the month of May last, of the prisoner Sawas Christodoulos for the crime of murder, and I now have the honour to request that you will lay before your Government the following observations in reply to the representations on the subject of the case which you addressed to me by their direction in your letter of the 21st May:

It appears from the High Commissioner's Report that the trial, which took place in the Temyiz Court at Nicosia, was conducted with great care and regularity under the supervision of an English Judge, and that the Vice-Consul of Greece was invited to attend the proceedings. The prisoner was defended by an advocate, and I am assured that there is no foundation whatever for the complaint made to your Government, that the evidence of the Christian witnesses was not duly considered.

One of the members of the Court dissented from the judgment, on the ground that in his opinion there was not sufficient evidence of premeditation to justify a conviction for murder.

I have great pleasure in informing you, M. le Ministre, that Her Majesty's Government, being anxious to give full weight to the doubt which has been raised on this point, have decided to commute the capital sentence passed on the prisoner into one of imprisonment, and I trust that this announcement will be gratifying to your Government, and will dispose satisfactorily of the case.

My Lord,

Mining leases in. Draft contract.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st July last, stating that by your Lordship's direction he transmitted the accompanying despatch from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus (No. 209), submitting for your Lordship's approval a draft contract for a lease of certain mines in that island.

That in view of the intended transfer of the business connected with Cyprus to the Colonial Office, your Lordship referred Sir R. Biddulph's despatch to that Office, and we would see from the inclosed letters* that your Lordship was disposed to think that the granting of mining leases was part of the ordinary administration of the island, which was vested in the Queen by the Convention, and had devolved on the High Commissioner in virtue of the Cyprus Order in Council, but that such power of granting leases must be exercised in accordance with the existing Ottoman law regulating the subject, or of a new law to be passed by the local Legislature established under the Cyprus Order in Council.

That we would observe that the draft contract submitted by Sir R. Biddulph would appear upon the face of it to have been drawn up in the form of an ordinary English mining lease, and not, so far as your Lordship was able to judge, in accordance with the prescriptions of the Ottoman Code respecting mines, which we would find at p. 257 of the accompanying volume.

That on the other hand Lord Kimberley expressed doubts whether, in view of the terms of the Convention of the 4th June, 1878, the Queen had acquired such an interest in the mines of the island as the proposed lease purported to transfer, and if so, his Lordship was disposed to think that an Ordinance of the local Legislature would not meet the difficulty.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose copies of the Convention of the 4th June, 1878; of the additional Agreement respecting legislation (of the 14th August, 1878); of the Order in Council for Cyprus of the 14th September, 1878; and of the Royal Instructions to Her Majesty's High Commissioner; and he was to request us to take those papers into our consideration, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion—

As to right of the High Commissioner to grant a mining lease under the Convention or Agreement with the Porte.

1. As to whether the High Commissioner could, under the provisions of the above-mentioned Convention and Agreement with the Porte, and of Her Majesty's Order in Council, grant a mining lease in the Island of Cyprus.

2. Whether such lease must be in accordance with the existing Ottoman mining laws, or of an Ordinance of the local Legislature, or whether the High Commissioner might, in virtue of clause 20 of the Order in Council, grant a lease on such terms as he might think fit.

3. Whether a lease granted by the High Commissioner, and otherwise good in law, could validly guarantee possession for a period beyond the British occupation of the island, and whether such a lease would be binding on the Ottoman authorities in the event of the administration of the island being retroceded to the Porte; and

4. Whether the draft contract for a lease submitted by Sir R. Biddulph was one which, subject to our opinion on the previous points, we would advise your Lordship to approve.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report that—

1. If the matter rested only on the Convention of the 4th June, 1878, we think it would be very doubtful, having regard to Articles III and IV of the Annex to the Convention, whether the High Commissioner could grant a lease such as that proposed. Our attention has, however, been drawn to the Agreement of the 3rd February, 1879, between Her Majesty and the Sultan (which we presume is still in force and binding upon the contracting Governments), whereby the property and rights reserved to the Sultan by Article IV of the Annex to the Convention of June 1878 are commuted by a fixed annual payment. And we think that, reading this Agreement with the prior Convention, it establishes that all mines in Cyprus which at the date of that Convention belonged to the Ottoman Crown and State may now be disposed of by the British Government of Cyprus. We presume that the mines proposed to be leased fall within this description.

2. We are of opinion that such mines may be leased by the High Commissioner in Her Majesty's name, and on her behalf, under the public seal of the island, pursuant to clause 20 of the Order in Council. No greater rights, however, as regards third parties, can be given by such a lease than could have been given by the Sultan prior to the Convention, and any rights acquired under the lease must be held and enjoyed subject to all the limitations and restrictions in favour of third persons which are imposed by the Ottoman law now existing in Cyprus.

3. We think that the lease cannot validly guarantee possession for a period beyond the British occupation of the island, and that it would not be binding on the Ottoman authorities in the event of the administration of the island being retroceded to the Porte, though, of course, when the British occupation comes to an end, Treaty stipulations might be made confirming leases granted by the British Government.

4. We think it would be well that the lease should recite the Agreements with the Porte of the 4th June, 1878, and the 3rd February, 1879, and Article 20 of the Order in Council, so that the title of the Government to make the grant should appear on the face of it. And it should be in the form prescribed by Article 20, which it is not at present. We think, too, it should provide that nothing therein should diminish or affect the rights possessed by any persons under the existing laws of the Island of Cyprus.

Marriages between British subjects, not being Roman Catholics.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 10th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a despatch* from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus asking in what manner marriages between British subjects not being Roman Catholics could be legally celebrated in that island.

That he was to state that a Marriage Ordinance for Cyprus was in course of preparation in this country, but that in the meantime your Lordship presumed that the marriage of British subjects in Cyprus by an English clergyman according to the rites of the Church of England would be valid, on the ground that British subjects in a Mahommedan country carried with them the common law right of being married by any person in holy orders (Lantour v. Teesdale, 8 Taunton, 880).

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to inclose a copy of a Report of the Law Officers of the Crown of the 13th November, 1862, on the legality of marriages of British subjects so solemnized in Turkey, and that he was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether General Biddulph's letter might be answered in the sense proposed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Are valid, if solemnized by a clergyman according to the rites of the Church of England.

That, in consequence of the state of government now existing in Cyprus, we consider that General Biddulph's inquiry may be answered by stating simply that the marriage of British subjects in Cyprus by a clergyman according to the rites of the Church of England will be valid, and that no reference should be made to the fact that Cyprus is or may be a Mahommedan country.

Action brought by Messrs. Mucci against Government of Cyprus for an alleged breach of contract in case of the supply of eucalyptus trees.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 14th September last, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's High Commissioner in Cyprus forwarding correspondence respecting an action which had been brought in the High Court of Justice against the Government of the island by Messrs. Mucci for an alleged breach of contract in regard to a contract for the supply of eucalyptus trees.†

That the case had been adjourned in order to take the evidence of Mr. Wild, a member of the Forest Department in India, and, in the meantime, the High Commissioner had applied for advice as to the measure of the liability of the Government in respect of that claim, and also as to their liability under a second contract to which Sir Julian Pauncefote afterwards referred.

That General Biddulph's letter contained copies of the two contracts (Inclosures 2 and 3), and of the correspondence relating thereto (Inclosure 4), and also the two Reports by Mr. Bovill, the Assistant Legal Adviser of the Cyprus Government (Inclosures 1 and 5).

That, as regarded the first contract (Inclosure 2), which formed the subject of the present suit, we were referred to Colonel Maquay's Report of the 26th March, 1879, and also to his letter to Messrs. Mucci of the 27th March, 1879, and to their reply of the 30th April following (Inclosure 4, i. and j.).

That the Cyprus Government declined to pay for the plants, on the ground that Messrs. Mucci failed to execute the agreement—

1. By not having got 10,000 plants into the ground by the 15th March.
2. In having supplied many plants under one year old.

---

* No. 343.

† Sir R. Biddulph, No. 167; To Colonial Office, August 10: Colonial Office, August 24; "Hertslet's Treaties" (Turkey); "Turkey No. 36, 1878;" "Cyprus No. 1, 1879;" High Court of Justice Ordinance.

3. In having negligently planted and staked the young trees.

That Messrs. Mucci, in their reply of the 30th April, justify the delay on the ground of the detention of the vessel, carrying the plants, by quarantine.

That, as regarded the condition of the plants, they urged that the plants were examined and passed and accepted without protest, that part payment was made, and that a certain number of trees were injured by improper irrigation, for which injury the Government officials were responsible.

That the only question of law which seemed to arise at present was whether the defence of delay by quarantine could be sustained, not being founded on any stipulation in the contract; that the further question whether such delay had been waived, and whether the other defences set up could prevail, depended, it was presumed, on the evidence which might be forthcoming at the trial.

That, as regarded the second contract (Inclosure 3) for the lease of a nursery ground to Messrs. Mucci, we would observe that on the 13th February Messrs. Mucci were informed by Captain Patten (Inclosure 4, f.) that, as there was not then at the disposal of the Government of Cyprus any land with the requisite supply of water, the contract was cancelled.

That, in their reply of the 16th March (Inclosure 4, i. in g.), Messrs. Mucci declined to treat the contract as cancelled, but expressed their willingness to wait until July for the allotment of land thereunder.

That the decision of the Government, however, was that as Messrs. Mucci had not fulfilled all the terms of the first contract (that now sued upon), the second contract for the nursery ground must be abandoned; and in Colonel Macquay's letter of the 27th March (Inclosure 4, 1 in i.) Messrs. Mucci were informed that, owing to their non-fulfilment of the first contract, the Government would only pay in full for 5,518 trees, and that the second contract would be cancelled.

That that second contract was apparently quite independent of the first, and under its terms it would seem that the Government of Cyprus bound itself, among other things, to purchase annually for six years, at a stipulated price, from 15,000 to 20,000 plants, to be reared for that purpose by Messrs. Mucci, and in the event of the sooner determination of the contract to purchase the plants "at the disposal of the Government for the current year and year following."

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to Mr. Bovill's Report of the 22nd March (Inclosure 1), in which he raised a question on the construction of that contract as regarded the obligation of the Government to purchase the plants, and suggested that the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown should be obtained on that point, and also on the measure of damages recoverable against the Cyprus Government for the non-fulfilment of the contract. That it was presumed that as the land was not actually ascertained and the title of land was not in dispute, no question arose as to the jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice in that case.

That on that point Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the Turkish Law of Real Property of the 18th June, 1867, and the Protocol relating thereto ("Hertslet's Treaties of Trade with Turkey," pp. 73 and 75), and to the High Court of Justice Ordinance, § 10 and § 108.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take all the papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the advice and instructions which should be given to the High Commissioner on the subject of both the contracts above referred to.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the facts placed before us appear to establish that Messrs. Mucci have failed to supply the 10,000 trees, and have therefore so far failed in performing their part of the first contract.

This opinion we form independently of the question of delay caused by quarantine Regulations, since it appears that the 10,000 trees have never been imported, planted, or delivered. The Government, however, are liable for the trees which they have accepted.

How many they may have accepted, the age and condition of the trees or plants, and whether they were negligently planted and staked, are questions of evidence upon which we can give no opinion.

With reference to the second contract, the Vth Article of the Convention of the 4th June, 1878, gave the English Government the right to purchase land compulsorily, and we therefore consider that the Government were bound under their contract to provide the required nursery-ground and cannot now repudiate the contract, but will on action brought be liable in damages for the breach of the second contract.

We should further remark that the two contracts are distinct and separate, and that any supposed failure on the part of Messrs. Mucci under the first contract will not justify the English Government in refusing to perform their part of the second contract.

On the construction of the second contract we differ from the views expressed by Mr. Bovill, and are of opinion that the Government are under an obligation to purchase the plants at the prices scheduled.

The measure of damages, it seems to us, will be the loss of the profits which Messrs. Mucci would have made under their contract.

We would suggest that an attempt should be made to bring all litigation in relation to the two contracts to a termination by paying Messrs. Mucci a fair sum for the trees retained by the Government under the first contract. If such sum cannot be agreed upon, it should be referred to an arbitrator to determine the amount to be paid. If any claim be made under the second contract, a small sum should be paid to Messrs. Mucci in satisfaction of such claim.

My Lord,

Losses sustained by British subjects during negro riots at Ste. Croix in 1878. As to liability of Danish Government.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a memorandum* which had been prepared at the Foreign Office in regard to claims to compensation which had been advanced by British subjects on account of losses suffered by them during the negro riots at Ste. Croix in October 1878, which formed the subject of the accompanying printed correspondence.†

That further memoranda‡ were also inclosed respecting the manner in which claims for compensation on account of riots had been dealt with by Her Majesty's Government when they had been advanced on previous occasions.

That the claims most nearly resembling the present ones seemed to be those arising out of disturbances in Brazil, the circumstances of which were described in Sir E. Hertslet's memorandum of the 17th March.

That in 1867 the Queen's Advocate,§ in reporting on those Brazilian claims, advised that British subjects would only be entitled to compensation if any were granted to Brazilian subjects, and the question now arose whether that rule should be applied to claims which had been put forward by British subjects in respect of the Ste. Croix riots.

Oath of allegiance to Danish Crown imposed on British merchants and others in Danish colonies.

That there was another question which was raised by the correspondence, viz., as to the right of the Danish Government to impose on British subjects the obligation of taking the oath of allegiance to the Danish Crown (whereby they became Danish subjects according to Danish law) as a condition of their being permitted to trade or follow any professional or other avocation in the Danish Colonies. That it would be observed at p. 104 of the printed correspondence that Mr. Macmillan, who had preferred a claim on account of his imprisonment at the time of the riots, was denied the right of British protection on account of his having taken the oath of allegiance to Denmark.

That it appeared to your Lordship that if British subjects were not allowed to trade in Danish Colonies without taking an oath which constituted them Danish subjects, such an arrangement was an infraction of the Vth and XVIIth Articles of the Treaty of 1670 between this country and Denmark,* by which subjects of each country were entitled to reside and trade in the dominions of the other without restriction or limitation.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to observe that the consequences to a British subject of taking the Danish oath of allegiance were very grave, having regard to the provisions of section 18 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, and section 6 of the Naturalization Act of 1870.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we should take the above questions into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have carefully considered the papers transmitted to us.

We are of opinion that the Danish Government cannot properly be made responsible for either the negro riots at Ste. Croix, or the consequences of those riots. And that British subjects are entitled to compensation only in cases of loss arising out of those riots where Danish subjects have, in a similar case, been compensated.

Having regard to the provisions of the Vth and XVIIth Articles of the Treaty of 1670, we are of opinion that the Danish Government has no right to impose on British subjects the obligation of taking the oath of allegiance as a condition of their being permitted to trade or follow any professional or other avocation in the Danish Colonies.

My Lord,

Wild v. Whately. Demand for surrender of a black girl placed in a school to be educated.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 5th January last, stating that a case had arisen in Egypt, in which Mr. Wild, a Swiss, had filed a petition in the British Consular Court at Cairo, praying that Miss Whately, a British subject and manager of the English Mission Schools at Cairo, should be ordered to give up the custody of a black girl whom he had placed at the school at that place to be educated.†

Judicial reforms and Consular jurisdiction.

That Mr. Borg, the Legal British Vice-Consul at Cairo, stated that the case was one that came within the competency of the Reformed Tribunals, on account of the different nationality of the parties; unless the schools which were placed under Miss Whateley's direction continued to be amenable to the jurisdiction of the British Consular Court, in virtue of a special agreement with the Egyptian Government.

That we were aware that, under the Convention respecting judicial reforms in Egypt, signed on the 31st July, 1875,‡ it was agreed that "all or any of the stipulations and reservations contained in the Convention relating to judicial reforms, which was concluded between the French and Egyptian Governments on the 10th day of November, 1874 (copy of which Convention was attached to that Agreement), as well as those contained in the Convention concluded between the German and Egyptian Governments on the 5th of May, 1875 (copy of which Convention was likewise annexed to that Agreement), shall be immediately and unconditionally extended by the Egyptian Government to Great Britain and to British subjects, should the British Government at any time express a wish to this effect."

That the correspondence bearing upon the case was forwarded for our information as noted in the margin.*

That we should perceive that in the French and German Conventions, copies of which were annexed to the British Convention of the 31st July, 1875 (print, p. 105) it had been expressly stipulated that the educational establishments placed under the protectorate of France, and the German schools at Cairo and Alexandria, "shall continue to be as heretofore" under the jurisdiction of their respective Consular Courts.

That if the above reservations be extended, mutatis mutandis, to Great Britain, the suit instituted by Mr. Wild against Miss Whately would be properly brought in the British Consular Court at Cairo.

That as yet Her Majesty's Government had not claimed the extension to Great Britain and to British subjects of the stipulations and reservations contained in the French and German Conventions.

That the reason why that claim had been delayed was that the Court of Appeal of Alexandria had decided that, under Article 7 of the French Protocol, foreign Consuls could neither sue nor be sued in the Tribunals of the Reform. That on that point he (Sir Julian Pauncefote) was to refer us to our Report of the 7th November, 1878 ("Correspondence respecting Judicial Reforms in Egypt," Part III, p. 230A), and to the Foreign Office despatch to Mr. Vivian No. 7 of the 8th January, 1879 (Ditto, Part IV, p. 1), the draft of which was submitted to and approved by us in our Report of the 31st December, 1878, inclosed therewith.

That your Lordship would now be glad to be favoured with our opinion whether Her Majesty's Government might properly claim the benefit of the stipulations and reservations contained in the French and German Conventions, without prejudice to the right which Her Majesty's Government claimed for the British Consular officers in Egypt to institute suits in the Tribunals of the Reform, notwithstanding the decision of the Court of Appeal at Alexandria.

That Mr. Malet had been informed that, pending the decision of Her Majesty's Government as to claiming the benefit of the French and German Conventions, Her Majesty's Consular Court at Cairo might properly decline jurisdiction in the suit brought by Mr. Wild, and he had been instructed, in case Mr. Wild should proceed against Miss Whately in the Tribunals of the Reform, to report the fact by telegram.

We were also honoured with a letter from Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated the 5th February instant, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 5th ultimo, he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that a telegram was received on the 28th ultimo† from Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, reporting that Mr. Wild had instructed his lawyer to take proceedings before the Mixed Tribunals against Miss Whately.

That two days later Mr. Malet reported that these proceedings had been abandoned for the present.‡

That in a despatch dated the 26th of last December, inclosed therewith,§ Mr. Malet was informed that, in your Lordship's opinion, the British Legal Vice-Consul in Egypt would be justified in declining to exercise jurisdiction in the case, as Her Majesty's Government had not as yet claimed the benefit, under the Convention of the 31st July, 1875, of the stipulations contained in the Protocol relative to judicial reforms in Egypt which was concluded between France and Egypt on the 10th November, 1874, and in that concluded between Germany and Egypt on the 25th May, 1875.

That we were already in possession of the correspondence upon that question which was referred to us with his letter of the 5th January.

Mr. Scrivenor. Dismissal from appointment of Director-General of Customs in Egypt. Her Majesty's Government may support his claim to be heard.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands, signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 11th instant, stating that he had the honour to forward to us herewith, by direction of your Lordship, correspondence† which had taken place on the subject of the dismissal of Mr. Scrivenor from the appointment of Director-General of Customs in Egypt.

That the grounds upon which that measure was decided upon by the Egyptian Government would be found in three Reports of a Commission appointed to inquire into the management of the Customs, under Mr. Scrivenor, the Director-General, and Mr. Archer Shee, the Inspector-General of that Department. That copies of those three Reports were inclosed in Mr. Malet's despatch No. 671 of the 13th December (print B, pp. 1, 15, and 25‡).

That Mr. Scrivenor had replied at length to the conclusions of the Commission, so far as they are concerned himself, in a paper inclosed in Mr. Malet's despatch No. 703 of the 29th December (print D‡).

That in his other correspondence with Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Cairo, Mr. Scrivenor required from the Egyptian Government the fulfilment of the contract entered into by them with him on the 14th October, 1876, for his appointment as Controller and Inspector of Customs for a period of five years from the 1st November following; and for a period of five years or more, provided he fulfilled his duties in a satisfactory manner, and was not guilty of any flagrant misconduct. That in the event of the Egyptian Government being unwilling so to employ him, Mr. Scrivenor claimed compensation on the basis of the ten years' engagement (print C and D‡).

That Mr. Scrivenor complained that no charges were formulated against him, and no opportunity given him of repelling or disputing the statements which must have induced the Commission to recommend his dismissal (print A, p. 961‡).

That he claimed the official support of Her Majesty's Government in vindicating his rights under his contract (print C, pp. 1 and 2‡) and that Mr. Malet, Her Majesty's Agent and Consul-General at Alexandria, had referred the case to your Lordship for instructions.

Liquidation Commission. Draft of Decree proposed to be issued by Khedive, and Draft of Declaration to be signed by Great Britain, Austria, France, Germany, and Italy, approving the same.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us by direction of your Lordship a draft of a Decree* which it was proposed that the Khedive of Egypt should issue for the institution of an International Commission of Liquidation, together with the draft of a Declaration* to be signed on behalf of the Governments of Great Britain, Germany, Austria, France, and Italy, engaging that they would regard the decisions of the said Commission as binding and without appeal.

That a question had been raised in Parliament whether the decisions of the Commission could be made binding on British subjects, and whether Her Majesty's Government, by accepting the Decree, would render themselves responsible for any loss incurred in consequence by British creditors of the Egyptian Government.

That before dealing with the first point, Sir J. Pauncefote was to submit the following observations, in explanation of the principle on which Her Majesty's Government had proceeded in the negotiations which had taken place on the subject, and of the grounds upon which they conceived that in assenting to the proposed Decree, and in joining with other Powers in the Declaration in question, they would not incur any such responsibility as was suggested.

That the Règlement Organique under which the Tribunals of the Reform were constituted was made by the Khedive, like any other Law, Edict, or Statute of Egypt, by virtue of his legislative and sovereign power. That its force and vigour, and the authority of the Judges, were derived from that power. That what was done by the Powers in 1876 seemed to make that clear (see Memorandum† as to the manner in which the various Governments signified their assent to the establishment of the International Tribunals in Egypt).

That as regarded England, an Order in Council was passed (1st February, 1876) which did not profess to confer any jurisdiction on the Mixed Tribunals, but merely suspended the British Consular jurisdiction in mixed cases, so long as the Mixed Tribunals existed, or until further Order. That it treated them as existing by virtue of Egyptian Law.

That it was true that both before and after the "Règlement" was passed, there were diplomatic arrangements and engagements between the Khedive and the other Powers, binding him diplomatically as to the character and jurisdiction of the Courts.

But that whatever might be his obligations to other Powers, the source and limit of the territorial power of the Courts and Judges was the sovereign authority of the Khedive.

That the Decree establishing a Commission of Liquidation would emanate precisely from the same authority. That the "Projet" was in course of being submitted to all the Powers interested, with a view to obtaining diplomatically their assent or approval thereto, and the Governments of Great Britain, France, Germany, and Austro-Hungary had already signified their assent and approval by undertaking to subscribe the proposed Declaration.

That that proceeding was an act of State, which, it was submitted, could not render the Government of this country answerable for any loss or detriment which might result therefrom to the private interests of British subjects.

---

* See Confidential Print No. 4295, pp. 104 and 105.

† A. W., October 6, 1879.

That as regarded the point whether the decisions of the Commission of Liquidation could be made binding on British subjects, Sir J. Pauncefote was to observe that it was impossible to say, with certainty, what view might be adopted by Judges who were enabled to decide without appeal, but they could not, as Judges, trace their authority to any higher source than the sovereign power of the Khedive, expressed in the "Règlement" under which the Courts were established, a source no higher than that of the Decree of Liquidation which would control the "Règlement."

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would be good enough to take the above observations into consideration with reference to the two points involved in the question raised in Parliament, and that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which might be properly given thereto on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Decisions of Commission cannot be made binding on British creditors by any action of Her Majesty's Government.

That, in our opinion, the decisions of the Commission cannot be made binding on British creditors by any action of the British Government.

For the British Government has not, we consider, the power by an Act of State, and independent of Parliament, to make arrangements binding upon the British creditors of a foreign Government.

The establishment of the Tribunals of Reform depended upon principles entirely different from those upon which the agreement to provide for the payment of the Egyptian debt and the claims of the creditors is based.

Project of Decree adopted by France and England, October 1879.

Commission de Liquidation.

Vu le Rapport de la Commission Supérieure d'Enquête en date du 8 Avril, 1879.

Considérant que le Décret du 6 Avril, 1876, a prorogé l'échéance des dettes du Gouvernement Egyptien en en diminuant l'intérêt et déclaré la nécessité d'arriver à une combinaison financière destinée à régler la dette Egyptienne ;

Considérant que la Commission d'Enquête, par son Rapport en date du 8 Avril, 1879, a reconnu l'impossibilité de faire face actuellement à toutes les échéances des diverses Dettes Consolidées et de liquider intégralement et immédiatement la Dette Non-Consolidée ;

Considérant que la Commission d'Enquête a également reconnu que, pour qu'il puisse être procédé à une répartition équitable des ressources disponibles entre les créanciers du Gouvernement, il faut que la loi de liquidation qui devra être faite soit obligatoire pour tous les créanciers et soit reconnu comme telle par les Tribunaux de la Réforme ;

Considérant que l'Allemagne, l'Autriche-Hongrie, la France, la Grande Bretagne, l'Italie ont déclaré qu'elles acceptaient d'avance la loi qui sera préparée par la Commission constituée en vertu du présent Décret et qu'elles se sont engagées à la porter collectivement à la connaissance des autres Puissances qui ont pris part à l'établissement des Tribunaux Mixtes en Egypte et à les inviter d'y adhérer ;

Décrétons :

Article 1er. Une Commission de Liquidation est instituée. Après avoir examiné l'ensemble de la situation financière et après avoir entendu les observations des parties intéressées, cette Commission préparera, en prenant comme point de départ les conclusions de la Commission Supérieure d'Enquête, et sans modifier les conditions de l'Emprunt Domanial, un projet de loi réglant les relations du Gouvernement ainsi que des Daïras Sanieh et Kassa, avec leurs créanciers, et déterminant les conditions et les formes dans lesquelles devra s'opérer la liquidation de la Dette Non-Consolidée.

1880

Art. 2. La Commission déterminera les ressources qui pourront être mises à la disposition des créanciers des Dettes Consolidée on Non-Consolidée, mais elle devra en premier lieu tenir compte, avec l'assentiment des Contrôleurs, de la nécessité de réserver au Gouvernement la libre disposition des sommes indispensables pour assurer la marche régulière des services publics.

Il lui sera à cet effet donné communication du Budget de l'année pendant laquelle elle exercera ses fonctions, ainsi que de ceux des années antérieures, qui lui seront nécessaires pour se rendre un compte exact des besoins du Trésor Egyptien.

Art. 3. Les Contrôleurs-Généraux fourniront à la Commission, sur sa demande, les documents et explications complémentaires qui seraient de nature à l'éclairer dans l'accomplissement de sa tâche. Elle transmettra par leur entremise soit au Khédive, soit à ses Ministres, les observations qu'elle aurait à leur faire parvenir.

Art. 4. La Commission aura le droit de surveiller, d'accord avec les Contrôleurs-Généraux, la mise en vigueur des dispositions qui auront été arrêtées par elle, et la durée de ses pouvoirs, après la publication du Décret de Liquidation, pourra être prolongée à cet effet pendant un délai qui n'excédera pas trois mois. A l'expiration de ce délai la Commission sera, dans tous les cas, dissoute de plein droit.

Art. 5. La loi qui sera préparée par la Commission sera revêtue de notre sanction et publiée par nous.

Dès sa publication cette loi sera obligatoire et sans appel malgré les dispositions du Règlement d'Organisation Judiciaire et des Codes de la Réforme.

Art. 6. Cette Commission sera nommée par Décret. Elle se composera de deux Commissaires désignés par chacun des Gouvernements de France et de Grande Bretagne, et d'un Commissaire désigné par chacun des Gouvernements d'Allemagne et d'Autriche-Hongrie et d'Italie. Le Gouvernement Egyptien se fera représenter par un Délégué auprès de cette Commission.

Art. 7. Le crédit nécessaire aux travaux de la Commission sera ouvert par nous conformément au Rapport qui nous sera présenté à cet effet par le Président de la Commission.

Draft Declaration.

Considérant que par un Décret en date du 30 Mars, 1878, une Commission Spéciale a été chargée d'ouvrir une enquête sur la situation financière de l'Egypte et de réunir les éléments d'un Règlement Général, et que par un nouveau Décret, dont le texte est ci-joint, Son Altesse le Khédive se propose de constituer une Commission de Liquidation définitive composée de membres Allemands, Austro-Hungrois, Français, Anglais, et Italiens, les Gouvernements d'Allemagne, d'Autriche-Hongrie, de France, de Grande Bretagne, et d'Italie sont convenus de donner leur assentiment au dit Décret.

Les Gouvernements précités s'engagent en conséquence à accepter comme obligatoire et sans appel la décision qui sera rendue, en ce qui concerne les obligations et dettes du Gouvernement Egyptien, ainsi que des Daïras Kassa et Sanieh par la Commission de Liquidation établie en vertu du dit Décret. Ils consentent ainsi à ce que les décisions de la Commission constituée en vertu de ce Décret soient reconnues par les Tribunaux de la Réforme comme une loi obligatoire aussitôt qu'elles auront été publiées officiellement par le Gouvernement de Son Altesse le Khédive.

Les Gouvernements d'Allemagne, d'Autriche-Hongrie, de France, de Grande Bretagne, et d'Italie s'engagent en outre à porter collectivement cette déclaration à la connaissance des Puissances qui ont pris part à l'établissement des Tribunaux Mixtes institués en Egypte et à les inviter à y adhérer.

Wild v. Whately. Approving draft to Mr. Malet.

Temple, March 24, 1880.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Paunceforte's letter of the 1st instant, stating that, with reference to our letter of the 14th ultimo, on the subject of the suit instituted in the Reformed Tribunal at Cairo against Miss Whately, the manager of the English Mission School at that place, he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a draft of a despatch which your Lordship proposed to address to Her Majesty' Agent and Consul-General in Egypt, instructing him to claim, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government and in virtue of the Agreement of the 31st July, 1875, the extension to British subjects of the stipulations and reservations contained in the French and German Conventions annexed to that Agreement, and of any other arrangements which might have been concluded with foreign Powers for a like purpose, reserving, however, the right of British Consular officials to waive their privileges, and to sue or be sued in the Tribunals of the Reform in cases where their official rights and duties are not concerned.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would inform your Lordship at our earliest convenience whether the proposed despatch, in our opinion, was right and proper.

That our letter above mentioned, and the correspondence in regard to the question involved, were inclosed for reference if required.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the proposed despatch is right and proper.

Draft of Despatch to Mr. Malet.

Foreign Office, March , 1880.

Sir,

I have had under my consideration, in conjunction with the Law Officers of the Crown, the question which has arisen out of the summons to appear before the Reformed Tribunal at Cairo, lately served upon Miss Whately, the manager of the English Mission School at that place, and a British subject, on the suit of Mr. Wild, a Swiss.

A telegram was in consequence sent to you on the 15th ultimo, directing you at once to address a note to the Egyptian Government, claiming, by virtue of the Agreement between Great Britain and Egypt of the 31st July, 1875, that the stipulations and reservations which are contained in the French and German Protocols of the 10th November, 1874, and the 5th May, 1875, respecting schools, hospitals, and religious establishments, shall be extended to Great Britain.

By Article 7 of these Protocols it was expressly stipulated, among other things, that the educational establishments placed under the protection of France and the German schools at Cairo and Alexandria "shall continue to be as heretofore" under the jurisdiction of their respective Consular Courts.

The Court of Appeal of Alexandria, as you are probably aware, have decided that, under another provision of the same Article relating to Consuls, the latter could neither sue nor be sued in the Tribunals of the Reform.

Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that the establishment of those Tribunals did not affect the pre-existing rights of foreign Consuls, and, in consequence of the ruling of the Court of Appeal, they decided to defer claiming the benefit of the French and German Protocols until an understanding had been arrived at among the Governments concerned which would remove all doubt as to the power of the Consular officers to waive their privilege, and to sue and be sued in the Tribunals of the Reforms in cases in which their official rights and duties are not concerned.

The case of Wild v. Whately, however, shows that some practical inconveniences may arise from deferring this claim any longer.

I have accordingly to instruct you to claim, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, in virtue of the Agreement of the 31st July, 1875, the extension by the Egyptian Government to Great Britain and to British subjects of all the stipulations and reservations contained in the Convention relating to judicial reforms, which was concluded between the French and Egyptian Governments on the 10th November, 1874, as well as of those contained in the Convention concluded between the German and Egyptian Governments on the 5th May, 1875, with the exception of so much of Article VII of each of those Conventions as declares that "les Agents et Consuls-Généraux, les Consuls, les Vice-Consuls, leurs familles, et toutes les personnes attachées à leur service ne seront pas justiciables des nouveaux Tribunaux, et la

Mr. Felice not entitled, in present instance, to immunity from jurisdiction of Reform Tribunals.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to acknowledge the receipt of our letters of the 5th and 6th instant, reporting on the papers which had been referred to us relating to the action which had been brought against Mr. Felice, the British Consular Agent at Zagazig, in the Mixed Tribunal at Massowah.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote had now the honour to forward to us a despatch amplifying a telegram which was sent to Mr. Malet on the 5th instant,[*] intimating that some doubt existed with regard to the nature of the suit instituted against Mr. Felice, whether it was taken in connection with his Consular functions or in respect of commercial transactions.

That Mr. Malet was also directed to report on the character of the suit brought against M. d'Aubonne, to which reference was made in Mr. Vivian's despatch No. 52 of the 14th February, 1879, inclosed therewith.

That Mr. Malet had replied, in the telegram[†] of which a copy was forwarded for our information, that the suit against Mr. Felice was not connected with his Consular functions, and that M. d'Aubonne was a trader, the matter of the action in which he was concerned having reference to a protested bill over-due.

That we should observe that it was stated in Mr. Vivian's despatch No. 52, that in the opinion of the French Government the Mixed Courts had no jurisdiction over their Consular Agents, whether traders or not, and whatever might be the subject of the suit; but that that view was not supported by the German and Russian Diplomatic Agents in Egypt.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the despatch addressed to Mr. Vivian by the Earl of Derby on the 19th April, 1877,[‡] to enable us to see the form under which Mr. Felice's appointment was sanctioned by the Secretary of State, and that he was to request that we would take those papers into our consideration, together with our previous Reports upon that subject,[§] which were returned therewith, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to any further instructions which should be given to Mr. Malet in the matter.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to observe that as the jurisdiction of the British Consular Courts in Egypt in mixed cases was suspended on the establishment of the Tribunals of the Reform, unless Mr. Felice should be justiciable in the latter in respect of his commercial engagements he should enjoy entire immunity from legal process in respect of a civil claim by an Egyptian subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Mr. Felice is not, in the present instance, in which no official right or duty is involved, entitled to insist upon any immunity from the jurisdiction of the Tribunals of the Reform, and that notwithstanding his appointment by the Secretary of State.

which was tried before Her Majesty's Chief Consular Court for Egypt at Alexandria on the 24th August last.

That the prisoner Paolo Zarb was indicted for murder, and that the jury having found him guilty, sentence of death was recorded by direction of Mr. Cookson, the presiding Judge, in accordance with the provisions of section 269 of Her Majesty's Order in Council of the 12th December, 1873, which further directed that in such cases the documents therein mentioned should be transmitted through the Supreme Court to the Secretary of State "for his direction respecting the punishment to be actually imposed."

That he (Mr. Lister) was to request, in connection with the documents accordingly transmitted in Consul-General Fawcett's despatch No. 60, that we would take into consideration the petition which was inclosed in the letter from the Home Office of the 5th October, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the direction which should be given in that case respecting the punishment to be imposed on Paolo Zarb.

That he was at the same time to draw our attention to the fact that although from a statement in the petition to that effect it appeared that Paolo Zarb was a native of Malta, that his British nationality was not averred in the indictment nor was proved on the trial, nor was it mentioned by Mr. Cookson or by Mr. Fawcett in their respective despatches.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That upon the evidence adduced at the trial and the line of defence then taken by the prisoner's advocate, the crime committed by Zarb is absolutely without palliation and is deserving therefore of the extreme penalty sanctioned by the law.

Inquiry as to facts set out in petition should be made.

But on the other hand, if the facts set out in the petition which is inclosed in the letter from the Home Office be true to the extent that the deceased man Psaila had been guilty of misconduct with Zarb's wife, and that Zarb might fairly draw the inference that an adulterous connection existed between Psaila and his wife, then the crime bears a very different complexion, and though, in law, murder is murder, attended with circumstances of such extreme provocation that the punishment may fairly be reduced in severity.

It is therefore, we think, essential that inquiry should be made whether the allegations in the petition are to any, and what, extent well founded, and that the determination what punishment should be awarded should await the result of such inquiry. It is of course impossible to accept the statements in the petition as necessarily true.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 1st instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to address us again on the subject of the difficulty which had arisen with reference to the "Certificats de Coutume" required on the transfer of French rentes, railway shares, &c.[*]

That the facts of the case were fully set out in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letters to us of the 8th January and 1st July last year, and our Reports thereon of the 20th January and 31st July of the same year. That in the latter Report we expressed our opinion that the Solicitor to the Treasury could not in strictness be invested by the Lords Commissioners with authority to issue "Certificats de Coutume" for the transfer of French stocks and shares, the property of British subjects.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was then to inclose a copy of a Report by M. Treitt, the Counsel to the British Embassy in Paris,* from which we would perceive that the French authorities were bound in that matter by the provisions of the law referred to in paragraph 6. That it would seem to result from M. Treitt's Report that no solution of the difficulty could be found unless some functionary could be invested with legal authority to grant the necessary certificate as to the facts and the law as hitherto done, without such authority by English solicitors.

That that certificate, though usually called a "Certificat de Coutume," was more correctly styled a "Certificat de Propriété," and was so designated by M. Treitt.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was directed by your Lordship to request that we would favour you with our opinion as to whether there would be any objection to the introduction of a Bill empowering the High Court of Judicature to appoint any solicitor to be a Commissioner to take the necessary evidence and grant the certificate required, to the effect that the person claiming the transfer was legally entitled thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Proposed British legislation to meet requirements of French law.

That we see in one sense no objection to the introduction of a Bill for the object in view; but we would point out to your Lordship that the Commissioner will in many cases have difficult questions of title before him, and that the mode and extent of his remuneration will need serious consideration. How far Her Majesty's Government need assist investors in foreign undertakings and in the requirements of such undertakings is for your Lordship's consideration as a matter of expediency.

"Certificats de Coutume." Transfer of French rentes, railway shares, &c.

My Lord, Temple, April 5, 1880.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 22nd ultimo, stating that he had laid before your Lordship our Report of the 12th March last relative to the arrangement proposed for meeting the difficulty which had arisen as to the issue of "Certificats de Coutume" for the transfer of French stocks and shares; and he was directed by your Lordship to submit to us the following suggestions for meeting the difficulties attending the proposed legislation, which were pointed out in our Report—

That as regarded the remuneration to the solicitor appointed a Commissioner under the Act, the Bill might provide that a scale of fees should be fixed by the Judges; and that the solicitors' bill should be liable to taxation by the parties requiring the certificate, who must, of course, pay the cost attending the whole proceeding.

That as regarded questions of difficulty arising in the title of the applicant, the Bill might provide for an application being made in such cases to the Court, and the Court might be empowered to refer the qustions to one of the Conveyancing Counsel of the Court, and on his Report decide whether a certificate might be issued, or whether it should be withheld until the parties had established their rights by a suit. The cost of such proceedings might prove so considerable as to deter British subjects from investing in French funds and railway securities, but in the majority of cases the proposed Act would afford a simple and inexpensive procedure for meeting the requirements of the French law, which at the present time were the cause of great inconvenience to numerous Trustees and executors in this country, and to the persons beneficially interested in the property they had to administer.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was therefore to request us to take the foregoing observations into our consideration, and to favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the provisions above suggested would suffice to meet the difficulties of the case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Proposed Bill will meet some of the difficulties caused by requirements of French law. Suggests that it should be submitted to French Minister of Justice.

That a Bill with the provisions suggested will in our opinion meet some of the difficulties caused by the requirements of French law. We suggest, for your Lordship's consideration, that the draft Bill should be referred to Her Majesty's Ambassador in Paris, that he may obtain the opinion of the Minister of Justice whether the intended provisions will be sufficient.

Mineral oil duties. Messrs. Young's claim against French Government cannot be preferred officially.

My Lord, Temple, July 3, 1880.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 31st May last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the correspondence therewith inclosed respecting the duties on mineral oils imported into France, and to ask our opinion with respect to a claim* preferred against the French Government by Young's Paraffin Light and Mineral Oil Company, on account of the non-execution by France of the stipulations in regard to the mineral oil trade, contained in Article IV of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873.

That the stipulations were given in the Paper No. 1, in the correspondence marked No. 25, Commercial, 1878.

That the papers which more particularly bore on that point in the accompanying printed correspondence were marked in the margin.†

That the scale of duties fixed by the Law of the 29th December, 1873 (p. 7, "Commercial No. 25, 1878"), appeared in the result of its operations to include British refined mineral oils from the French market. That the French Government had virtually admitted that the complaints which have been made to that effect are well founded (Nos. 81, 82, and 142, "Commercial No. 25, 1878").

But that although Her Majesty's Government have continued to remonstrate against the action of the French Government in thus setting aside those stipulations of the Treaty of 1873, no steps had been taken to remedy that state of things.

That Messrs. Young's Company accordingly, in May 1879, called attention to the interruption of their trade with France which had thus ensued, and preferred in consequence a claim to an indemnity of 2,500,000 fr. from the French Government. That we should perceive that that claim was made known to the French Government, and that they were pressed to give attention to that matter. But that, as above observed, nothing had been done to effect a settlement of that long-pending question.

That it would be seen on reference to the Law Officers' Reports of the 15th and 26th May, 1874, that at that time the Law Officers of the Crown were disposed to consider that the course taken by the French Government in respect of those duties was correct, although in the latter Report it was suggested that some person familiar with the manufacture of the oils in question would be better able to advise on the subject.

That, in pursuance of that suggestion, and of the application of the parties interested, Professor Abel was consulted; and it would be seen from his Reports, Nos. 40, 42, 51, 53, 82, and 142, in "the Parliamentary Paper No. 25, Commercial, 1878," that he was of opinion that the complaints of the trade were well founded. That, in consequence of his advice, strong remonstrances had been addressed to the French Government.

That in that state of the case, Sir J. Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship at our early convenience with our opinion whether the claim thus advanced by Messrs. Young was one which Her Majesty's Government should prefer officially; and whether, in that case, the measure of damages insisted on by Messrs. Young and Co. could be properly supported by Her Majesty's Government.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we have anxiously considered these papers.

The IVth Article of the Treaty of July 1873* provides that mineral oils of British origin shall be admitted into France at a customs duty of 5 per cent. And, further, that the said oils shall be likewise subject to the duty of 5 fr. or 8 fr. per 100 kilog. established on crude or refined oils by the Law of the 16th September, 1871, or that which may be hereafter levied on the like oils manufactured in France.

The Article, therefore, in terms provided for a future change in the amount of duty on crude and refined oils, but made no provision for the mode of testing the amount of refined oil which could be obtained from the crude oil.

The French manufacturers and the French Government were not slow in seeing and taking advantage of this omission in the Treaty, and by a "complicated mechanism," established by the Law of December 1873, made a distinction between the duties relating to burning oils, according to whether this oil is presented incorporated with the crude oil or separated from it.

This distinction affected at once the British manufacturer who imported refined oils only, and who, though he might have imported crude oil, and either sold or refined that oil in France, was, it appears from the papers, not in a favourable position for so doing.

The Law of December by this plan and in this manner destroyed the British trade in fact; but, as under the Treaty, the French Government had reserved to itself the power of putting on crude and refined oils manufactured in France any duty, and of subjecting to the same duty the like oils of British origin brought into France, the French Government kept within its right.

The French Government is, in our opinion, justified in maintaining that the Treaty has been in strictness observed, and that the course taken by that Government in respect to the oil duties is literally correct, though the effect undoubtedly was to destroy the advantage intended to be secured to the British manufacturer by the Treaty, and the course taken was one properly the subject of grave remonstrance.

For the reasons given, however, we have arrived at the conclusion that the claim advanced by Messrs. Young is one which the French Government would not entertain, and therefore one that Her Majesty's Government should not prefer officially.

As to liability of Her Majesty's Government for proceeds entrusted to British Consuls.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 15th ultimo, stating that he was to transmit to us therewith correspondence and documents, enumerated in the inclosed list,† relative to the liability of Her Majesty's Government for the proceeds of wrecked vessels which might have been deposited with Her Majesty's Consuls in virtue of the Declaration of the 16th June, 1879, between the British and French Governments.

That, on that point, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the letter of the Board of Trade to the Foreign Office of the 10th December, 1879, and of the Treasury to the Foreign Office of the 28th May, 1880.

That as regarded the question of the liability of Her Majesty's Government for the defalcations of Consular officers in respect of moneys deposited in British Consulates, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer to the accompanying Report of the Law Officers of the Crown of the 23rd June, 1862, and to the Foreign Office Circular of the 24th December, 1875.

That if we should be of opinion that the inquiry should be distinctly answered, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would advise your Lordship as to the exact terms of the reply which should be returned thereto.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we think your Lordship may answer the question contained in the letter from the Committee of Lloyds' of the 26th April somewhat more definitely than in the terms of the accompanying draft, and we beg to suggest a reply in the following terms:—

Proposed reply to Lloyds.

"I am directed by Lord Granville to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th April last, in which you ask for a definite answer to the question whether Her Majesty's Government is liable for the proceeds of salved vessels and cargoes which may in future be handed over in France to Her Britannic Majesty's Consular officers, under the Declaration between Great Britain and France of the 16th June, 1879.

"I am in reply to state to you that in all cases where the articles or merchandise saved or the proceeds of their sale shall have come into or been allowed to remain in the hands of the Consular officers of the Government, at the request or with the permission, or for the convenience of the owners, or of their representative, in preference to themselves taking possession of such salvage or proceeds, there can be no ground for making any claim on the British Government in case of misappropriation by the Consular officers.

"If, however, cases should arise where the owners or their representatives have had no opportunity of themselves receiving the articles or their proceeds, and have not for their own convenience allowed the said articles or proceeds to remain in the hands of the Consular officers, so that those officers have not acted in any way by the permission of, or as agents for, the owners or their representatives, then Earl Granville considers that in case of defalcation by Consular officers acting under the Declaration of the 16th June, 1879, that, without laying down any general rule, consideration should be given to each case as it arises."

Draft Letter to the Secretary, Lloyd's.

Sir, Foreign Office, June , 1880.

I am directed by Earl Granville to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th April last, in which you ask for a definite answer to the question whether Her Majesty's Government is liable for the proceeds of salved vessels and cargoes which may in future be handed over in France to Her Britannic Majesty's Consular officers, under the Declaration between Great Britain and France of the 16th June, 1879.

I am in reply to state to you, that the action or position of Her Majesty's Government in case of defalcations by a public officer with respect to money placed officially in his charge must depend on circumstances, and, in Lord Granville's opinion, there seems to be no sufficient reason why this question should be raised by the Committee with regard to the recent declaration, for under the terms of Articles 2 and 4, the Consul only necessarily intervenes in the absence of the owners or of their Representatives. If the property is abandoned to the Underwriters, the Committee of Lloyds (if and when representing the Underwriters) can appoint their own Agent, either to supersede or act with the master or the next surviving officer; and so long as no special representative is appointed by the owners of the ship or cargo, or of the Underwriters, the master or next surviving officer is the representative of all persons and parties concerned in the venture. The Consul, therefore, will not be called upon under the declaration to supersede the parties interested, with reference to the custody of the property or of its proceeds, except at their own request.

New French Mercantile Marine Bill.

My Lord, Temple, July 23, 1880.

WE are honoured with your [Lordship's] commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 8th July instant, stating that your Lordship would be glad to obtain our opinion with respect to a Bill relative to the Mercantile Marine now before the French Legislature.

Bounties proposed to be given on the construction of vessels in France, and on long voyages made by such vessels.

That the point on which our opinion was more particularly requested was whether the bounties which, under the Bill, would be given on the construction of vessels in France, and on long voyages made by such vessels, were inconsistent with the stipulations of the Commercial Treaties between Great Britain and France.

That the question of the assistance to be afforded by a measure of that nature to the French Mercantile Marine, in its bearing upon the Treaty engagements of France towards this country, was referred to the Law Officers in 1874, when it was first mentioned by the Duc Decazes as a measure in contemplation by the French Government.

That we would perceive that the Law Officers, in their Report of the 7th February of that year, of which a copy was therewith inclosed, were not disposed to think that the then proposed action of the French Government would be necessarily inconsistent with those Treaty engagements.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote inclosed copies of the despatch from Lord Lyons and of the letter from the Board of Trade on which the Law Officers reported in 1874.

That two despatches recently received from Lord Lyons, the former inclosing the Articles of the Bill relative to the Mercantile Marine now before the French Legislature; the second forwarding an extract of a letter from Her Majesty's Consul at Havre, respecting the probable effect of that Bill on British shipping if it became law. Copies of the Treaties of 1860 and 1873 with France were also inclosed.*

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe at the same time that notice was given by the French Government in December 1878 to terminate those Treaties at the end of the following year, and that, by an Agreement made with the French Government last year, they now remain in force for a period not exceeding six months after the new General Tariff, at present under discussion in the French Legislature, had been promulgated.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly, as before stated, to request that we would take the matter into early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the Bill relative to the French Mercantile Marine was in any, and in what, respects inconsistent with the Treaty engagements of France towards this country.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Proposed bounties are not a violation of the Treaties with France, but are opposed to their spirit and intention.

That, in our opinion, the bounties which will be given on the construction of vessels in France, and on long voyages made by such vessels, are not a violation of the stipulations of the Commercial Treaties between Great Britain and France. At the same time, we think it a fair matter of representation that such bounties are contrary to the spirit and intention of those Treaties, and do, in another way, produce the very effect which the stipulations with reference to the import duties are intended to prevent.

Request of French Government for information as to British legislation respecting public Companies and Associations.

My Lord, Temple, October 12, 1880.

WE were honoured with Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th ultimo, stating that it had been represented* to him that the French Government were preparing legislation on the subject of public companies and associations of all kinds—scientific, religious, literary, commercial, and others; and that they were desirous of being supplied by Her Majesty's Government with the text of British legislation on the same subjects.

That the legislation in question consisted of so large a number of Statutes, that the collection of them would be a work of great labour, such as your Lordship's Department could not undertake.

That it appeared to your Lordship that the best plan for the French Government to pursue would be to have a Report drawn up by a professional gentleman; but as the question was a somewhat novel one, and embraced so large a range of subjects, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to the answer which should be returned to the French Government on that subject.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Suggesting reply to be sent to French Government.

That the French Government may properly be informed that the English law on the subject of public Companies and Associations is to be found partly in Acts of Parliament and partly in the common or unwritten law, and is so voluminous, and in many cases so varied, according to the particular Company or Association to which it is applicable, that Her Majesty's Government are unable to furnish the French Government with the text of the British law on those subjects, but that Her Majesty's Government would suggest to the French Government the employment of some person acquainted with the English legislation to draw up and furnish the French Government with a Report upon the subject of public Companies and Associations, and the laws by which they are regulated.

The French Government may also be informed that there are certain recognized text-books, which are regarded as works of authority, dealing with the law having reference to public Companies, a list of which can be furnished to the Representative of the French Government.

Application on behalf of Mrs. A. Turner, for copy of telegram sent to C. W. Turner after his escape from restraint.

My Lord, Temple, November , 1880.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 3rd November instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from Messrs. Laces, Bird, Newton, and Richardson,† reporting the steps they had taken in the interest of their client, Mrs. Anne Turner, in the hope of obtaining a copy of a telegram forwarded to her late son, Mr. Charles W. Turner, at Dieppe, between the 4th and 9th ultimo, that gentleman, as it appeared, having been under restraint in this country for some years, and having escaped to France, and having subsequently died at Rouen on the 13th ultimo.

That it appeared to be the impression of the parties interested in that application that the telegram in question was from a person who aided in the escape of the deceased, and it is represented as being very desirable to fix that person with positive evidence of the fact.

Failure of application to French Government for copy of telegram.

That Messrs. Laces and Co., having failed in their endeavours to obtain a copy of the telegram through the good offices of the British Embassy at Paris, now requested the assistance of the Foreign Office for the same object, which they considered might be obtained by means of an official instruction from the Secretary of State to Her Majesty's Ambassador.

That it appeared, however, to your Lordship, that you would not be justified in instructing Lord Lyons to apply officially for the document unless it were required in the interests of public justice as evidence in a suit, civil or criminal, actually pending; and that, if the object be to establish a criminal charge, the assistance of the Foreign Office should be sought through the Home Office.

That we should see from a Memorandum by the Librarian of the Foreign Office, attached to Messrs. Laces and Co.'s letter, that there did not appear to be any record in that Department of any similar application having been granted by the Secretary of State; and your Lordship would therefore be glad to be informed whether the rule above indicated should be followed in that and in analogous cases.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Course to be pursued.

That, in our opinion, the principle indicated in the Memorandum of Sir Edward Hertslet should be followed in this and in analogous cases. The parties applying may properly be informed that, under the circumstances, your Lordship does not feel justified in complying with the request of Messrs. Laces and Co., and that if criminal proceedings are instituted, and it becomes necessary for the purposes of justice that the copy telegram (which we assume was sent from this country) should be produced, application should be made to the Home Office.

Mineral oil duties. Adhere to opinion that Messrs. Young's claim cannot be preferred officially.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 22nd October last, stating that, with reference to our Report of the 3rd July last, he was directed to transmit to us a further letter from Mr. Fyfe relative to the claim of Young's Paraffin Light and Mineral Oil Company against the French Government on account of the non-execution by France of the stipulations in regard to the mineral oil trade contained in Article IV of the Treaty of the 23rd July 1873, between Great Britain and France.*

That your Lordship was reluctant to trouble us again on a question already so carefully considered, but the importance of it to British trade in its bearing on the interpretation of that Article of the Treaty of the 23rd July, 1873, induced your Lordship to request that we would again take the matter into consideration.

That the draft of the letter which was addressed to Mr. Fyfe on our abovementioned Report of the 3rd July, and the papers on which the Report was founded, were therewith inclosed.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That there is nothing in Mr. Fyfe's letter dated the 8th October, 1880, or in the printed papers forwarded by him, which leads us to change our view already reported to your Lordship.

We are still of opinion that the French Government were acting within the strict letter of the Treaty of 1873 when they made the Customs Laws of December 1873, and that therefore Her Majesty's Government should not prefer Mr. Young's claim for compensation officially.

Mr. Fyfe appears to be under a misapprehension when he states that his claim was presented officially by the late Government. The late Law Officers expressed the same opinion as ourselves with reference to the question submitted to us.

Grant of licenses by the Colonial Office to remove guano from uninhabited islands.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 25th November, 1879, stating that with reference to our Report of the 21st March last, he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the further papers noted in the margin* relative to the licenses or leases granted in Australia, with the sanction of the Colonial Office, to British subjects to remove guano from uninhabited islands.

That the practice followed by the Colonial Office of granting Government leases of guano islands not claimed by Great Britain was somewhat peculiar. That the system was explained in the Colonial Office letter of the 20th January, 1879, which accompanied the previous papers in the case therewith inclosed, and which contained a Memorandum of the Emigration Commissioners, and a copy of the usual form of lease. That that Memorandum proceeded on the assumption that Great Britain claimed sovereignty over the islands leased. That, nevertheless, the grant of such leases was authorized by the Colonial Office, though no such sovereignty was claimed by Great Britain, and the islands were not considered as annexed to the Crown.

That, in our Report of the 21st March, above referred to,† we recommended that in all cases occupation on behalf of Great Britain, shown by clear and positive evidence, and a formal Declaration that the islands were British territory, should precede the granting of any lease or licence.

That this conviction, however, would practically put an end to the working of the guano islands by British subjects, and bearing in mind that the Act of Congress of the United States of the 18th August, 1856, only applied to islands which were discovered by American subjects, and were not occupied by the subjects of any civilized State; and, further, that no foreign Government had hitherto attempted to oust British subjects in the actual occupation of guano islands originally discovered by them, your Lordship had felt reluctant to suggest to the Colonial Office for the present any change in their practice.

That the question, however, of the protection which might be given by Her Majesty's ships to British subjects in the enjoyment of such licenses or leases had been raised by the Colonial Office and by the Admiralty; and Lord Tenterden was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion whether the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships might forcibly prevent subjects of a foreign State from attempting, without authority from their own Government, to remove guano from uninhabited islands discovered by British subjects, and occupied by them under a licence from the British Crown (such occupation being notified by their hoisting the British flag), but not claimed by Her Majesty's Government as part of Her Majesty's dominions.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Opinion as to sovereignty as affected by such licenses,

That we are of opinion that when a licence, in the form adopted under the present system, has been granted by Her Majesty, and the licencee has occupied the island to which the licence applies, and notified his occupation by hoisting the British flag, the island in question becomes part of Her Majesty's dominions, and will remain part of such dominions so long as Her Majesty shall find it expedient to retain the sovereignty thereof.

and right of the licensees to protection from foreign interference

If this view be correct, we think that the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships may forcibly prevent subjects of a foreign State from attempting to remove guano from islands discovered by British subjects, and occupied by them under the circumstances and in manner described in Lord Tenterden's letter.

We have some difficulty in dealing with the phrase "not claimed by Her Majesty," since a lease granted by the Crown is a claim by Her Majesty; but if it is to be assumed that the islands referred to have not been, and are not, claimed by Her Majesty, we think the Commanders of Her Majesty's ships would be justified in forcibly preventing any actual interference by foreigners with the operations of the British subjects, but not in forcibly preventing foreigners removing guano from any part of any island not in the actual occupation of the British subjects.

Answers to Queries respecting Conflicts between British and Foreign Fishermen.

1.—Recent Conflict at Yarmouth.

1. This case did not form the subject of diplomatic representations on the part of Her Majesty's Government to that of France.

The French offenders on their return to the port of Boulogne were prosecuted criminally by the French Government, and the injured parties were referred to the civil Tribunals for the recovery of pecuniary compensation.

2, 3, 4.—Responsibility for Damages.

2, 3, 4. As a general rule, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, the course pursued by the French authorities in the Yarmouth case is right and proper.

5, 6.—Instances which have occurred of such Conflicts.

5, 6. A case occurred in 1857, when Her Majesty's ship "Otter" captured several French vessels which had destroyed English nets, and from which guns were fired and sticks thrown at the English fishermen. These vessels were taken into Berwick, and were fined 5*l*. each.

About the same period another French vessel was captured by a British ship and taken into the Tyne, when the captain was condemned to pay a penalty of 10*l*. and 18*l*. to the master of the English boat.

Another case occurred at Whitby, in September 1865, when some nets belonging to an English fishing boat were damaged by a French fishing boat. On this occasion the offending boat was taken by the English boats, and brought by them into Whitby upon their own responsibility.

A French cruizer protested at Whitby against the conduct of the English fishermen in this case. Explanations, however, were given on the matter, and eventually the master of the French boat delivered up the English nets, and paid 8*l*. or 9*l*. as compensation for the damage done to them.

In 1868 complaints were made of outrages committed by English fishermen upon Dutch fishermen in the North Sea, by destroying the Dutchmen's nets and taking off the fish therein.

Dutch witnesses were brought over to this country, and examined by the Solicitor to the Customs, with a view to steps being taken to punish the offenders. The evidence given, however, was considered as offering but little chance for a conviction, and the prosecution was consequently abandoned.

In 1870–71 further complaints of a similar nature were made by Dutch fishermen of outrages on the part of British fishermen in the North Sea. It appeared, however, that in the absence of the required information it was impossible to move in the matter with any prospect of success. Legal proceedings in this case had accordingly to be dropped, but with a view to prevent a repetition of the outrages, a gun-boat was ordered to the fishing-grounds, and remained there during the fishing season.

At the end of 1871 the attention of Her Majesty's Government was called to an outrage committed by English fishermen upon Dutch fishermen off Camperdown.

Dutch witnesses were brought over to this country, and the offending fisherman was prosecuted at the instance of Her Majesty's Government, tried and convicted for piracy at the Suffolk Assizes in March 1873, and sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment with hard labour.

In August 1879 a public notice was issued by the Board of Trade (of which a copy is annexed), warning British fishermen fishing off the coast of Holland of the consequences of any repetition of such outrages, and setting out in extenso the provisions of section 267 of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854."

7.—Measures adopted by Her Majesty's Government for the Prevention of Conflicts between Fishermen.

7. A copy is inclosed of the "Sea Fisheries' Act, 1868," which contains, in schedule 1, the Convention agreed upon between Her Majesty's Government and that of France; together with copies of the regulations now in force for the lettering, numbering, and registering of British sea-fishing boats. One of the principal objects of the above Convention was to frame rules for the prevention of quarrels between fishermen of the two nations; while the Sea Fisheries Act, and the regulations made thereunder, were intended to provide means for enforcing those rules. It should, however, be mentioned that the Convention has never been put in force between the two countries, and that consequently so much of the Sea Fisheries Act as relates thereto does not apply to French subjects and French vessels.*

Trial of the "Parlement Belge."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 19th instant, stating that he had to transmit to us, by your Lordship's desire, the correspondence and documents noted in the margin† with reference to the difficulty which was apprehended in consequence of the recent Judgment of the High Court of Admiralty in the case of the "Parlement Belge," in carrying into effect in Her Majesty's dominions of Article V of the Postal Convention with France, and Article VI of the Postal Convention with Belgium, in cases where the foreign mail packets were not the property of the State by which they were employed, but private vessels chartered or subsidized for their mail service.

Hertslet, January 8, 1879, No. 3863; Postal Convention with France, September 14, 1856; Postal Convention with Belgium, February 17, 1876.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to refer us to the letter from the Foreign Office to the Treasury of the 19th March last for a statement of the grounds on which it had been suggested that the Law Officers of the Crown should be consulted as to the expediency of introducing a Bill in Parliament to meet the difficulty which was apprehended; and Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether such legislation was necessary, and, if so, that we would be good enough to state generally the nature or frame of the provision which we might consider best calculated to carry out the object in view.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was also to draw our attention to the recent case of the French mail packet "Anadyr," at Hong Kong, reported in the Colonial Office letter of the 10th March last, and to previous cases which had occurred in that Colony, of which an account was given at pp. 13—18 of Sir E. Hertslet's printed memorandum on mail packets.

That if we should be of opinion that legislation was necessary in the case of the steamers of the Messageries Maritimes, as held by the Supreme Court of Hong Kong on the authority of the Judgment of the High Court of Admiralty in the case of the "Parlement Belge," your Lordship would be glad to be informed whether, in view of the great traffic carried on by those steamers in Hong Kong, and of the frequent discussions arising there as to their privileges and immunities, we considered that there would be any objection to the immediate passing of a short local Ordinance to secure to them, while within the waters of the Colony, all the privileges and immunities which the Vth Article of the Postal Convention with France purports to confer on them.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Immunity of mail packets. A short Act of Parliament should be passed.

That in our opinion it may be expedient to introduce a Bill in Parliament to meet the difficulty which it is apprehended may be the result of that part of the Judgment of the Admiralty Court in the "Parlement Belge" which was not reversed, and upon which it was not necessary to raise any question in the Court of Appeal.

A short Act giving the power by Order in Council to grant the privileges and immunities of national ships, the property of the Government, to vessels chartered or subsidized by that Government for the conveyance of mails under any postage convention with such Government, will probably be the most convenient way of attaining the object in view.

Vessels of the "Messageries Maritimes."

But, and especially with reference to the vessels belonging to the "Messageries Maritimes," whose business is not so much the carrying of mails as that of general merchant-ships, we desire to call your Lordship's attention to a great practical difficulty, namely, the easy and cheap means of obtaining the advantage of the Postages Convention and Orders in Council for merchant-ships by a slight and nominal payment as a subsidy.

Some arrangement should therefore be made, if possible, to secure that a real and substantial charter or subsidy be entered into or paid by the foreign Government.

An Ordinance might be passed at Hong Kong.

We see no objection to the passing of a local Ordinance at Hong Kong, giving the privileges and immunities of the Vth Article of the Postal Convention with France to the vessels of the "Messageries Maritimes;" but we think that local Ordinance should at first be only temporary, and that the attention of the French Government should be called to the difficulty in which Her Majesty's Government is placed by the decision in the "Parlement Belge," and which difficulty Her Majesty's Government will endeavour to remove by legislation at the earliest moment.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received July 12.)

My Lord,
Temple, July 12, 1880.

Sugar bounties. Proposed imposition of countervailing duties on sugar, the produce of, or coming from, certain foreign countries, such as Austria or France.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Panncefote's letter of the 4th ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to state to us that your Lordship would be glad to ascertain our opinion with respect to a suggestion (in its bearing upon Treaty stipulations) which had been put forward on behalf of the sugar interest in this country. That the suggestion in question was that an import duty should be imposed in this country upon sugar, the produce of or coming from foreign countries where a bounty was, or was alleged to be, obtained on the exportation of sugar, whether raw or refined, in order to "countervail" the said bounty.

That the point upon which our opinion was sought was, whether, apart from considerations of policy, such countervailing duty could be imposed, consistent with the stipulations of the Commercial Treaties between Great Britain and the foreign countries concerned. In other words, whether to impose such countervailing duty on sugar, the produce of or coming from, for example, Austria or France, would constitute an infraction of the most-favoured-nation Article in our Commercial Treaties with Austria or France.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to explain that negotiations with respect to sugar drawbacks had taken place for several years past between different Governments.

That, in 1864, a Convention* for regulating the drawbacks on sugar was entered into between Great Britain, Belgium, France, and the Netherlands, at that time the principal sugar-refining countries.

That that Convention, it would be seen by Article XXI, was concluded for a term of ten years, and it had accordingly now expired.

That its stipulations were, however, never completely carried into effect by France. That the bounty of which complaint was made was obtained, first, from the defective correlation between the excise duty charged on the sugar—raw or refined, as the case might be—and the drawback, viz., the supposed equivalent for such excise duty granted on exportation, and also, to some extent, from the nature of the regulations in force in different countries with respect to manufacturing or refining sugar.

That, in the case of French refined sugar, that defective correlation became more marked on the increase of the sugar duties in France after the Franco-German war of 1870.

That, in the case of Austrian raw sugar, the regulations in force on the subject appeared to fix at a far too low rate the yield of raw sugar to be obtained from a given quantity of beet-root.

That the Government of this country had recognized that that state of things produced a disturbance, in the ordinary course of trade, which was productive of injurious consequences; but that they had hitherto abstained from any fiscal measures with a view to counteract those bounties.

That it would be observed that Article XIX of the Convention of 1864 contemplated the imposition of a surtax on refined sugars with respect to which a bounty was granted on exportation. That Her Majesty's Government had contended, when that Article had been appealed to, that it was permissive in its terms, and that it did not entail any obligation to a particular course of action on this country.

That it did not appear, however, that the opinion of the Law Officers was ever taken on that Convention.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was to add that no specific Treaty engagements had been entered into with respect to raw sugar, and, as before observed, those entered into relative to refined sugar had now expired.

That Sir J. Pauncefote inclosed, for our information and reference, a copy of the Sugar Convention of November 8, 1864, a copy of a Parliamentary Paper (No. 22, Commercial, 1879), containing (1) a memorandum showing what passed in connection with the Convention of 1864 and the subsequent negotiations on the Sugar question; (2) Reports explaining the systems of Sugar duties and drawbacks under which the bounties complained of were obtained; and (3) the most-favoured-nation Articles in our Commercial Treaties with the countries concerned.†

That Sir J. Pauncefote also inclosed a memorandum on the subject of countervailing duties and their bearing on most-favoured-nation stipulations of Treaties, together with a memorandum on the suggested countervailing duties in relation to Commercial Treaties with foreign countries and in connection with the Sugar question.

text was to be found of the Treaties with the several foreign countries, the most-favoured-nation Articles of which were above referred to.

That Sir J. Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would take that subject into our early consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion on the point above submitted to us.

That, in the event of our being of opinion that that countervailing duty could, consistently with the Treaty engagements of this country, be imposed, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would state further—Whether we thought it could be levied as an "all-round" duty at a uniform rate, say, as suggested, of 2l. 4s. per ton; or whether an attempt should be made to ascertain the exact rate of the bounty obtained in each country and on each class of sugar, and the duty be assessed in each case accordingly; and likewise what course it would be open to this country to pursue with respect to certificates of origin and requiring foreign countries to take measures to establish the place of production or manufacture of sugars passing in transit through their territories.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That it is unnecessary to determine whether the most-favoured-nation clause would, in all cases, however expressed, be violated by the imposition of a countervailing duty.

The question before us must depend upon the true construction of the most-favoured-nation clauses in the Treaties with those countries which it is alleged afford a bounty on exported sugar. By the Treaty with Austria of the 5th December, 1876, it is provided that the produce and manufactures of, as well as all goods coming from, Austria-Hungary which are imported into the territories of Her Majesty shall, during the continuance of the Treaty, be treated in the same manner as, and in particular shall be subjected to no higher or other duties than, the produce and goods of any third country the most favoured in this respect.

We think it would clearly be an infraction of this provision if a duty were imposed on sugar imported from Austria-Hungary, whilst sugar imported from any other country was admitted free of duty. There is no stipulation in the Treaty which prohibits Austria from granting bounties on export, or which makes the unequivocal provisions of the Treaty with reference to import duties conditional on her abstaining from doing so.

It is, in our opinion, impossible, on any sound construction of the Treaty, to insist that such a condition can be implied. And this country has, in the absence of any Treaty rights, clearly no power to attempt to interfere with the internal fiscal regulations of any other country.

By the terms of the Treaty with France, that country is to have the benefit of every favour or immunity, every privilege or reduction of Tariff in regard to the importation of merchandise which have been or may be conceded to any foreign nation whatsoever.

This language is somewhat less pointed than that of the Treaty with Austria, but we think that the same construction must be put upon it, and that the same reasoning applies. Indeed, if it be the case that this country cannot, consistently with Treaty engagements, impose a duty on the bounty-fed sugar imported from Austria, whilst no duty is levied upon sugars imported bounty-free, it seems impossible to put any construction on the Treaty with France which should entitle us to impose a duty on sugars receiving bounties imported from that country, whilst sugars imported from Austria, also receiving bounties, are admitted free of duty.

Even if the view we have thus taken be not well-founded, we think it would not be possible, consistently with any rational construction of the Treaties, to contend that an "all-round" duty at a uniform rate could be properly imposed. It must, in any view, be a breach of our Treaty engagements, if, in respect of the imports from either of the countries in question, the so-called countervailing duty exceeds the bounty.

It would be necessary, therefore, to fix duties applicable to each country, which should be in strict correlation with the amount of the bounty received in respect of the sugars on which the duties are imposed. For, whilst it would obviously be a violation of Treaty rights to impose a duty in excess of the bounty, it would equally be so, if the import duty in the case of one country was an equivalent to the bounty, whilst as regards the other country it fell short of that amount.

It would be open to Her Majesty's Government to request foreign Governments to take the necessary steps for affording information as to the place of manufacture of sugars imported into this country.

My Lord,

Temple, August 3, 1880.

Jurisdiction over British subjects and foreigners in native territories in South Africa.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Wingfield's letter of the 28th June last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to invite our attention to the following Acts of Parliament:—

26 & 27 Vict., cap. 35
6 & 7 Vict., cap. 94
28 & 29 Vict., cap. 116
29 & 30 Vict., cap. 87
38 & 39 Vict., cap. 85
41 & 42 Vict., cap. 67

Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843 to 1878, and to request that we would advise your Lordship on the following points:—

That, owing to the increase of population and to the development of trade and intercourse with the natives in the interior of South Africa, consequent upon the acquisition by Her Majesty of the territories now known as Griqualand West and the Transvaal, the provisions of the Act 26 & 27 Vict., cap. 35, were no longer sufficient for dealing with offences committed by British subjects in the native territories adjacent to and to the northward of Her Majesty's possessions in South Africa, and beyond the 25th degree of south latitude. That it had therefore become necessary for your Lordship to consider the best method for extending Her Majesty's jurisdiction so as to meet the case of such offenders.

That similiar powers to those conferred upon the Courts in South Africa by the last-mentioned Acts were conferred upon the Courts of Sierra Leone, Gambia, Gold Coast, and Lagos by the Acts of 24 & 25 Vict., cap. 31, and 34 Vict., cap. 8, and upon the Courts of the Straits Settlements by the Act 37 & 38 Vict., cap. 38.

Proposed extension by Order in Council.

That your Lordship, however, was of opinion that, if practicable, it might be preferable to take advantage of the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, and to proceed by Order in Council, instead of applying to Parliament for an extension of the Act 26 & 27 Vict. cap. 35, and with that object to obtain from the Chiefs of the several tribes Treaties granting to Her Majesty power and jurisdiction within their respective territories, and thereafter by Order in Council under the Act 38 & 39 Vict., cap. 87, to assign to such of the Courts in Her Majesty's possessions in South Africa as she might be advised jurisdiction over offenders in such of the aforesaid territories as might be proper, with such regulations as might be necessary respecting the exercise of the jurisdiction so assigned.

That it had, however, been suggested that, inasmuch as Parliament, by the Act 26 & 27 Vict., cap. 35, had already provided a special mode of dealing with offences in the native territories of South Africa, it was no longer competent to Her Majesty to vary the mode without having recourse to Parliament.

Questions submitted.

That Mr. Wingfield was therefore to request that we would be good enough to favour your Lordship with our opinion—

1. Whether it was competent for Her Majesty to take any steps in that matter except under the sanction of a special Act of Parliament.
2. Whether it was competent to Her Majesty to proceed in the manner above indicated under the powers conferred by the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843 to 1878.
3. Whether it would be lawful in any Order in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts to include a provision empowering the Courts to which jurisdiction was assigned to issue a subpœna to enforce the attendance of a witness resident in the native territories.
4. Whether it was competent to Her Majesty to acquire by Treaty with native Chiefs jurisdiction over persons, subjects of foreign civilized States, resident within the territories of such Chiefs, so as to make such persons amenable to the Courts of Her Majesty's possessions in South Africa.

That Mr. Wingfield was also to request that we would favour your Lordship with any observations that might occur to us generally upon the matter.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report:—

Act unnecessary; may proceed by Order in Council.

That (1 and 2) we are of opinion that the principal objects desired by your Lordship can be obtained without a special Act of Parliament by an Order or Orders in Council under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict., cap. 94), 1865

1880

(28 & 29 Vict., cap. 116), 1866 (29 & 30 Vict., cap. 87), 1878 (41 & 42 Vict., cap. 67), sections 3 and 5, and the Act of 37 & 38 Vict., cap. 27.

Application of Acts of 1863 and 1878.

The South Africa Act of 1863 (26 & 27 Vict., cap. 35) does not appear to us to create any difficulty. It does not extend to the countries north of the 25th degree, to which alone we understand the question to relate, and even if the question relates also to countries south of the 25th degree, we think that the application of the Act of 1878 is not excluded by the Act of 1863, except so far as (if at all) the two Acts are inconsistent.

As to enforced attendance of witnesses.

3. We are of opinion that it is so doubtful whether the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, or any of the Acts mentioned in the Schedule to "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1878," empower Her Majesty to authorize a Court to which jurisdiction is assigned under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts to issue a subpœna to enforce the attendance of a witness resident in the native territories, that we cannot advise that any exercise of such supposed power should be attempted. When such a power is meant to be given, it is given expressly, as in the 23 & 24 Vict., cap. 121 (in which the power is limited to witnesses in other possessions of Her Majesty). But the desired object can, to some extent, be attained by applying the 26 Vict., cap. 20, as authorized by "The Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1878," and issuing a Commission from the Court which desires the evidence to the judicial officer of the native territory to examine British or (with the consent of the native Chief) native witnesses there.

Acquirement of jurisdiction over foreigners.

4. We are of opinion that Her Majesty can, by Treaty with a native Chief, obtain jurisdiction within his territories over subjects of foreign civilized States resident within such territories, but the exercise of any such jurisdiction might be made the ground of diplomatic objection by the civilized State to whose subject it is extended, and it should not, as a rule, be exercised without the concurrence of that State given generally or in the particular case. No such Treaty could give power to Her Majesty to exercise any such jurisdiction beyond the territories of the Chief.

We have, &c.
(Signed) HENRY JAMES.
FARRER HERSCHELL.

But it appears to us that the difficulties in the way of enforcing the request for any such information would be practically insuperable.

Address to which Foreign Office communications should be sent.

THE Attorney-General's Clerk presents his compliments to Sir Julian Pauncefote, and will be much obliged if directions are given for communications, from the Foreign Office to the Law Officers and Dr. Deane, to be left at the Attorney-General's Chambers, or at Dr. Deane's Chambers, in the Temple.

When papers are left with the Attorney-General they are handed to Dr. Deane to draft the Report, and if a communication is left at the Attorney-General's residence, as was the case with the letters of the 29th instant, considerable time elapses before the documents reach Dr. Deane.

My Lord, Temple, October 2, 1880.

As to circumstances under which British subjects can be required to quit the service of a foreign Power.

WE are honoured with your Lordship's directions signified to us in Lord Tenterden's letter, requesting that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the circumstances under which the Queen can legally require Her Majesty's subjects to quit the service of a foreign Power.

In obedience to your Lordship's directions we have the honour to report—

Not required to leave except during war with that Power, or for having contravened provisions of Foreign Enlistment Act.

That, except in cases where the subject of Her Majesty has entered into the service of the foreign Power in contravention of the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, or where Her Majesty is at war with the Power in whose service the subject is, we are not aware of any legal right on the part of the Crown by which Her Majesty's subjects can be required to quit the service of a foreign Power.

Prerogative of the Crown may be exercised to require them to abandon a foreign service.

Her Majesty has, by virtue of the prerogative, the right to require her subjects, by writ under the Privy Seal, to return to this country and to remain here. And by the exercise of this prerogative Her Majesty's subjects might no doubt indirectly be required to abandon a foreign service. But there is no modern instance of the exercise of such prerogative, and it would seem that its exercise was never justified save by the Sovereign requiring the services of the subject in time of war or other grave necessity.

My Lord, House of Lords, December 25, 1880.

Rule of domicile as applied to movable succession and of wills abroad. Submitting proposals and draft Bill made by Mr. Westlake for opinion of Foreign Office.

I AM directed by the Lord Chancellor to state to your Lordship that his attention has been called by Mr. Westlake, Q.C., to the desirableness of legislation on the subject of the rule of domicile as applied to movable succession, and of the solemnities necessary for wills of real and personal estate made out of this country. Mr. Westlake's views (in which the Lord Chancellor generally concurs) will be found clearly explained in the printed paper sent herewith, and he has prepared a draft Bill, with an explanatory Memorandum (also sent), at the Lord Chancellor's request, by which the manner in which he would propose to carry his suggestions into effect will be seen.

The Lord Chancellor would be glad if your Lordship would consider these papers, which his Lordship has also sent to the Colonial and Home Secretaries (as concerning more or less all those Departments), and would favour his Lordship with your opinion thereon; and his Lordship ventures to suggest that it may perhaps be desirable to submit them to the Law Officers for their opinion.

Inclosure 1 in No. 51.

Memorandum by Mr. Westlake on a Bill intituled "An Act to amend the Law relating to Wills, Personal Succession, and Domicile."

SECTION 1. The first is Lord Kingsdown's Act, which is dealt with as after appears. The clauses of the second, which it is intended to repeal, are those for Conventions with foreign Powers as to domicile. The 4th section of the latter Act relates to the administration of the effects of foreigners by their Consuls, and is not intended to be repealed.

Section 2. So far as regards personal estate or movable property, this section re-enacts sections 1 and 2 of Lord Kingsdown's Act, with the following additions and alterations:

1. The testator's allegiance, on which the application depends, is expressed to be that at the time of his death.

2. The form given by the law of the testator's domicile at the date of his will is permitted for wills made in as well as out of the United Kingdom, as in fact results indirectly from section 3 of Lord Kingsdown's Act, and the form given by the law of the testator's allegiance at the same date is also permitted.

3. The form given by the law of the testator's British domicile of origin is permitted for wills made by British subjects not then having any British domicile, instead of for wills made by British subjects out of the United Kingdom; and the form given by the law of the testator's then last British domicile is also permitted.

4. The common law is incorporated. See (4).

So far as concerns real estate or immovable property, this section, besides incorporating the common law by (5), permits the same forms as for personal estate or movable property. The necessity of making a will for one part of their fortune in a different form from that permitted for another part would be a trap for many British subjects, and still more for aliens, who, since the date of Lord Kingsdown's Act, have been allowed to hold English real estate.

Section 3. This re-enacts section 3 of Lord Kingsdown's Act, adding a mention of change of allegiance, and an express limitation to the wills of British subjects relating to personal estate or movable property.

The incorporation of the common law in section 2 of this Bill renders it needless to repeat section 4 of Lord Kingsdown's Act, and section 5 of the same Act is worked into the phraseology of this Bill.

Sections 4 and 5. These substitute allegiance for domicile, as the governing principle for personal or movable successions.

Section 6. For example, a person is born in England of French parents, but has never lived in England, and has consequently never thought of making the declaration of alienage required by the Naturalization Act, 1870. He is French by French law and British by British, but is really a Frenchman to all intents and purposes.

Section 7. This applies to the scheduled British dominions the system of registration of domicile which the second of the Acts above-mentioned, in the clauses which it is intended to repeal, proposed to establish by Conventions with foreign countries. The section is not limited to the purposes of personal or movable succession, because it is plainly expressed that domicile shall not be acquired by mere registration and residence for a year.

Draft of a Bill intituled "An Act to amend the Law relating to Wills, Personal Succession, and Domicile."

WHEREAS the present law of domicile often defeats the just expectations of testators, intestates, and other persons, and causes much and costly litigation:

Be it enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

1. The Statute 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 114, intituled "An Act to amend the law with respect to wills of personal estate made by British subjects," and the first three sections of the Statute 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 121, intituled "An Act to amend the law in relation to the wills and domicile of British subjects dying whilst resident abroad, and of foreign subjects dying whilst resident within Her Majesty's dominions," are hereby repealed.

2. Every will or other testamentary instrument made by a person dying after the passing of this Act, who at the time of his death shall be a British subject, shall, in all Her Majesty's dominions mentioned in the Schedule hereto, be held to be well executed as regards personal estate or movable property;

And every will or other testamentary instrument made by a person dying after the passing of this Act shall be held to be well executed as regards real estate or immovable property situate in any of Her Majesty's dominions mentioned in the schedule hereto;

If the same was made according to the forms required, either—

(1.) By the law in force when the same was made at the place, whether British or foreign, where it was made;
(2.) By the law in force when the same was made either at the place, whether British or foreign, where the testator was then domiciled, or in the State to which he then owed allegiance;
(3.) By the law in force when the same was made in that part, if any, of the British dominions in which the testator, not being then domiciled in the British dominions, was then last domiciled or had his domicile of origin;
(4.) By the law in force at the time of the testator's death at the place, whether British or foreign, where the testator was then domiciled;

Or, in the case of real estate or immovable property,

(5.) By the law of the place where such estate or property is situate; or (6.) By the law which, under Section 5 of this Act, is to govern the execution of the will of the testator, being an alien at the time of his death, as regards his personal or movable succession.

3. So far as regards personal estate or movable property, no will or other testamentary instrument made by any person dying after the passing of this Act, who at the time of his death shall be a British subject, shall, in any of Her Majesty's dominions mentioned in the schedule hereto, be held to be revoked or to have become invalid, nor shall the construction thereof be altered, by reason of any subsequent change of the domicile or allegiance of the person making the same.

4. The personal or movable succession, whether testate or intestate, of every person dying after the passing of this Act, who at the time of his death shall be a British subject, shall in all Her Majesty's dominions mentioned in the schedule hereto, and so far as regards matters other than the execution of his will, be governed by the law of that part of Her Majesty's dominions in which he was domiciled at the time of his death, or, if he was not then domiciled in Her Majesty's dominions, by the law of that part of the same in which he was then last domiciled, to the extent and in the manner to and in which the same has heretofore in the respective scheduled dominions been governed by the law of the place at which the deceased was domiciled at the time of his death.

5. The personal or movable succession, whether testate or intestate, of every person dying after the passing of this Act, who at the time of his death shall be the subject of any foreign State, shall in all Her Majesty's dominions mentioned in the schedule hereto, and both as regards the execution of his will, if any, and in all other respects, be governed by the law of such foreign State, to the extent and in the manner to and in which the same has heretofore in the respective scheduled dominions been governed by the law of the place at which the deceased was domiciled at the time of his death.

6. When any person dying after the passing of this Act shall at the time of his death be both a British subject according to British law, and the subject of some foreign State according to the law of that State, and shall be adherent to that State and not to the British Crown, he shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed to be a subject of such foreign State.

7. No person sui juris, whether a British subject or an alien, shall, after the passing of this Act, be deemed to have acquired for any purpose a domicile in any of Her Majesty's dominions mentioned in the schedule hereto, unless he shall

(1.) Have signed a declaration in writing of his desire to become domiciled in the country or place in question, and deposited the same in the public office mentioned in the said schedule for such country or place; and

(2.) Have resided in such country or place during one year immediately preceding the date for which his domicile is to be determined.

Provided that nothing herein contained shall prejudice any domicile acquired before the passing of this Act, nor shall anything done in pursuance hereof be construed to confer a domicile which would not have been acquired if this Act had not been passed.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received January 19.)

Temple, January 17, 1880.

My Lord,

Exemption of German subjects from service in the militia of the Cape of Good Hope.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 20th October last, stating that on the 23rd May last the German Ambassador at this Court addressed a note to the Marquis of Salisbury protesting against the application to German subjects of a law passed in Cape Colony on the 2nd August, 1878, entitled "The Burgher Force and Levies Act," for the enrolment in the militia of all male inhabitants from 18 to 50 years of age, and requesting that German subjects might be exempted from such service.

A copy of that note was sent to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies on the 3rd June, and was by him forwarded to the Governor of the Cape Colony for a Report thereon.

That that Report had then been received, and was inclosed in the Colonial Office letter of the 20th September, transmitted therewith. That Sir Bartle Frere, in his despatch No. 240 of the 18th August last (Inclosure 1 in the Colonial Office letter), annexed a copy of the opinion given on the question by the Colonial Attorney-General, and expressed his concurrence and that of his Ministers therein.

Burgher Act of 1878 applies only to domiciled foreigners.

That the Colonial Attorney-General pointed out that the law complained of applied only to domiciled foreigners, and that the "Burgher Act" No. 9 of 1878 provided only for the enrolment of the inhabitants of the Colony for its defence, and although service might be required "beyond the borders of the Colony," that service was never intended to be anything more than pursuit of an enemy beyond the borders, or an advance beyond the borders to prevent an invasion of the Colony by outlying native tribes.

That Lord Tenterden was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the papers, as noted in the margin,* relating to that case, and to request that we would take them into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the reply which should be returned to the German Ambassador.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Reply to be returned to Count Münster's protest.

That after referring to Count Münster's letter in the usual manner, he may be answered that the provision in section 17 of the Act in question in reference to the employment of the force beyond the boundaries of the Colony applies simply to those cases in which the pursuit of an invading enemy beyond the borders, or an advance beyond the borders to prevent an invasion of the Colony, may be necessary for the protection of life and property.

That in the event of any German subject resident in Cape Colony being recalled to his own country to perform military duties in Germany, such German subject would be entitled to claim his discharge from the Colonial force and leave the Colony.

Even if it were admitted (which it is not) that German subjects resident in a foreign country have the right to claim their exemption from service in the militia of such country, the circumstances of the Cape Colony and the position of German subjects who, in pursuit of their own interests, have taken up their abode in the Colony, form an exception to such suggested general rule.

The Colony is bordered by, and exposed to, the sudden attacks of barbarous tribes, who, in their mode of warfare, spare neither life nor property, and the German subject resident at the Cape is as much interested in the repulse and defeat of these native tribes as the British subject.

Too high an opinion is felt for the character of those German subjects who may be residing in Cape Colony to believe that they, or the Imperial Government on their behalf, would wish that they and their families and their property should be left to the sole protection of the British, and that they should avail themselves of any general international rule, which is not applicable to the circumstances, in order to avoid a service which may become necessary for the preservation of all, whether British or German.

Draft of Despatch from Earl Granville to Lord Odo Russell.

My Lord, Foreign Office, , 1880.

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's despatch No. 337 of the 29th August, inclosing a Report from Her Majesty's Consul at Bremen respecting the refusal of the Oldenburg Tribunal to transfer $\frac{3}{8}$ shares of the "Gesine" to M. H. Victsch, junior, as purchaser thereof, under a sale effected in this country under a writ of fieri facias in execution of a judgment obtained in England against M. T. K. Warns, the former owner of the shares, and requesting to be furnished with a copy of the English law relating to the enforcement in this country of foreign judgments.

I have to acquaint you, in reply, that there is no Statute law in this country on the subject, but British Law Courts have power, in the exercise of their general jurisdiction, to enforce judgments of foreign Tribunals, and to enforce them on proper proceedings being instituted for that purpose, unless the defendant can impeach them as being contrary to natural justice, or on the ground of the judgment having been irregularly obtained.

Your Excellency should inform the German Government in the above sense, and Her Majesty's Government will be happy to answer any further specific question which may be addressed to them on the subject.

Mr. Ward's despatch is herewith returned.

My Lord, Temple, January 21, 1880.

Mr. Woodley. Import duties on goods said to be lost at sea in the "Adelaide."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 3rd instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith two despatches from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens* relative to a case in which the intervention of Her Majesty's Government had been invoked by a British subject named Woodley against a decision on the part of the Greek Government, ordering him to pay duty upon certain merchandise, his property, which he alleges was lost at sea, but which the Greek Minister of Finance suspects was really landed on the coast and smuggled into the country.

That it would be observed that the real penalty for such an act of smuggling was eight times the amount of the duty, whereas the original duty alone was claimed from Mr. Woodley.

That it would seem that there was a total absence of proof, and that the charge entirely rests on suspicion; nevertheless, it was asserted that the Decree of the Minister of Finance was final.

That it would further be seen that the vessel was insured, but that the Insurance Company had refused to pay the insurance, although they had totally failed in substantiating before the Law Courts a charge of barratry against Mr. Woodley.

That the facts of the case were stated in detail by Mr. Woodley in his letters to Her Majesty's Minister, and in Mr. Corbett's letter to M. Delyanni (Inclosures 1, 2, and 3 in No. 234), and the reply of the Greek Government to Mr. Corbett's representations will be found in No. 261, from which we would perceive that they refuse to give any redress.

That under those circumstances Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would favour your Lordship with our opinion as to what further action, if any, Her Majesty's Government could properly take on behalf of Mr. Woodley.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the question is not whether the ship was lost or not, but whether the cases of tin-plate were taken out of her and smuggled on shore.

In the papers we find no proof of smuggling, and the imposition of one-eighth of the amount which would have been imposed had the goods been proved to have been smuggled, leads to the conclusion that Mr. Woodley has been subjected to a penalty on sheer suspicion.

Mr. Woodley should, in our opinion, take proceedings against the insurance offices in which the goods were insured.

And Her Majesty's Government may properly instruct Mr. Corbett to ask the Hellenic Government to inform him upon what evidence Mr. Woodley was held guilty of smuggling.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to the Marquis of Salisbury.—(Received April 14.)

My Lord, Temple, April 13, 1880.

Mr. Woodley. Import duties on goods said to have been lost at sea in the "Adelaide."

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 24th March last, stating that with reference to our Report of the 21st January last he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us therewith a despatch, with its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Athens,* containing the answer which had been returned by the Greek Government to the representations addressed to them respecting the Ministerial decision imposing on Mr. Woodley the payment of import duty on goods which he declared were lost at sea in the schooner "Adelaide."

That the reply of the Greek Government in that case (Inclosure 2, No. 5) appeared to your Lordship to be most unsatisfactory. It denied that the duty was imposed on mere suspicion that the goods had been landed, and it stated that the Ministerial decision was mainly based on the Judgment of the Court of Arraignment, on the investigation of the charge of barratry.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe, however, that on that investigation the Court of Arraignment (Inclosure 3, No .5) distinctly found that there was no proof of the cargo having been landed, and that although the case might be suspicious as regarded the charge of barratry against the master and crew, the rumours current were based on evidence not inconsistent with their innocence; that the goods were not over insured to such an extent as to account for the supposed barratry; that the suspicions attaching to the case were founded on the following facts, namely, that the captain was a man of bad character; that he was disqualified by ill-health to command a sailing-vessel, all of which was known to Mr. Woodley; that he was loitering about the place where the vessel sank under pretence that the wind was adverse (which was denied by the witness, Alex. Panas); that nothing was saved from the ship, not even the papers, though the crew remained on board two hours at the pumps to pump out the water which was pouring in from a hole.

That it appeared to your Lordship that, even if the above facts should warrant a suspicion that barratry was committed, they afforded no justification whatever for the imposition of duty on the cargo on the ground that it had been surreptitiously landed. That even the witness Panas, "who was looking at the ship," and deposed to the state of the wind on the day in question, did not suggest anything of the kind, and the Ministerial decision, therefore, whether revocable or not, seemed to be based on the vaguest suspicion.

That, under those circumstances, Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request that we would take Mr. Corbett's despatch into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to the further instructions which should be addressed to him in the matter.

That the previous papers* in the case were annexed for convenience of reference.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Suggesting further remonstrance to Greek Government.

That Mr. Corbett may, in our opinion, properly be instructed to inform the Hellenic Government that Her Majesty's Government deeply regrets the answer which has been returned by the Greek Government to the representations addressed to them respecting the Ministerial decision imposing on Mr. Woodley the payment of import duties on goods which were not proved in any legal proceedings, or by any evidence, to have been landed.

That Her Majesty's Government still hopes and expects that the Hellenic Government, considering the extreme injustice of condemning a man to pay a penalty or a Customs duty upon the merest suspicion that certain goods were secretly landed, will reconsider their decision, and return the amount of the penalty or duty inflicted on and paid by Mr. Woodley.

That should this renewed application to the good feeling and sense of justice so often shown by the Hellenic Government be unsuccessful, Her Majesty's Government may be obliged by a strong necessity to consider in what way redress may be obtained for an act of injustice committed against a British subject and the refusal to repair such act of injustice.

Mr. Woodley, if not paid, should sue insurers.

It is not said in Mr. Corbett's despatch whether or no Mr. Woodley has been paid the insurance on the goods alleged to have been landed, or has taken proceedings against the insurers. Should the matter unfortunately become serious by the persistent refusal of the Greek Government, it is obvious that the case of Her Majesty's Government would be prejudiced or strengthened by the issue of the insurance proceedings, and we think Mr. Woodley should be informed that Her Majesty's Government expect him, if he has not been paid, to sue the insurers.

No. 56.

The Law Officers of the Crown and Dr. Deane to Earl Granville.—(Received September 7.)

Temple, September 7, 1880.

My Lord,

Trial of John Martin Ross at Yokohama before the United States' Consul-General for the murder of Robert Kelley, second mate, on board the American merchant-vessel "Bullion" at that port.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd August last, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, the papers noted in the margin† relating to the trial and conviction before the United States' Consul-General at Yokohama, in Japan, of John Martin Ross, a British subject, on the articles of the American merchant-vessel "Bullion," on a charge of having murdered Robert Kelley, the second mate of the "Bullion," on board that vessel while lying in the port of Yokohama on the 9th May last.

That the particulars of that case, which involved an important question of jurisdiction, were set out in Mr. Kennedy's despatch No. 87 and in a Report furnished by Mr. Rennie, Judge of Her Majesty's Court for Japan, which formed Inclosure 2 in Mr. Kennedy's despatch No. 98.

That the prisoner, through his counsel, demurred to the jurisdiction of the United States' Consul-General in the case, and claimed British protection. That, on that demurrer being overruled, Her Majesty's Consul addressed a formal request to the United States' Consul-General for the surrender to him of the prisoner (Inclosure 3 in No. 87). That this request was declined (Inclosure 4 in No. 87).

That the decision of the United States' Consul-General on the objection taken to his jurisdiction formed Inclosure 2 in Mr. Kennedy's despatch No. 87, and that the Judgment and sentence on the trial of Ross would be found in Inclosure 6 of the same despatch.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to invite our attention to the letter addressed by Mr. Kennedy to Mr. Bingham, the United States' Minister in Japan, which formed Inclosure 7 in his despatch No. 87, and to the reply of Mr. Bingham, inclosed in despatch No. 97 (Inclosure 1). That the case had given rise to comments in the local American paper, and that in his despatch No. 105 Mr. Kennedy transmitted an article on the subject from the "Tokio Times."

That the main question appeared to be whether, having regard to the terms of the Treaty between the United States and Japan, the jurisdiction of the United States' Consular Courts in Japan extends to the trial and punishment of offences committed by British subjects serving on board American merchant-vessels in Japanese waters. That Sir Julian was to inclose a copy of the Treaty between the United States and Japan, from which we would perceive that the jurisdiction thereby conferred applied to "Americans committing offences in Japan."

That the United States' Minister, in his letter to Mr. Kennedy (No. 97, Inclosure 1), maintained that the word "Americans," as used in the Treaty, included not only all citizens of the United States of America, but also "all persons whose domicile of origin or adoption is in the United States, and especially all American seamen, of whatever nativity, who have been lawfully engaged and enrolled as such in the merchant or naval service of the United States."

That the opinion of Mr. Bingham was adopted by the United States' Consul-General in the case of Ross, who, having accordingly been tried and found guilty, was sentenced to death; but notice of appeal was given, and execution of the sentence was respited pending a reference to the United States' Government.

That we would observe, from the correspondence and the printed papers annexed, that the same question arose in Japan in 1875 as regarded Consular jurisdiction over British subjects serving on board foreign ships of war (Print 2637), and also in China as regarded men serving on board foreign merchant-vessels in Chinese waters when their nationality differed from that of the vessel to which they belonged (Print 2631).

That, as regarded British subjects serving on board foreign men-of-war, Sir Julian was to refer us to the Report of the Law Officers of the Crown of July 1875, and to the Earl of Derby's instructions to Sir H. Parkes of the 4th September, 1875, at pp. 15 and 17 of Printed Paper 2637 respectively. That, as regarded foreign merchant-vessels, he was to refer us to the Circular of the United States' Consul-General in China, Mr. G. F. Seward, of the 3rd August, 1868 (Print 2631, p. 2), in which an opinion contrary to that of Mr. Bingham was maintained as regarded the extent of the jurisdiction conferred under the words "Americans committing offences;" the same words being used in Article XI of the Treaty between the United States and China, of which a copy was annexed.

That, with reference to that Circular, Sir Julian was to direct our attention to the Reports of the Law Officers of the 30th January and the 19th May, 1875, and to the Earl of Derby's despatch of the 12th July, 1875, referring to the Earl of Clarendon's despatch No. 18 of the 30th October 1869, all of which were printed at pp. 7, 13, 15, and 5 respectively of the printed Paper 2631.

That Sir Julian was to request that we would take all papers in this case into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the United States' Consul-General had either exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction over the case; and, if neither, whether Mr. Kennedy's letter to Mr. Bingham of the 22nd May, 1880 (Inclosure 7 in No. 87), might be approved, and any representations on the subject of this case should be addressed by Her Majesty's Government to that of the United States.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That we are of opinion that the Japanese authorities have not by their Treaty with the United States surrendered their jurisdiction within their own territory and territorial waters, or transferred that jurisdiction to the American Government, except in cases where the citizens or subjects of the United States are concerned.

British subjects entering into the merchant service of a foreign country do not become citizens of that State.

We also consider that a seaman does not become a citizen or subject of the country by entering into and serving in the merchant service of that country.

The distinction between breaches of discipline on board merchant-ships and serious offences, whether committed on shore or on board ships within territorial waters, and the principles of jurisdiction drawn from that distinction, are, in our opinion, properly stated by Mr. Seward in his Circular on Consuler jurisdiction of the 3rd August, 1868.

According to the Treaty between Japan and the United States, the Consul-General of the latter country had no Consular jurisdiction over the British seaman Ross, and a representation might properly be made to that Government.

Mr. Kennedy's letter to Mr. Bingham should be approved.

And we are of opinion that a British subject signing articles and serving on board a United States' merchant-ship, and committing on board that ship, whilst in Japanese waters, a capital offence, as in the case of the seaman Ross, is not an "American committing offences" within the terms of the Treaty between the United States and Japan.

For these reasons, we are of opinion that the United States' Consul-General had neither exclusive nor concurrent jurisdiction over the case; that Mr. Kennedy's letter to Mr. Bingham of the 22nd May, 1880, may be approved; and that, with the view of preventing as far as possible the frequent conflicts of jurisdiction in Japan, Her Majesty's Government may properly address some representation on the subject to the Government of the United States.

Slaves seized on board the "Rokeby" at Bushire in 1877.

My Lord,

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 2nd January ultimo, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying letter from the India Office, dated December 18, 1879, forwarding copy of a despatch, with its inclosures, from the Government of India, relating to certain questions which had arisen in regard to the seizure, in March 1877, of certain slaves found on board the British steamer "Rokeby," in the harbour of Bushire, and their subsequent condemnation by Her Majesty's Consular Court at Muscat.

That the facts of the case and the questions raised by the Government of India were so clearly stated in the printed correspondence annexed, that he had only to request that we would take them into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion thereon.

That volume vi of Aitcheson's Treaties referred to in the last paragraph of the India Office letter accompanied these papers, and, with reference to the case of the slave, Grace, cited in the correspondence, he was to refer us to our Report of the 10th April, 1877.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, Captain Prideaux, acting with the sanction of the Persian authorities, was justified in his search on board the British steam-ship "Rokeby," while lying in Bushire Harbour.

Captain Prideaux would have had no authority to seize and detain the boy, Abdulla, without the intervention of the Persian authorities, and he was justified in obtaining the surrender of Abdulla by and through the intervention of the Persian authorities.

Seizure of slaves owned by foreigners on board a British private ship in a foreign harbour not justifiable.

Captain Clayton was, in our opinion, not justified in seizing the seven slaves owned by foreigners on board a British private vessel lying in a foreign harbour. Such vessel was subject to the jurisdiction of the country within the territory of which she was lying, and the action of Captain Clayton was contrary to the principles and practice of international law.

The proper course for Captain Clayton to have adopted would have been to apply for and obtain the intervention of the Persian authorities.

As to jurisdiction of Muscat Court.

The case, in our opinion, ought not to have been brought before the Muscat Court. We entirely agree with Mr. Phillips that that Court had no jurisdiction at all in the matter.

And supposing the Court to have had jurisdiction, the slaves in respect to whom it was to adjudicate should have been brought before the Court, or at least have been within its local jurisdiction.

A slave does not obtain freedom by going on board a British private ship.

Lastly, we are of opinion that a slave does not absolutely obtain his freedom by having been on board a British private ship, and that if such a slave returns to the country of his master, and where slavery is recognized, Her Majesty's Government could not properly insist upon such slave being liberated or held to be free.

Annex.

Draft of Despatch to Mr. Fenton.

(No. . Commercial.)

Sir, Foreign Office, January , 1880.

I have had under my consideration, in communication with the Law Advisers of the Crown, your despatch No. 69, Commercial, of the 17th ultimo, forwarding a note from Baron de Lynden relative to the course pursued by the authorities at Curaçoa in detaining certain warlike stores which formed part of the cargo of the British steamer "Bolivar."

In reply, I have to observe that Her Majesty's Government do not dispute the right of the Netherlands Government to pass the Law of 1822, requiring munitions of war to be landed for safety, nor their right to pass the Law of 1878 to prohibit the exportation from Curaçoa of munitions of war; but they complain that the provisions of the last-mentioned Law against exportation from Curaçoa should be applied to munitions of war which a foreign ship in transit is compelled to land for safety, which form part of her original cargo, and which upon being returned to the ship on her departure would not constitute an "exportation" in the ordinary mercantile sense of the term, any more than the rest of the cargo which may not have been landed. Such an application of the Law of 1878 must necessarily work the injustice which is complained of in the "Bolivar," and give rise to well-founded reclamations.

Her Majesty's Government, however, observe with satisfaction that the Netherlands Government recognize the justice of their complaint by proposing that in future munitions of war in transit, landed under the Law of 1822, shall not be subject to the operation of the Law of 1878, on production of a Consular certificate setting forth that they had not been shipped from Curaçoa, but from a port of the State represented by the Consul. Her Majesty's Government have no objection to offer to the proposed arrangement for the future, provided the Consular certificate be deemed sufficient if it shows that the munitions were really in transit when landed, and are not being shipped from Curaçoa in the ordinary sense of exportations from that island.

The requirement that the Consul should certify that they were shipped in the country which he represents, is a restriction on the principle conceded, viz., that the conjoint applications of the two laws in question in the case of munitions of war in transitu is inconsistent with international usages and rights in such matters. Subject to the above reservation, Her Majesty's Government accept the arrangement proposed, and they trust that the Netherlands Government will not hesitate to apply it to the case of the "Bolivar," and to satisfy the claim of indemnity which Her Majesty's Government have submitted to their favourable consideration on behalf of the West India and Pacific Steam-ship Company.

Leases granted to two Australian Companies by New South Wales and Netherland Governments to work guano on Ashmore Shoal Islands.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 6th instant, stating that, with reference to the letter which he addressed to us, by direction of your Lordship, on the 25th November, 1879, respecting the grant of leases in Australia to British subjects to remove guano from unoccupied islands, he was to inclose, at the suggestion of Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, some correspondence which had taken place with the Netherlands Minister, showing the views of that Government on the subject.*

That in the case which gave rise to that correspondence, a lease was granted to an Australian Company by the Governor of New South Wales to enable it to work guano on a group of islands known as the Ashmore Shoal Islands, and it was subsequently discovered that a previous Concession had been granted also to an Australian Company by the Government of Netherland India.

That the Netherlands Government, though they do not press a claim to sovereignty over the islands as against a British claim, contend that they could fairly do so if they were disposed, and demand consideration for the Company to which their Concession was granted in compensation for their abandonment of their assumed rights. That the ground upon which their view was based would be found fully stated in the reply from Count Bylandt of the 7th November to the Foreign Office letter of the 11th August, both of which we would find among the accompanying papers.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands, we have the honour to report—

That the conflicting claims of the two Companies have apparently arisen from the mistaken rights of either the British or the Netherlands Government.

The latter Government now waives all right, and the Concession made by that Government consequently is at an end.

Her Majesty's Government is not, in our opinion, strictly called upon to make any compensation to the Company, which has thus lost the right of working the guano, but both Companies being English, some attempt may not improperly be made to effect a compromise between the two Companies.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to observe that the arrangements proposed on the part of the Netherlands Government, as to the production of a Consular certificate in the case of munitions of war in transit, appeared to your Lordship unobjectionable, seeing that the Netherlands Government had yielded the point as to the country of shipment.

That it seemed therefore, in your Lordship's opinion, that the only question then remaining was whether the claim for indemnity in the particular case which raised the discussion [which?] was that of the West India and Pacific Steam-ship Company, should be waived by Her Majesty's Government; and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was accordingly to request that we would favour your Lordship with such observations as we might have to offer on that point.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 4th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying despatch, and its inclosures, from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima,* upon the subject of a Decree issued, on the 6th December last, by the Peruvian Government, closing the port of Iquique to commerce, and prohibiting the exportation from the ports of the Department of Tarapaca of saltpetre, borax, and all other articles.

That your Lordship proposed to approve the note which Mr. St. John had addressed to the Peruvian Government on the subject, but, before doing so, your Lordship would be glad to be favoured with our opinion, especially as the question might become one of great practical importance to British subjects in view of the arrangements about to be made by the Chilean Government with the Peruvian bondholders for the export of guano from the Province of Tarapaca, which was the subject of a separate reference to us of that date.

My Lord,

Detention of coin at Chimbote, in transit from Arica to Panama. Are of opinion that Peruvian authorities were wrong.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter of the 7th December instant, stating that he was directed to transmit to us a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lima,* reporting that permission having been given by the Chilean authorities at Arica for the export of two bags of coin, they were stopped by the Custom-house at the Peruvian port of Chimbote in transit for Panama, when on board the British steamer, in pursuance of an existing law in Peru forbidding the export of money under pain of forfeiture.

That Lord Tenterden was to request that we would consider the matter and inform your Lordship whether we were of opinion that the view taken by Mr. St. John was correct, and whether he should insist on the bags being sent on to Panama without being examined.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That the port of Arica, so long as it is in the occupation of the Chileans, is a Chilean port and not a Peruvian port, and the laws of Chile and not those of Peru prevail there. We are therefore of opinion that Mr. St. John is right in the view which he has taken of the law applicable to the case, and that he should insist on the bags being sent on to Panama without being examined.

Opinion of Dr. Deane.

Is of opinion that Peruvians were right.

I agree that the port of Arica, whilst occupied by the Chileans, was a Chilean and not a Peruvian port, and that the coin was therefore not subject to the laws of Peru, and might lawfully be exported from Arica.

But when that coin was voluntarily brought within Peruvian waters, it, in my opinion, became subject to the laws of Peru, and was therefore properly detained by the Peruvian authorities at Chimbote.

This consideration does not appear to have occurred to Mr. St. John. The Attorney and Solicitor-General are of opinion that the Customs authorities at Chimbote had no right to seize and detain the coin.

With some diffidence I differ from them, and submit my opinion to the consideration of your Lordship.

That that case had formed the subject of previous references to the Law Officers of the Crown, whose Reports thereon would be found at pp. 47, 73, and 118 of the Correspondence;* and the annexed printed Memorandum which accompanied the case laid before them on the 5th September, and which was referred to in the Report of the 6th October (p. 73), contained a brief statement of the facts and references to the most material parts of the correspondence.

That the opinion of the Law Officers contained in their Report of the 4th December, 1879 (p. 118), was communicated to Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon in the Foreign Office despatch No. 48 of the 18th December, 1879 (p. 120), and on the 9th January last Mr. Morier was instructed both by telegram and despatch (Nos. 82 and 83, p. 124) to address representations to the Portuguese Government on the grounds indicated in the Foreign Office despatch No. 48 (p. 120).

That the representations made in pursuance of those instructions to the Portuguese Government by Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon would be found in Mr. Morier's despatch No. 8, Commercial, of the 1st February last (p. 125), and that Sir Julian Pauncefote was to request us to favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether the note addressed by Mr. Morier to Senhor Braamcamp on the 30th January last† should receive the approval of Her Majesty's Government.

That Sir Julian Pauncefote was to add that no reply to the above-mentioned note had yet been received from the Portuguese Government, and that your Lordship would be glad to learn our opinion also as to any further instructions which it might be expedient to address to Mr. Morier on that question.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have taken the above papers into our consideration, and have the honour to report—

That the note addressed by Mr. Morier to Senhor Braamcamp contains within it two principal grounds of complaint.

Agree with Mr. Morier's note with reference to Portuguese assumption of jurisdiction and proceedings of Courts as to sailing rules.

The first cause of complaint is the assumption of jurisdiction by the Portuguese Courts to deal with a suit in personam beyond the limit which could properly appertain to the Portuguese courts. With this part of Mr. Morier's despatch we entirely agree.

The second ground of remonstrance is founded upon the view that the sailing rules have been misinterpreted and misapplied. We think it was both proper and desirable that attention should be called to the extraordinary views put forward during the course of the proceedings in the Portuguese courts with reference to the sailing rules.

But the ultimate decision of the case was not based upon misinterpretation of the rules. And Mr. Morier's despatch is not confined to the subject of the sailing rules, but contains also a most able and minute criticism of the reasoning of the judgment, and the evidence upon which it was founded is ably dissected. We wish to point out to your Lordship that in the absence of any suggestion that either the jury or the Court have acted corruptly or intentionally neglected to perform the duty of arriving at a just conclusion, it is a dangerous precedent for a Minister to submit to criticism and review the decision upon a question of fact of a Tribunal, from whose judgment he sees cause to dissent.

But do not approve of his note in its entirety.

Whilst, therefore, the objection to the jurisdiction of the Portuguese court may well be maintained, and will carry out the object of protesting against the judgment delivered, we doubt the advisability of approving of Mr. Morier's despatch in its entirety.

Protest as to jurisdiction ought to be repeated.

Now that the judgment has become final, we think Mr. Morier may properly be instructed to repeat his protest against the judgment, on the ground that the Portuguese Courts had no jurisdiction, and to urge an early answer from the Portuguese Government.

We have, &c.

Arrest of British subjects, and domiciliary visits made at houses of British subjects at Delagoa Bay.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Lord Tenterden's letter received on the 8th November last, stating that he had the honour to transmit to us, by direction of your Lordship, a printed correspondence* relative to the complaint of certain British subjects at Delagoa Bay (Lorenço Marques) of ill-treatment at the hands of the Portuguese authorities, who were charged with having, in the month of January last, maliciously arrested two of them (Messrs. Menlove and Meikle) on a pretence of their assisting soldiers to desert to the Transvaal; and with having forcibly entered the houses of three other British subjects (Messrs. Cassidy, Thompson, and Williams) in search of evidence, without any probable cause or legal justification whatever.

That the first intimation received at the Foreign Office of those proceedings was contained in a telegram from Mr. Thompson, and from the letters of Mr. Pender and Messrs. Lilley and Wheeler, at pp. 1 and 2 of the Print, Nos. 1 to 4.

That Mr. O'Neill, Her Majesty's Consul at Mozambique, was immediately instructed by telegraph to proceed to Lorenço Marques and furnish a Report on the case.

That Consul O'Neill's Report, with the statements on oath of Menlove and Meikle, would be found at p. 7 (No. 17), and that Lord Tenterden was to refer us also to the Consul's further despatch No. 12 of the 4th February (p. 15, No. 18).

That on receipt of the above despatches, Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon was instructed to represent to the Portuguese Government the complaint made of the ill-treatment of the prisoners in gaol, and of the domiciliary visits; and to express the hope that a strict investigation would be made into the conduct of the Colonial authorities. (Lord Salisbury to Mr. Morier, No. 21, March 24, 1880. Print, p. 16, No. 19.)

That thereupon Mr. Morier addressed to the Portuguese Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the 3rd April, two notes (one of them confidential), copies of which formed the two inclosures in his despatch No. 26 of April 7th (Print, p. 17, No. 20).

That Senhor Braamcamp, whose replies would be found in Mr. Morier's despatch No. 35 of April 26 (Print, p. 21, No. 21), stated that telegraphic instructions had been sent out to Lorenço Marques to institute an inquiry into the proceedings in question. That that was in the month of April last, and that the reply of the Portuguese Government to the complaint of Her Majesty's Government was not received by Mr. Morier until the 23rd August. That on the 9th September it was transmitted to your Lordship by Mr. Morier, together with a copy of Mr. Morier's rejoinder thereto, dated the 9th September (see despatch No. 102, Print, p. 25, No. 30).

That in that despatch Mr. Morier, after recapitulating the general features and incidents of the case, referred to his rejoinder of the 3rd April to Senhor Braamcamp's reply to the complaint of Her Majesty's Government, and urged that the charge against Menlove and Meikle involved the complicity of British officials in the Transvaal, and, therefore, that Her Majesty's Government should insist on a thorough explanation and investigation on that point; and further, that, as it was admitted that the domiciliary visits were ordered and carried out "without the shadow even of a pretext or an excuse," some reparation or apology was due from the Portuguese Government.

That your Lordship felt some hesitation in adopting the conclusions arrived at by Mr. Morier in that case, having regard to the conflicting statements of fact, and to the official declaration of the Portuguese Government, that the domiciliary visits "were carried out with all the legal formalities," from which your Lordship concluded that such visits were warranted by the law of Portugal or of the Colony on the grounds put forward in justification of the proceedings.

That your Lordship would, therefore, be glad to be favoured with our opinion as to whether Mr. Morier's letters to Senhor Braamcamp of the 3rd April (Inclosure 1 in No. 20, p. 18) and of the 9th September (Inclosure 2 in No. 30, p. 28) might be approved; and as to the further action, if any, which should be taken in that matter by Her Majesty's Government.

We are also honoured with a further letter from Lord Tenterden, dated the 25th ultimo, stating that, with reference to his letter of the 6th ultimo,* he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a further despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon upon the subject of the recent arrests of British subjects, and domiciliary visits to their houses by the Portuguese authorities at Lorenço Marques, and that he was to request that we would take that despatch into our consideration, together with the papers then before us.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Approve of Mr. Morier's despatches.

That Mr. Morier's despatch of the 9th November materially alters the aspect of the case, and, taking into consideration the facts stated in it, we think your Lordship may approve Mr. Morier's letters of the 3rd April and 9th September, 1880.

There is no doubt that when residing in a foreign country British subjects are amenable to the laws of that country, as applied to its own subjects, and if the law of the Colony had authorized domiciliary visits, there would have been no just ground for diplomatic remonstrance, unless it could be shown that the law had been oppressively and improperly used against British subjects.

But it now appears, both from the opinion obtained by Mr. Morier and the admission of the Portuguese Minister for the Colonies, that the domiciliary visits were illegal.

Remonstrances and demand for investigation warranted.

Under these circumstances, grave remonstrances and the demand for a strict investigation into the action of the Portuguese authorities in Lorenço Marques were certainly well warranted.

We have, &c.

Jean d'Elie Cernogorcevich's nuncupative will.

My Lord,

WE are honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Mr. Lister's letter of the 9th instant, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us a correspondence† relative to the nuncupative will of Jean d'Elie Cernogorcevich, a native of Bocche de Cattaro, who died during a voyage on board the steam-ship "Mogoutchi," of which vessel he was chief officer;

That the verbal testamentary dispositions of the chief officer were recorded in a declaration of the witnesses in whose presence they were made, and this declaration in writing was deposited at Her Majesty's Consulate-General at Odessa by M. de Antonini, sworn lawyer to the Tribunal of Commerce of that town;

That the original document had been transmitted to this country at the request of Messrs. Ingledew and Ince, solicitors, who stated that it was necessary that the original should be lodged in the Probate Division of the High Court of Justice, as the foundation for the granting of letters of administration (with the document annexed) to an administrator in this country, for the purpose of enabling him to obtain from the Bank of England and to distribute a sum of money belonging to the estate of the deceased;

That Mr. Lister was to request that we would take the inclosed papers into our consideration, and favour your Lordship with our opinion as to whether, under the circumstances, your Lordship would be justified in acceding to Messrs. Ingledew and Ince's request in parting altogether with the custody of the document for the purpose above mentioned.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

That Messrs. Ingledew and Ince do not in any of their letters say on whose behalf they are applying for the delivery of the so-called nuncupative will.

Reply to be returned to Messrs. Ingledew and Ince. No objection to will being deposited in Probate Court.

In our opinion, Messrs. Ingledew and Ince should be requested to state in whose behalf they apply, and if the information given by them on this point is satisfactory, we see no reason why your Lordship should not direct the original paper to be lodged in the Probate Division of the High Court of Justice.

We think this course preferable to giving up the document altogether.

Copyright Convention of July 7, 1857.

WE are honoured with the commands of the Marquis of Salisbury signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 6th ultimo, stating that he was directed by his Lordship to transmit to us a copy of a Convention between Her Majesty and the Queen of Spain for the establishment of international copyright, which was concluded on the 7th July, 1857, and also a copy of the Order in Council* issued under the International Copyright Act to give it effect.

That the second paragraph of Article XIII of the Convention stipulated that it should continue in force for six years from the day on which it may come into operation; and that, if neither party should, twelve months before the expiration of the said period of six years, give notice of its intention to terminate its operation, the Convention should continue in force for a year longer, and so on from year to year, until the expiration of a year's notice from either party for its termination.

That, in virtue of the power conferred by that Article, the Spanish Government, on the 17th February, 1879, gave the year's notice for the termination of the Treaty.

That on the 17th January last, a month prior to the date fixed for the termination of the Treaty, the Spanish Government proposed that its duration should be prolonged for six months from the 17th February last.

That, on the 2nd February, Her Majesty's Government assented to the proposal for prolonging the duration of the Treaty, but suggested that the period of such duration should, in order to allow more time for the negotiation of a new Copyright Treaty, be a year instead of six months.

That no reply to that counter-proposal of Her Majesty's Government was received from the Spanish Government until the 15th March, when the Spanish Minister at this Court informed Lord Salisbury that his Government were willing to prolong the Treaty for a year instead of six months, and that he was ready to sign an instrument to that effect.

That, in the meantime, however, in accordance with the notice of the Spanish Government above referred to, the Treaty expired on the 17th February last, and that the question arose whether it could now be revived and continued by agreement between the two Governments, and if so, whether the existing Order in Council would remain in force and operation so as to give effect to such agreement.

---

* September 24, 1857.

In obedience to the commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter we have the honour to report—

That, in our opinion, the Treaty expired by virtue of the notice given.

Expired by virtue of notice, and cannot be revived.

The prolongation for a period of six months, as proposed by the Spanish Government, was not within the terms of the Treaty, nor was it accepted by the English Government. And the consent of the Spanish Government to prolong the Treaty for another year, not being given till after the expiration of the Treaty, will not now revive it.

Any agreement now come to will not be a revival or continuation of the old Treaty, but will amount to a new one, to carry which into effect a new Order in Council will be necessary.

My Lord,

Mr. Young imprisoned at Fernando Po for shooting a native of Elobey in self-defence.

WE were honoured with your Lordship's commands signified in Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter of the 23rd September last, stating that he was directed by your Lordship to transmit to us the accompanying correspondence* and statement relating to the case of Mr. Young, a British subject, who, for having in self-defence shot a native of Elobey who tried to murder him, had been detained by the Spanish authorities in the Island of Fernando Po for upwards of two years and a-half, a portion of the time as a close prisoner.

That we should perceive that after repeated representations made to the Spanish Government for his release, the Supreme Court of Havana had at last pronounced its decision, declaring him to be innocent, Mr. Young in the meantime having suffered privations which had at times endangered his life.

That, under those circumstances, your Lordship would be glad to be furnished with our opinion as to whether Her Majesty's Government would be justified in demanding compensation of the Spanish Government, on behalf of Mr. Young, for the sufferings inflicted upon him by the delay of justice on the part of their colonial authorities in that case.

In obedience to your Lordship's commands we have the honour to report—

Strongest representations should be made to Spanish Government with a view to obtain compensation, but it cannot be demanded.
